PART IV.

Acts of the Governor General's Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 4th February, 1898, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT NO. III OF 1898.

An Act to provide for the segregation and medical treatment of pauper lepers and the control of lepers following certain callings.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the segregation and medical treatment of pauper lepers and the control of lepers following certain callings; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Lepers Act, 1898.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, inclusive of Upper Burma, British Baluchistan, the Santal Parganas and the Pargana of Spiti ; but

(3) It shall not come into force in any part thereof until the Local Government, as hereinafter provided, has declared it applicable thereto.

(4) The Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, apply this Act or any part thereof to the whole or any portion of the territories for the time being under its administration, and may in like manner amend or cancel any such notification.

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(1) "leper" means any person suffering from any variety of leprosy in whom the process of ulceration has commenced ;

(2) "pauper leper" means a leper—

(a) who publicly solicits alms or exposes or exhibits any sores, wounds, bodily ailment or deformity with the object of exciting charity or of obtaining alms, or

(b) who is at large without any ostensible means of subsistence ;

(3) "leper asylum" means a leper asylum appointed under section 3 ;

(4) "Board" means a Board constituted under section 5 ; and (5) "District Magistrate" includes a Chief Presidency Magistrate.

Appointment of leper asylums by Local Government.

3. The Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint any place to be a leper asylum for the purposes of this Act and specify the local areas from which lepers may be sent to such asylum, and may, in like manner, alter or cancel any such notification.

Appointment of Inspectors of Lepers and Superintendents of Asylums.

4. Subject to any rules which may be made under section 16, the Local Government may appoint any Medical Officer of the Government or other qualified Medical man to be an Inspector of Lepers and any person to be a Superintendent of a Leper Asylum, with such establishment as may, in its opinion, be necessary, and every Inspector or Superintendent so appointed shall be deemed to be a public servant.

Constitution of Board.

5. The Local Government shall constitute for every leper asylum appointed under section 3 a Board consisting of not less than three members, one of whom at least shall be a Medical Officer of the Government.

Arrest of pauper lepers.

6. (1) Within any local area which has been specified under section 3 any police-officer may arrest without a warrant any person who appears to him to be a pauper leper.

(2) Such police-officer shall forthwith take or send the person so arrested to the nearest convenient police-station.

Person arrested how to be dealt with.

7. Every person brought to a police-station under the last foregoing section shall, without unnecessary delay, be taken before an Inspector of Lepers, who,—

(a) if he finds that such person is not a leper within the meaning of section 2, shall give him a certificate in Form A set forth in the schedule, whereupon such person shall be forthwith released from arrest;

(b) if he finds that such person is a leper within the meaning of section 2, shall give to the police-officer, in whose custody the leper is, a certificate in Form B set forth in the schedule, whereupon the leper shall, without unnecessary delay, be taken before a Magistrate having jurisdiction under this Act.

Procedure with regard to pauper lepers.

8. (1) If it appears to any Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class or to any other Magistrate authorised in this behalf by the Local Government, upon the certificate in Form B set forth in the schedule, that any person is a leper, and if it further appears to the Magistrate that the person is a pauper leper, he may, after recording the evidence on the above-mentioned points, and his order thereon, send the pauper leper in charge of a police-officer, together with an order in Form C set forth in the schedule, to a leper asylum, where such leper shall be detained until discharged by order of the Board or the District Magistrate:

Provided that, if the person denies the allegation of leprosy, the Magistrate shall call and examine the Inspector of Lepers, and shall take such further evidence as may be necessary to support or to rebut the allegation that the person is a leper, and may for this purpose adjourn the enquiry from time to time, remanding the person for observation or for other reason to such place as may be convenient, or admitting him to bail:

Provided also that if any friend or relative of any person found to be a pauper leper shall undertake in writing to the satisfaction of the Magistrate that such pauper leper shall be properly taken care of and shall be prevented from publicly begging in any area specified under section 3, the Magistrate, instead of sending the leper to an asylum, may make the leper over to the care of such friend or relative, requiring him, if he thinks fit, to enter into a bond with one or more sureties, to which the provisions of section 514 of the Code of Criminal Procedure shall be applicable. X of 1882.

(2) If the Magistrate finds that such person is not a leper, or that, if a leper, he is not a pauper leper, he shall forthwith discharge him.

Power to prohibit lepers from following certain trades and doing certain acts.

9. (1) The Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, order that no leper shall, within any area specified under section 3,—

(a) personally prepare for sale or sell any article of food or drink or any drugs or clothing intended for human use; or

(b) bathe, wash clothes or take water from any public well or tank debarred by any municipal or local bye-law from use by lepers; or

(c) drive, conduct or ride in any public carriage plying for hire other than a railway carriage; or

(d) exercise any trade or calling which may by such notification be prohibited to lepers.

(2) Any such notification may comprise all or any of the above prohibitions.

(3) Whoever disobeys any order made pursuant to the powers conferred by this section shall be punishable with fine which may extend to twenty rupees:

Provided that, when any person is accused of an offence under this section, the Magistrate before whom he is accused shall cause him to be examined by an Inspector of Lepers, and shall not proceed with the case unless such Inspector furnishes a certificate, in Form B set forth in the schedule, in respect of such person.

Conviction after previous conviction.

10. (1) Whenever any leper who has been convicted of an offence punishable under the last foregoing section is again convicted of any offence punishable under that section, the Magistrate may, in addition to, or in lieu of, any punishment to which such leper may be liable, require him to enter into a bond, with one or more sureties, binding him to depart forthwith from the local area specified under section 3 in which he is, and not to enter that or any other local area so specified until an Inspector of Lepers shall have given him a certificate in Form A set forth in the schedule.

(2) If any such leper fails to furnish any security required under sub section (1), the Magistrate may send him in charge of a police-officer, with an order in Form D set forth in the schedule, to a leper asylum, where such leper shall be detained until discharged by order of the Board or the District Magistrate.

(3) The powers conferred by this section shall only be exercised by a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class.

Penalty on person employing lepers in prohibited trade.

11 Any person who, within any area specified under section 3, knowingly employs a leper in any trade or calling prohibited by order under section 9 shall be punishable with fine which may extend to fifty rupees:

Provided that the alleged leper shall be produced before the Magistrate and the Magistrate shall cause him to be examined by an Inspector of Lepers, and shall not proceed with the case unless such Inspector furnishes a certificate in Form B set forth in the schedule in respect of such alleged leper.

Re-arrest of escaped lepers.

12. Whoever, having been sent to a leper asylum under an order of a Magistrate in Form C or Form D set forth in the schedule, escapes from, or leaves, the asylum without the permission in writing of the Superintendent thereof, may be arrested by any police-officer without a warrant, and upon arrest shall be forthwith taken back to the leper asylum.

Inspection by Board.

13. Two or more members of the Board, one of whom shall be the Medical Officer, shall, once at least in every three months together inspect the leper asylum for which they are constituted, and see and examine (a) every leper therein admitted since the last inspection, together with the order for his admission, and (b), as far as circumstances will permit, every other leper therein, and shall enter in a book to be kept for the purpose any remarks which they may deem proper in regard to the management and condition of the asylum and the lepers therein.

Order of discharge by Board.

14. Any two members of the Board, one of whom shall be the Medical Officer, may at any time, by an order in writing in Form E set forth in the schedule and signed by them, direct the discharge from the leper asylum of any leper detained therein under the provisions of this Act.

Appeals.

15. Any person, other than a pauper leper, in respect of whom an Inspector of Lepers has issued a certificate, in Form B set forth in the schedule, declaring him to be a leper, or has refused to issue a certificate in Form A set forth in the schedule, may appeal against the issue or refusal of any such certificate to such officer as may be appointed by the Local Government in this behalf, and the decision of such officer shall be final.

Power of the Local Government to make rules.

16. The Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, make rules generally for carrying out the purposes of this Act, and in particular—

(a) for the guidance of all or any of the officers discharging any duty under this Act; and

(b) for the management of, and the maintenance of discipline in, a leper asylum.

Power to local authorities to expend funds and appropriate property to asylums.

17. Notwithstanding anything in any enactment with respect to the purposes to which the funds or other property of a local authority may be applied, any local authority may—

(a) establish or maintain, or establish and maintain, or contribute towards the cost of the establishment or maintenance or the establishment and maintenance of, a leper asylum either within or without the local limits of such local authority;

(b) with the previous sanction of the Local Government and subject to such conditions as that Government may prescribe, appropriate any immoveable property vested in, or under the control of, such body, as a site for, or for use as, a leper asylum.

Protection to persons acting bonâ fide under Act.

18. No suit, prosecution or other legal proceeding shall lie against any officer or person in respect of anything in good faith done or intended to be done under, or in pursuance of, the provisions of this Act.

Power to Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal to notify cessation of Bengal Act V of 1895 in certain areas.

19. When any part of this Act has been applied under sub-section (4) of section 1 to the whole or any portion of the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, the Lieutenant-Governor may, by notification in the official Gazette, direct that the whole or any part of the Lepers Act, 1895, shall, except as regards anything done or any offence committed or any fine or penalty incurred or any proceedings commenced, cease to have effect in the portion of the said territories to which this Act has been so applied. PART V.

Bills introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for making Laws and Regulations, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council, and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Indian Penal Code in relation to Extra-territorial Offences was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 4th February 1898 :—

WE, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the Indian Penal Code in relation to Extra-territorial Offences was referred, have considered the Bill with the further amendments in the Penal Code given notice of at the meeting of Council held on the 21st December, 1897, and the papers noted in the list appended, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed thereto.

2. Clause 2.—We have altered Illustration (b) to this clause by making it apply to a Native State in India. We think it is unsafe to attempt to define the status of tribal territory in an illustration.

3. Clause 4.—We have carefully considered the new clause proposed by the Government, and we have inserted it in the Bill with the following amendments :—

(a) For the expression "the Government" we have substituted the phrase "the Government established by law in British India." This restores the language of the Act of 1870. Having regard to the terms of section 17 of the Indian Penal Code, which defines "Government," the omission of the words "established by law in British India" might be held to give an extended meaning to the term "Government," whereas it ought to have exactly the same meaning as in the Act of 1870.

(b) We have altered the term of imprisonment from ten years to three, thus restoring the law of 1870. The term of ten years is provided as an alternative for transportation in sections 121A and 122; but apparently the framers of the Act of 1870, in section 124A, wished to draw a marked distinction between minor offences and offences of a very serious character where transportation would be the only appropriate punishment.

(c) We have omitted the words "or promotes or attempts to promote feelings of enmity or ill-will between different classes of Her Majesty's subjects," and have framed a new clause to deal with the offence thereby indicated. It appears to us that the offence of stirring up class-hatred differs in many important respects from the offence of sedition against the State. It comes more appropriately in the Chapter relating to offences against the public tranquillity. The offence only affects the Government or the State indirectly, and the essence of the offence is that it predisposes classes of the people to action which may disturb the public tranquillity. The fact that this offence is punishable in England as seditious libel is probably due to historical causes, and has nothing to do with logical arrangement.

(d) We have omitted the words "or ill-will" at the conclusion of explanation 1. The expression "all feelings of ill-will" appears to us to be too wide and vague. It is only when feelings of ill-will amount to disloyalty or enmity that they constitute such disaffection as is contemplated by the clause. A certain amount of ill-will may be compatible with genuine loyalty.

(e) We have added explanation 3 to make it clear that criticism on the action of Government is not confined to cases in which it is sought to bring about an alteration of what has been done. For example, suppose the Government make an appointment which is considered objectionable. That appointment may be criticised, although the criticism may not have in view the cancellation of the appointment. We have made consequential amendments in explanation 2 to make the language of the two explanations uniform.

4. Clause 5.—The object of framing this clause has already been detailed. In framing it we have altered the words "enmity or ill-will" into "enmity or hatred," and we have fixed the maximum punishment at two years' imprisonment.

We recommend that the clause when passed should be included in section 196 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, so that offences under it should only be prosecuted under the authority or with the sanction of the Government.

5. Clause 6.—We have inserted the clause proposed by the Government, but we have altered and enlarged the scope of the exception to the clause. No doubt the statements, rumours and reports referred to are of a highly mischievous character, but, having regard to the conditions under which modern journalism and the discussion of public questions are necessarily carried on, we think that, when the statement, rumour or report is published without any criminal intent, it is going too far to require the person who published it to prove its actual truth. To require such proof might be throwing an impossible burden upon him, and it should be sufficient for him to show that he had reasonable grounds for believing it, as, for instance, by showing that he made due inquiry before he published it.

LAKSHMISHWAR SINGH.‡

The 31st January, 1

* I sign subject to the objections embodied in my minute of dissent.

† I think the words "tending to the disturbance of public tranquillity" or words to that effect might be advantageously inserted in section 153A.

‡ Note of dissent appended.

So far as I know, there never has been any serious doubt expressed as to the true meaning of section 124A now in the Penal Code. No difficulty could arise except upon the view that the explanation attached to the section cannot be read along with it as virtually defining the term "disaffection." It has thus become urgent to remove the difficulty interposed by that view. This is best met by throwing the substance of the explanation into the form of a definition as follows:—

"Feelings of disaffection mean all feelings incompatible with a disposition to render obedience to the lawful authority of the Government established by law in British India and to support the lawful authority thereof against unlawful attempts to subvert or resist that authority."

This, which has come from the Defence Association, I suggested in the Committee and the majority were against me. By adding to such a definition provisos such as Mr. Stephen has made part of his section 102 in his "Draft Code," the law will, in my judgment, be elucidated far better than by the proposed explanations, which I am for omitting as a necessary consequence.

The proposed words "hatred, contempt and enmity" are, in my opinion, the very worst that could be chosen. Standing by themselves, they are, in the last degree, vague, misleading and obscure. By giving room for no small amount of fanciful speculation, they cannot fail to prove most hurtful to public interests by spreading a sense of uncertainty and virtually stifling all frank discussion of public questions. I would therefore score out, from the clause now proposed, the words "to bring or attempt to bring into hatred or contempt or". I may also point out that the definition I have recommended would be wide enough to cover all forms of real political hatred, which should be penalised. I very much doubt whether what is proposed in the Bill as contained in these objected words is good or sound law at the present day.

I am for eliminating the penalty of transportation from the section. A study of the history of this section shews how it is a mistake in the section and how the Law Commissioners, who sat on the original Draft Penal Code, criticised it in strong terms. The danger of retaining it has been already once exemplified, and may be, any day, exemplified again and again. The danger lies in its being viewed—as it is too sure to be by not a few—as the maximum, permissible in all cases except where extenuating circumstances or other grounds for leniency exist.

I am opposed to the proposed clause 153A as a dangerous piece of legislation and as being impolitic (among other reasons) by necessitating Government to side with, or to appear to side with, one party as against another. In my humble judgment it will only accentuate the evil which it is meant to remove. Far from healing the differences which still linger, or which now and then come to the surface, it would widen the gap by encouraging insidious men to do mischief in stealth, with the sure hope that the Government would come down on such as openly resented. It would have all the repressive effects which the proposed amendments on 124A cannot fail to have, much to the detriment of undoubted rights and useful work.

In clause 505, as proposed to be altered, I would omit the words "or which is likely to cause" from each of (a), (b) and (c) and substitute the words "and thereby to induce any person" for the words "whereby any person may be induced" in (b). Intent being in this, as in 124A, the essence of the offence, the words which I have objected to must of necessity introduce a world of confusion which might be easily illustrated. They are bound to operate prejudicially to public good. It is perhaps necessary to add, with reference to clause 153A and the changes in 505, that, whereas the prior sanction of Government which is prescribed will be something of a guarantee, it will mostly depend on the strength with which the case is urged by the District Officer; for I fear that, in the face of a strong representation by the latter, the Government would, naturally and perhaps not improperly, hesitate to take upon itself the responsibility of withholding sanction. The mischief of these sections lies not so much in the natural results which will follow, as in the unnatural and exaggerated dread they would undesirably inspire in most cases. In such a result the balance of advantage will not be on the side of the public.

P. ANANDA CHARLU.

I sign the report subject to the following observations:—

1. I think that, in accordance with the opinion of the majority of the Judges of the Calcutta High Court, it should be clearly stated in section 124A that the intention to produce the effects mentioned therein is the basis of the offence. A similar alteration should be made in explanation 2, and after the words "by lawful means" the words "or for the purpose merely of showing that they are erroneous but" should be inserted, and after the word "without" the words "the intention of" should be added. As the High Court has pointed out, comments made for such a purpose and without the intention of exciting hatred or disaffection are legitimate and allowable. Criminal intent is the essence of the law of sedition as it prevails in England. It should be made quite clear that in all prosecutions under sections 124A, 153A and 505, the onus shall lie on the prosecution to prove the intention in the mind of the accused at the time, or at all events to adduce such evidence as to enable the Court reasonably to infer the same from his acts. In this as in all other penal cases the accused is entitled to demand that his guilt shall be fully proved against him by the prosecution beyond all reasonable doubt. I submit that this class of prosecutions should not be exceptionally dealt with, but that they should be called upon to discharge the duties which ordinarily belong to all prosecutions in criminal cases, viz., that the burden of proving the offence lies on them.

2. Having regard to the language of explanation 1 and to recent judicial rulings on the meaning of "disaffection" it seems to me that the words "brings or attempts to bring into hatred or contempt or" are superfluous and may lead to unnecessary difficulties. As regards "hatred" I must confess that I am no better able than is Worcester's Dictionary to distinguish between the meaning of that word and "enmity," the term which is employed in explanation 1. As regards "contempt" the idea conveyed by that word seems to be fully covered by the rest of the section, unless indeed it is desired to give so dangerous an extension to the scope of the section as will enable Government to prosecute to a conviction persons responsible for those cartoons, skits or other comic productions with which newspapers and other periodicals not infrequently try to enliven their readers.

3. I think further that the definition of "disaffection" in explanation 1 to section 124A is far too vague, and would recommend the adoption in its place of some such definition as that suggested by the European and Anglo-Indian Defence Association. I quote it here for the sake of convenience:—"Feelings of disaffection means all feelings incompatible with a disposition to render obedience to the lawful authority of the Government established by law in British India and to support the lawful authority thereof against unlawful attempts to subvert or resist that authority."

4. The remarks I have made in paragraph 1 with regard to the importance of making the intention the basis of the offence contemplated by section 124A apply equally to the offence contemplated by the new section 153A. It should be clearly stated in the section that mens rea is an essential ingredient of the offence under section 153A.

5. Both section 153A and section 505 when passed should be included in section 196 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, so that offenders under them should be prosecuted only under the authority and with the sanction of the Local Government.

6. There is one more point with regard to section 124A which has, I think, been overlooked and which to my mind is of great importance. The section as it stands is far too comprehensive. It appears to me that some attempt should be made to restrict the discretion of Judges in inflicting punishment. For instance, under the proposed section it is quite possible to punish a journalist or a public speaker who is only guilty of using indiscreet language calculated at most to give rise to trifling feelings of irritation. Surely such action on the part of the journalist or the public speaker ought not to be considered as a penal offence. I think there should be some differentiation between the punishment allotted for acts like those mentioned above and for intentional acts of sedition.

No. II.

A Bill to amend the Indian Penal Code.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Indian Penal Code; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Penal Code Amendment Act, 1898; and

(2) It shall come into force at once.

Substitution of new section for section 4, Act XLV, 1860.

2. Section 4 of the Indian Penal Code is hereby repealed, and the following section is substituted therefor, namely:—

Extension of Code to extra-territorial offences.

"4. The provisions of this Code apply also to any offence committed by—

(1) any Native Indian subject of Her Majesty in any place without and beyond British India;

(2) any other British subject within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India;

(3) any servant of the Queen, whether a British subject or not, within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India.

Explanation.—In this section the word 'offence' includes every act committed outside British India which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under this Code.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a coolie, who is a Native Indian subject, commits a murder in Uganda. He can be tried and convicted of murder in any place in British India in which he may be found.

(b) B, a European British subject, commits a murder in Kashmir. He can be tried and convicted of murder in any place in British India in which he may be found.

(c) C, a foreigner who is in the service of the Punjab Government, commits a murder in Jhind. He can be tried and convicted of murder at any place in British India in which he may be found.

(d) D, a British subject living in Indore, instigates E to commit a murder in Bombay. D is guilty of abetting murder."

Abetment in British India of offences outside it.

3. After section 108 of the Indian Penal Code the following section shall be added, namely:—

Abetment in British India of offences outside it

"108A. A person abets an offence within the meaning of this Code who, in British India, abets the commission of any act without and beyond British India which would constitute an offence if committed in British India.

Illustration.

A, in British India, instigates B, a foreigner in Goa, to commit a murder in Goa. A is guilty of abetting murder."

Substitution of new section for section 124A, Act XLV, 1860.

4. Section 124A of the Indian Penal Code is hereby repealed, and the following section is substituted therefor, namely:—

Sedition.

"124A.—Whoever by words, either spoken or written, or by signs, or by visible representation, or otherwise, brings or attempts to bring into hatred or contempt, or excites or attempts to excite disaffection towards, Her Majesty or the Government established by law in British India, shall be punished with transportation for life or any shorter term, to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment which may extend to three years, to which fine may be added, or with fine.

Explanation 1.—The expression "disaffection" includes disloyalty and all feelings of enmity.

Explanation 2.—Comments expressing disapprobation of the measures of the Government with a view to obtain their alteration by lawful means, without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, do not constitute an offence under this section.

Explanation 3.—Comments expressing disapprobation of the administrative or other action of the Government without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection do not constitute an offence under this section."

Addition of new section after section 153, Act XLV, 1860.

5. After section 153 of the Indian Penal Code the following section shall be inserted, namely:—

Promoting enmity between classes.

Substitution of new section for section 505, Act XLV, 1860.

6. Section 505 of the Indian Penal Code is hereby repealed and the following section is substituted therefor, namely:—

Statements conducing to public mischief.

"505. Whoever makes, publishes or circulates any statement, rumour or report,—

(a) with intent to cause, or which is likely to cause, any officer, soldier or sailor in the army or navy of Her Majesty or in the Royal Indian Marine or in the Imperial Service Troops to mutiny or otherwise disregard or fail in his duty as such; or

(b) with intent to cause, or which is likely to cause, fear or alarm to the public, or to any section of the public whereby any person may be induced to commit an offence against the State or against the public tranquillity; or shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Exception.—It does not amount to an offence, within the meaning of this section, when the person making, publishing or circulating any such statement, rumour or report has reasonable grounds for believing that such statement, rumour or report is true and makes, publishes or circulates it without any such intent as aforesaid."

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, January 22nd, 1898.

The charts of the seven days under review exhibit another week of very settled pressure conditions and of very little change of weather. From the first day of the week to the last, pressure was high over North-West and Central India, relatively high over Assam and Upper Burma, and low over the south of the Bay, Ceylon, and the south-east of the Arabian Sea. The pressure difference between these areas of high and low pressure, has varied from day to day, according as the barometer has risen in the north and fallen in the south or fallen in the north and risen in the south, but the main features of the distribution have remained unchanged throughout, and the winds accompanying this distribution have been very steady. Light airs and calms have prevailed over the central districts, westerly winds down the Gangetic Plain, northerly winds over the Bay of Bengal and easterly winds elsewhere. The weather has been practically rainless throughout India. The temperature conditions have shown large variations from the normal. Over North-West India, but more particularly over the western desert, the heat has been largely above the normal, while over the central parts of the country and the north of the Peninsula the mean temperature has been almost equally largely in defect.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, January 16th.—Pressure had increased briskly to rapidly over Baluchistan and had changed slightly over India. In most places the change had been upward. Pressure was highest over North-West and Central India, and lowest in the extreme south. Calms and variable breezes prevailed within the high pressure area in the north-west and centre, westerly winds down the Gangetic Plain, north-westerly to north-easterly winds around the Bay and easterly winds elsewhere. The mean temperature was low over the east and north of the Peninsula, Bengal, Assam, and part of Burma, and was excessive elsewhere. Local showers were reported from Darjeeling, Tinnevelly and Trivandrum, but elsewhere the weather was rainless.

Monday, January 17th.—The pressure changes over India were again slight or small, and the general conditions of pressure were generally the same as on the 16th. The barometer read slightly above the normal average over the central parts of the country and slightly below both in the north and south. The winds were the same as on the preceding day. The mean temperature of the preceding 24 hours had exceeded the normal average over North-West India and the west of the Peninsula, and been generally lower than usual elsewhere. The principal positive variations were 6°·2 at Mooltan and 5°·3 at Bombay, the principal negative variations were about 4° at Sibsagar, Kindat, Moulmein and Tavoy.

Tuesday, January 18th.—Pressure had increased almost everywhere and over a considerable part of the country briskly. Pressure was highest, and considerably above the normal, over the central parts of the country and was lowest and slightly below the normal over Tenasserim. There was again no important change to record in the wind directions. The mean temperature remained high over North-West India and the west of the Peninsula, and low elsewhere. The excess was as much as 8°·7 at Quetta, the deficiency as much as 6°·1 at Sambalpur. There had been no rain.

Wednesday, January 19th.—The barometer had fallen briskly over Kashmir, risen briskly along the foot of the Himalayas, and changed slightly elsewhere. These changes had not introduced any important alteration in the general distribution of pressure. The winds had, however, changed somewhat. The westerly wind down the Gangetic Plain had died down and been replaced by calms, while northerly to easterly winds had appeared over the Punjab and Sind. The area of excessive temperature over North-West India had spread eastward down the Gangetic Plain to Bengal, but elsewhere the temperature distribution was practically unaltered. Tavoy reported a few drops of rain, but elsewhere the weather was rainless.

Thursday, January 20th.—The barometer had risen over Baluchistan and the extreme north-west of India, but had fallen elsewhere. Pressure was high in the north-west and centre, relatively high over Assam and Burma and low ove the south of the Bay. The barometer read higher than usual almost everywhere—more particularly in the north-west. The winds were generally similar to those reported on the 19th. The mean temperature was now lower than usual only in Upper Burma, the east, north and centre of the Peninsula, the Central Provinces, and South-West Bengal, and was excessive elsewhere. The Kashmir stations reported light snow, and Chaman and Tavoy light rain.

Friday, January 21st.—The barometer had fallen everywhere—more in the north than in the south. Pressure remained high in the north-west and centre and low in the south, but the pressure difference was less than on the preceding day. Westerly winds had reappeared down the Gangetic Plain, but elsewhere the winds were unaltered. The mean temperature was low over the Peninsula and the central parts of the country and excessive elsewhere. The excess was as much as 8°·8 at Karachi, the deficiency as much as 7°·4 at Chanda. Light snow had again fallen in Kashmir, but over India the weather was rainless.

Saturday, January 22nd.—The barometer had fallen briskly over the Indus Valley and had changed slightly and irregularly elsewhere. A shallow low pressure area had appeared over North Bihar, and the pressure differences had still further decreased, but these were the only changes in the pressure conditions. Calms were reported from Bengal and the central parts of the country, westerly winds down the Gangetic Plain and northerly to easterly breezes elsewhere. The mean temperature remained lower than usual over the Peninsula and higher than usual elsewhere. The greatest excess was 9°·2 at Bhuj, the greatest defect 5°·4 at Kurnool. Light showers were reported from Quetta and Negapatam.

Temperature.—The general temperature conditions, like the general pressure conditions, have been very steady during the week under review. For the first three days the heat was less than usual over the east and north of the Peninsula, North-East India and Burma, and was excessive over North-West India and the west of the Peninsula. On Wednesday, the 19th, the area of excessive heat in the north-west began to move eastward down the Gangetic Plain and gradually covered North-East India and Burma, so that the area of relatively low temperature was confined, by the close of the week, to the Peninsula and the south of the Central Provinces. In both cases the variations of the mean temperature from the normal were large, the excess on several days ranging between 7° and 10° and the deficiency between 4° and 6°.

The following table gives temperature data for the week :—

The mean temperature of the whole country for the whole week was 1°·0 above the normal average, and for each day of the week the heat for the whole country was slightly excessive. The provincial variations exhibit a lower temperature than usual over Madras and the Central Provinces, a normal temperature over Burma, Bengal, and Bombay, and excessive heat elsewhere. The greatest excess was reported from North-West India and amounted to over 4° over the Punjab, Sind, and Rajputana. The variations from the normal on the last day of the week were very remarkable in the north-west of India.

Rain.—As mentioned above the weather during the week under review has been practically rainless and the conditions exhibited by the rainfall table at the close are most exceptional. Four divisions only report any rainfall and of these four divisions three, viz., the Assam Hills, the submontane Punjab and the Baluchistan Hills report average actual falls of less than one-tenth of an inch of rain. The fourth division, viz., Madras (South) received an average fall for the week of 0·34″, so that it was only in this single division that effective rain was received during the whole week.

For the three weeks, January 2nd to January 22nd, there are only five divisions in which the total rainfall for that period has exceeded the normal average, viz., deltaic, Central and Upper Burma, Malabar and the south of Madras. In all other divisions the rainfall has been short, and in many divisions rain has been altogether absent.

Asst. Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India.

SIMLA, the 27th January 1

DENZIL IBBETSON,
Secretary to the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weekly Report on the state of the Season and Prospects of the Crops.

Madras.—For week ending 29th January.—There were fair showers during the week in Tanjore and light scattered showers in other southern districts; elsewhere there was no rain. The water-supply for irrigation is generally insufficient in rainfed areas, except in Malabar and in parts of the Northern Circars and the Deccan. More rain is required everywhere. Agricultural operations continue but are retarded by want of rain. Crops in rainfed areas, except in the extreme north and in parts of the Deccan, are suffering for want of rain. The harvest continues and the outturn is generally middling. Pasture is generally sufficient, but is failing in parts of the Deccan and the Carnatic. Fodder is generally available but is growing dear. The condition of cattle is normal. Prices are very high; they are slightly easier on the West Coast, in the Deccan and in the Circars except in Ganjam; elsewhere they are fairly steady with a tendency to rise. Most staple grains are above or touching scarcity rates in Ganjam, Godavari, Kistna, Kurnool, Anantapur, Cuddapah, Nellore, North Arcot, and Salem. There is no improvement in prospects. The numbers on relief were—Nellore—testworks—workers—men 1,222, women 2,070, children 1,372, total 4,664. Fed in kitchens—dependants—children 117. Others—men 10, women 12, children 11, total 150. Grand total on relief 4,814.

Bombay.—For week ending 31st January.—Slight rain fell in two districts of Sind. The standing crops are good except in parts of ten districts where they have been damaged by blight, cold, drought, or locusts. Cotton in one taluka of Bijapur and poppy in one of Baroda are diseased. The reaping of the early crops continues in four, and of late crops in three districts. Preparations for next season are progressing in six districts. Fodder is sufficient. Agricultural stock is healthy. Prices have risen in three, and have fallen in eight districts; elsewhere they are stationary. The price of jowari in Sholapur was 12⅝ seers per rupee. The average number on relief works, including dependants, was—Sholapur 9,195, of whom 8,624 are relief workers and 571 dependants. Of relief workers—3,041 are men, 3,957 women, and 1,626 children. Of dependants—19 are men, 36 women, and 516 children. On gratuitous relief—Sholapur 2,650, of whom 1,045 are men, 1,168 women, and 437 children.

Bengal.—For week ending 31st January.—There was general rain over Bengal Proper and in the north of Bihar during the week. The rain has benefited all standing crops, but slight damage is reported to have been done by hail in parts of Nadia, Champaran, and Darbhanga. In parts of South Bihar and Chota Nagpur, where no rain has fallen, it is required for the spring crops. Poppy is in good condition except the late-sown plants in Monghyr. Sugarcane and the early spring crops are being gathered. There is practically no change in the price of rice since last week. Scarcity of fodder is reported from the flooded tracts of Chittagong and from Kurigram in Rangpur.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—For week ending 2nd February.—Rain has fallen in the hills and in many of the submontane districts, but more is urgently wanted for the unirrigated crops. Irrigated crops and poppy are doing well. Sowing of sawan (Panicum miliaceum) has commenced in places. Markets are well stocked and prices remain practically stationary.

Punjab.—For week ending 31st January.—Rain averaging from 1/10 to ½ of an inch has fallen in Ferozepore, Multan, Sialkot, Shahpur, Rawalpindi, and Peshawar. Sugarcane-pressing still continues in some districts. The condition of the irrigated crops is generally good; those on dry land are suffering from want of rain which is badly needed in most districts. The recent rain has benefited the standing crops. The stock of food-grains is sufficient. Locusts appeared in parts of Shahpur but did no damage. The condition of cattle is poor in Sialkot and in parts of Dera Ismail Khan; fair in Delhi; and good elsewhere. Fodder is scarce in Sialkot and in parts of Amritsar and Dera Ismail Khan, but is sufficient elsewhere. Prices have fallen in Jullundur, Ferozepore, Shahpur, and Dera Ismail Khan, and have remained unchanged elsewhere. Wheat is selling from 10¾ to 14¾, gram 11¼ to 12, barley 15, bulrush millet 16 to 22, great millet 18, maize 17 to 20½, and rice 10 to 10½ seers per rupee.

Central Provinces.—For week ending 31st January.—The weather is clear. The days are becoming somewhat warmer. The condition of the winter crops is generally fair to good, but they have suffered to some extent from want of rain in the Hoshangabad and Bilaspur districts, and some of them, more especially pulses, have been slightly damaged by cold and frost in parts of other districts. The reaping of a few of them has commenced. The price of jowari has fallen in Saugor, Damoh, and Chanda and has risen in Hoshangabad; elsewhere it is stationary. The numbers in receipt of relief are confined to 580 in poor-houses and orphanages, of whom 312 are orphan children awaiting disposal, and the rest sick persons, chiefly lepers, the remnants of prior relief. They are thus distributed—Bhandara 53, Balaghat 99, Raipur 203, and Bilaspur 225. Total 580.

Burma.—For week ending 29th January.—In Lower Burma reaping and threshing are almost completed. In Upper Burma reaping of wet weather paddy has been completed in five districts. The cultivation of dry weather paddy and miscellaneous and island crops is in fair progress. Insects have caused slight damage to wheat, onions, and peas in Mandalay and to wheat and gram in Sagaing. The price of paddy has fallen slightly in Rangoon town, Thongwa, Pakokku, and Mandalay; largely in Toungoo; and has risen slightly in Prome, Thayetmyo, and Shwebo; elsewhere it is stationary.

Assam.—For week ending 1st February.—There was slight rain in all districts during the week. The reaping of winter paddy is finished and the outturn is generally good. Land is being prepared for early rice in Goalpara, Kamrup, and Nowgong. Gathering of pulses and mustard, pressing of sugar-cane, and pruning of tea continue. Prices of common rice—Sylhet 13, Gauhati and Sibsagar 12, Dhubri 11½, Silchar and Tezpur 10½, Nowgong and Dibrugarh 9 seers per rupee. Fodder is scarce in the Khasi and Jaintia Hills and in parts of Cachar, Darrang, and the Naga Hills districts.

Mysore and Coorg.—For week ending 31st January.—MYSORE: Prospects are fair. Prices have risen slightly in Kolar and have fallen in Mysore. Paddy has been sown in parts of Bangalore, Kolar, Tumkur, and Chitaldrug and has been harvested in Mysore and Shimoga.

COORG: The reaping of rice is almost completed. Picking of coffee continues. Prices of food-grains are stationary. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Berar and Hyderabad.—For week ending 31st January.—BERAR: The weather is cool. Picking of cotton and threshing of jowar continue. The winter crops are in fair condition. Fodder and water are sufficient. Prices are fluctuating. Prices—jowar—Akola 21, Amraoti 22, Basim 20, Buldana 12½, Ellichpur 22, Wun 25 seers per rupee.

HYDERABAD: There was no rain during the week. Winter rice sowing continues. The standing spring crops have been affected by cold. Prices of grain are rising. Prices—wheat 5, coarse rice 6½, and jowari 11½ seers per current sicca rupee.

Rajputana.—For week ending 2nd February.—The standing crops are in good condition except in Bhurtpore where they are in want of rain. Prospects are fair in Haraoti; good elsewhere. Agricultural stock is in fair condition in Meywar and Bikanir; good elsewhere. Pasturage or fodder is sufficient. Prices are falling in three States; rising in one; and are steady elsewhere.

Central India.—For week ending 31st January.—There was no rain during the week. Rain is urgently needed in the Bundelkhand and Bhopawar agencies. Agricultural operations have been completed in Malwa and Bhopawar and are in progress in other agencies. The condition of the standing crops is good throughout Central India. Agricultural stock and pasturage are good. Prices are steady in Gwalior, Bhopal, Baghelkhand, and Malwa; and are falling in Bundelkhand and in Bhopawar. The opium crops are in good condition in Bhopal and Malwa.

Kashmir.—For week ending 1st February.—The weather is fine. Prices continue below normal.

Jammu Province.—For week ending 1st February.—There was no rain during the week. Prices are stationary.

Nepal.—For week ending 31st January.—No rain. The weather has been cloudy for the last three days, and it is getting appreciably warmer. Some very late sowings of wheat and barley are still going on. The plants of the early sowings are doing well. Prices—8 seers per rupee.

CALCUTTA, the 2nd February, 1898.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

(FAMINE.)

Return of the number of persons in receipt of relief in districts affected by scarcity.

NOTE.—The figures are compiled from the Local Gazettes, and give the District details of the Provincial totals published weekly in the Crop and Weather Summary in the Gazette of India.

Non-labouring children and other dependants of relief workers are classed as on relief works when distinguished in the local returns from persons gratuitously relieved in poor-houses or at their homes.

Report by the Comptroller and Auditor General, No. 1975, dated the 31st December 1897, on the operations of the Savings Banks in India, during the year 1896-97, and the Statements annexed to it.

ORDER that the Report and the Statements be published in the Gazette of India for general information.

J. F. FINLAY,
Secretary to the Government of India.

No. 1975, dated Calcutta, the 31st December 1897.

From—The Comptroller and Auditor General,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department.

I have the honour to submit my Annual Report on the operations of the Savings Banks in India during the year 1896-97.

2. These Banks are of two descriptions, viz., Banks open to the public and Service Institutions; the former head now includes the Post Office Banks only, the Presidency Banks having been abolished in the year under review; and the latter, the State Railways Provident Institution, the Civil Engineers' Provident Fund, the Forest Officers' Provident Fund (opened in the year under review), and the Military Banks. The State Railways Provident Institution is for the non-pensionable employés of the State Railways, the Civil Engineers' Provident Fund is for the Officers of the Public Works and Telegraph Departments, the Forest Officers' Provident Fund is for the officers of the Imperial and Provincial branches of the Forest Service, and for the officers of the Geological Survey Department, and the Military Banks are for the benefit of Non-Commissioned Officers and Privates of British Regiments.

3. I enclose the usual Statements marked I to VII, containing the accounts and statistics for the year.

4. The principal features of the returns are shown in the following table, which also compares them with those of the previous year:—

5. The Statement shows that on the 31st March 1897 there were 6,596 Government Savings Banks in India, containing 742,215 accounts, which earned interest from Government to the amount of R34,65,559, and held balances aggregating R10,88,67,916, exclusive of Government Securities held on behalf of the depositors to the nominal value of R6,28,800. As compared with the year 1895-96, there has been an increase of 76 in the number of banks, of 25,661 in the number of depositors, and of R80,601 in the amount of interest earned. On the other hand, the balance of deposits has declined by R23,44,608.

6. The Presidency Savings Banks Accounts were transferred finally to the Post Office with effect from the 1st October 1896. The transfer was made gradually, commencing from the beginning of the year, and no new depositors were admitted to the Presidency Savings Banks in the year under review.

7. Upon the working of the Post Office Banks, the Director-General of the Post Office has submitted a detailed report, and it is therefore necessary here o make some observations in respect of the other Banks only.

8. There has been a large decrease of R2,55,274 in the balances at the Military Banks. The decrease occurs in all the commands. The balances in these Banks, affected as they are by the transfer of troops between India and England, are liable to considerable fluctuations.

9. The Forest Officers' Provident Fund was created during the course of the year under review for the benefit of the members of the Imperial and Provincial branches of the Forest Department. The Officers of the Geological Survey of India Department are also permitted to subscribe to this Fund. The balance stands at R45,167.

10. The balances of the other Service Institutions still continue to increase, and now amount to R1,09,40,112, an increase over the previous year of R8,96,578.

11. The balances of the Savings Banks proper, including the Military Banks, amount to R9,78,82,637, which represents a decrease of R32,86,353 as compared with the balances of 1895-96. These balances are held by Government at call. This large decrease is due in a large measure to several special causes, the most prominent of which are the closing of the Presidency Savings Banks, the limitation to R10,000 of the balances in what are called "Public accounts" and the closing of the account of the East Indian Railway Provident Fund. The closing of the Presidency Savings Banks resulted in the withdrawal of twenty lakhs of rupees, the limitation of the balances of Public Accounts caused a withdrawal of two and a quarter lakhs, and the closing of the Account of the East Indian Railway Provident Fund produced a net withdrawal of twenty-three lakhs. There has been an increase of R99,700 in the balance of Government Promissory Notes held on account of depositors at the close of 1896-97, which now stands at R6,28,800.

12. Statement No. V distributing Savings Bank transactions between (1) European and Eurasian and (2) Native Depositors shows that it is in the accounts of European and Eurasian Depositors that the decrease in the balances of the Savings Banks proper has occurred. The decrease in the balances of European and Eurasian Depositors amounted to nearly fifty-six lakhs. This decrease is, however, in some degree not a real one, and is due to the extent of some 13 lakhs to a rectification in 1896-97 of misclassification in previous years in the Post Office of Native as Eurasian Depositors, and to a difference between the classification of Eurasian and Native Depositors adopted by the Presidency and that adopted by the Post Office Savings Banks. Allowing, however, for all the explanations given in this paragraph and in paragraphs 8 and 11, there has been a considerable withdrawal from the balances of European and Eurasian Depositors.

FIELD OPERATIONS.

MOHMAND.

No. 145.—In continuation of G. G. O. No. 1318 of 1897, the Right Honourable the Governor General of India in Council directs the publication of the sub-joined communication from the Adjutant General in India, submitting, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief in India, a subsidiary despatch by Brigadier-General E. R. Elles, C.B., bringing to notice the names of officers of Civil Departments, who were employed with the Mohmand Field Force :—

Letter from the Adjutant General in India, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, No. 490-F. "Field Operations—N.-W. F." / Mohmand, dated Fort William, the 1st February 1898.

In continuation of this office letter No. 2080-F., dated 10th November 1897, I have the honor, by direction of the Commander-in Chief, to forward, for the information of Government, the enclosed subsidiary despatch from Brigadier-General E. R. Elles, C.B., bringing to notice the names of certain officers of Civil Departments who were employed with the Mohmand Field Force.

2. His Excellency has much pleasure in endorsing Brigadier-General Elles' commendation of the officers now brought to notice.

Letter from Brigadier-General E. R. ELLES, C.B., Commanding Peshawar District, late Commanding the Mohmand Field Force, to the Adjutant General in India,—No. 581, "Field Operations," dated Peshawar, the 22nd January 1898.

In continuation of my No. 520 of the 13th October 1897, I have the honour to bring to the notice of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, the names of the following officers for their good services during the Mohmand Expedition:—

Mr. W. R. H. Merk, C.S.I., Civil Service, rendered very valuable services as political officer. The prompt settlement obtained was entirely due to his knowledge of the tribes, his perfect command of their language, which enabled him to deal directly with the jirgas, and his firmness in dealing with the jirgas. His judicious selection of subordinates greatly contributed to the success of the expedition. My movements were almost entirely based on information obtained by him regarding distances and water. I am under the greatest obligations to Mr. Merk for the manner in which he conducted the political business throughout.

Lieutenant B. C. Waterfield, Assistant Political Officer, carried out his work very firmly and in great harmony with the military officers at the various posts.

Captain H. V. Cox, in charge of the Imperial Service Troops, the Patiala and Nabha Regiments, carried on all work connected with them with great smoothness and was most zealous in his work.

Major W. J. Bythell, Royal Engineers, Survey Officer, did excellent work under the difficulty of marching daily and was most keen and energetic.

Mr. C. J. Stowell carried out all postal arrangements entirely to my satisfaction. Everything was carried on most creditably by him and his subordinates.

Mr. H. S. Pike, Assistant Superintendent of Telegraphs, ably assisted by his subordinate, Mr. J. C. Murphy, laid the telegraph line rapidly and well, and the telegraph work was most satisfactory; all concerned working very willingly.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT—RAILWAY TRAFFIC.

Calcutta, the 3rd February 1898.

READ—

Sections 3 (4), 16 (2), 47 and 148 (1) of the Indian Railways Act (IX) of 1890.

Government of India, Public Works Department, notification No. 480½, dated the 30th October 1890, publishing—in Part I of the Gazette of India of the 8th November 1890—the Government of India resolution No. 736 R. T., dated the 17th October 1890, and the General Rules, therewith promulgated, for working railways under construction and not used for the public carriage of passengers, animals or goods.

Government of India, Public Works Department, notification No. 4, dated the 6th January 1898, published in Part I of the Gazette of India of the 8th January 1898—appointing the Director of Railway Traffic as the officer who, in the case of a railway administered by Government is to make General Rules under section 47 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890.

Letter from the Director of Railway Traffic, No. 32 T., dated the 17th January 1898.

OBSERVATIONS.—The Director of Railway Traffic has applied for leave to adopt, on the Cooch Behar State Railway extensions across the Torsa river to the town of Cooch Behar and thence to a point on the Jhainti river near Santrabari, the General Rules for working railways under construction and not used for the public carriage of passengers, animals or goods, which rules were published in Part I of the Gazette of India of the 8th November 1890, under Public Works Department notification No. 480½, dated the 30th October 1890.

RESOLUTION.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to sanction the application of the General Rules referred to in the foregoing observations to such portions of the said extensions of the Cooch Behar State Railway as are situate in British territory and have been sanctioned for construction.

ORDER.—Ordered that the General Rules, which have already been published in the Gazette of India of the 8th November 1890, be further notified to the railway servants and to the public by a copy thereof being kept open to inspection free of any charge, in the office of the Engineer in charge of the construction of the railway.

ORDERED, also, that this resolution be communicated to the Director of Railway Traffic, for information and guidance, and that it be published under a notification in Part I of the Gazette of India.

F. R. UPCOTT,
Secretary to the Government of India.

The 7th February, 1898.

No. 57.—Mr. J. W. L. Toozs, Executive Engineer, 2nd grade, Central Provinces, has, at his own request, been permitted to resign the service, with effect from the afternoon of the 21st December, 1897.

This cancels Notification No. 523, dated 22nd December, 1897.

The 8th February, 1898.

No. 59.—With reference to Public Works Department Notification No. 452, dated the 29th October 1897, the services of Captain R. S. Maclagan, R.E., Executive Engineer, 2nd grade, are replaced at the disposal of the Government of the Punjab, with effect from the 1st January, 1898.

The 11th February, 1898.

No. 65.—With reference to Notification No. 41, dated the 27th January, 1897, Mr. W. C. Davis is confirmed in the appointment of Assistant Examiner, 1st grade (new classification).

TELEGRAPH.

The 10th February, 1898.

No. 63.—In exercise of the powers conferred by section 7 of the Indian Telegraph

Act, 1885 (XIII of 1885), the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that for Rules 76, 94 and 142 (d), respectively, of the Rules for Inland telegrams published with the Notification of the Government of India in the Public Works Department, No. 245, dated the 25th June, 1897, the following rules shall be substituted, namely :—

76. If the sender of an Inland telegram wishes to cancel it before transmission has begun, he can do so; and the charges, less a fee of four annas, will be returned. If, however, the telegram has been stamped either by the sender or by the booking office, and the stamps have been obliterated, the charges can only be refunded on application being made to the Superintendent, Check Office, Government Telegraph Department, Calcutta, within one month of the date of booking the message. If the telegram is in course of transmission, or has already been despatched, it can be cancelled only by a paid Service Advice (Rule 46) addressed to the Terminal Office. If, in addition, the sender wishes to be informed by telegraph, in what manner his request has been acted upon, he must deposit the cost of the return telegram; otherwise he is informed by post.

94. The Pass is available for only thirty days (date of issue included), after which it lapses. When the addressee does not use the Pass, its value will be refunded to the sender on production of the Pass should he apply for the same within the prescribed period. (See Rules 142 (d) and 144.)

142 (d). The full amount of every sum deposited in advance with the object of obtaining a reply (Rule 91) when the addressee has not made use of the Pass (Rule 94).

NOTICES.

All communications relating to Act V (the Inventions and Designs Act) of 1888 should be addressed to the "Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture (PATENTS BRANCH), CALCUTTA".

The office of the Secretary under the Act is open for the transaction of business from 11 A.M. to 4 P.M. on all days except Sundays and gazetted holidays.

The Government of India are advised that, as trade marks are not "designs" within the meaning of the Act, they cannot be registered under Part II.

The fees payable under the fourth and sixth schedules are now collected in cash, and applicants are warned that they must be responsible for any delay in cashing cheques.

Copies of the weekly notifications, and of the quarterly lists, of applications and specifications filed in the Secretary's office are now on sale to the public at one anna and eight annas a copy, respectively.

Attention is requested to the rules made by the Government on the 10th October, 1895, in regard to the preparation of applications, specifications and drawings.

All applications made under the Inventions and Designs Act, V of 1888, will from this date (December 19th, 1896) lie in the visitors' room of the Patents Office for ten days from the date of the Gazette of India in which their filing may have been notified; or, if the tenth day is a holiday, till the evening of the office day next following.

At the time of delivering or sending an application for leave to file a specification, the applicant shall cause a duplicate copy of the application to be delivered or sent therewith to the Secretary.

A. T. PRINGLE,
Offg. Secy. under the Inventions and Designs Act, 1888.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, January 29th, 1898.

The weather has been a good deal more disturbed over Northern India during the present than during last week, but over the central parts of the country and the Peninsula the weather has remained fine and quiet. Light snow commenced over the Kashmir Himalayas and light rain in Baluchistan on Sunday the 23rd. This rain and snow extended to other parts of the North-Western Himalayas and rain to several plains stations in North-Western India on the 24th and 25th. On the 26th the showers were fewer and widely scattered over Northern India, but on the 27th there was general moderate rain over Bengal and showers continued to fall over North-East India until the close of the week. This rainfall was due directly, in North-West India and indirectly in North-East India, to a barometric depression which appeared over Sind on the 23rd and slowly travelled eastward across Northern India. During the whole week there has been a large area of high pressure over the central parts of the country, and from this area pressure has decreased southward and has been steadily low over the South of the Bay and the South-East of the Arabian Sea. Accompanying these pressure conditions, there have been very steady winds over Central and Southern India and very unsteady changeable winds over Northern India. The mean temperature has been generally lower than usual during the week over the central parts of the country and the north and east of the Peninsula, and higher than usual elsewhere. The variations of the mean temperature have been large in different parts of the country but more particularly in the north-west where the heat has been very excessive.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, January 23rd.—Pressure had risen over the greater part of the country. Pressure was highest in the North Punjab, relatively high over the central districts and low over the south of the Bay. A very shallow depression had appeared over Sind. The winds were generally westerly down the Gangetic Plain, north-east over the Bay and easterly elsewhere. On the North-West Himalayas the force was rising. The mean temperature was low over the central parts of India and the northern half of the Peninsula, and was high elsewhere. At Montgomery, the variation from the normal was +9°·7 and at Chanda — 5°·6. Light snow had fallen over Kashmir, light rain over Baluchistan and light to moderate rain over the south of the Peninsula.

Monday, January 24th.—The barometer had begun to rise in Baluchistan but was falling in almost all parts of India. The fall had been brisk to rapid over Rajputana, and the shallow depression noticed over Sind on the previous day was passing through Rajputana. In other respects the general distribution of pressure was little changed. The winds were irregularly cyclonic in the north-west and were little changed elsewhere. The mean temperature remained low over the east and north of the Peninsula and excessive elsewhere. The excess amounted to 11°·8, at Montgomery, the deficiency to 3°·9, at Vizagapatam. Light rain and snow had fallen at the north-west hill stations and light rain at a few plains stations in the north-west.

Tuesday, January 25th.—The barometer had risen in the north-west and continued to fall elsewhere. The fall was greatest over the west of the North-Western Provinces, and the depression, which had been passing through Rajputana on the 24th, had reached the Gangetic Plain. A large high pressure area had appeared over North-West India where the winds were northerly; calms prevailed over Bengal. Northerly winds over the Bay and easterly winds elsewhere. The temperature had fallen rapidly in the north-west and was below the normal at Rawalpindi and Karachi. The highest temperatures relatively to the normal were reported from the west of the North-Western Provinces, while over the east of the Peninsula the weather remained cooler than usual. Showers continued to be reported from the north-western hill stations and from a few plains stations.

Wednesday, January 26th.—Pressure had increased slightly to rapidly over the North-Western and Central Provinces, Rajputana and Central India, while it had decreased or been steady elsewhere. The depression had continued to move eastward and lay over North Bihar, while the highest pressures were reported from Eastern Rajputana. A small local depression was shown over Lower Bengal. The winds were westerly and north-westerly over Northern India, irregularly cyclonic over Bengal, northerly over the Bay, and easterly elsewhere. The mean temperature was low over Rajputana and Gujarat as well as over the east of the Peninsula, but was high elsewhere. The greatest excess was reported from the North-Western Provinces. A few scattered showers had been received over Northern India.

Thursday, January 27th.—The barometer had fallen over North-Western India and had risen elsewhere. The depression noticed over North Bihar had filled up, while the small Bengal depression had passed eastward to south-east Bengal. The winds were little changed. The temperature was low over the central parts of the country and the east of the Peninsula, and high in all other parts of the country. Thunderstorms had given light or moderate rain to all parts of Bengal except West Bengal and Orissa, but the rainfall had ceased in the north-west.

Friday, January 28th.—The barometer had risen everywhere. A large high pressure area covered Northern and Central India, while the lowest pressures were reported from the south of the Bay. Northerly winds continued over the Bay, but elsewhere variable or easterly winds were reported. The mean temperature was low over the Central Provinces, the east of the Peninsula and Lower Bengal, but elsewhere the heat remained excessive. Light rain had been received over Assam, East Bengal and Upper and Central Burma.

Saturday, January 29th.—Pressure had increased briskly over the Indus Valley and part of the Peninsula, but elsewhere the changes were slight. Pressure remained high over Northern and Central India, and low over the south-east of the Arabian Sea. Northerly to easterly winds prevailed, the force being light to moderate. The mean temperature remained low over the south, east and north of the Peninsula and Lower Bengal, and high elsewhere. A shower had been received over parts of Upper Burma, but, with this exception, the weather had been rainless.

Temperature.—The distribution of the mean temperature relatively to the normal has been very steady during the week. Thus, the south, east and north of the Peninsula, part of the Central Provinces and also of Lower Bengal, have had throughout the greater part of the week under review, a lower temperature than usual, while in other parts of the country the temperature has been steadily in excess. The only exception has been in North-Western India where a sudden and large fall of temperature occurred after the rainfall in the beginning of the week, a fall which temporarily reduced temperature to below the normal average in some districts.

The following table gives the temperature data for the week.

In Madras, the Central Provinces and Burma, the mean temperature of the week has been about normal; in Bengal and Bombay it has been in slight excess, in the North-Western Provinces, the Punjab, Central India and Gujarat in considerable excess, and in Sind and Rajputana in large excess. The mean temperature of the whole country for the whole week has been 2½° above the normal.

Rain:—The weather has been much more disturbed, and the rainfall area much wider than was the case last week. Last week there were only four divisions which reported any rain at all, and only one division which reported effective rainfall, while during the present week no less than twenty-four divisions report some rain, and of these, no less than eighteen have received effective rainfall. Rain has been received over Upper Burma, all the Assam divisions, East, Deltaic, Central and North Bengal, Chota Nagpur, North and South Bihar, North Oudh, the West Submontane and the Hill divisions of the North-Western Provinces, the South, Central, Submontane, Hill, North and West divisions of the Punjab, the South-Central division of Madras, the Baluchistan hill division, the south of the East Coast and the south of Madras. In the case of Upper Burma, Chota Nagpur, South Bihar, the West Submontane division of the North-Western Provinces, South-Central Madras, and the Baluchistan Hills, the average actual rainfall of the week was less than one-tenth of an inch, but in all the remaining divisions mentioned above, the rainfall was effective and ranged from 0·76" in Deltaic Bengal, and 0·69" in East Bengal and the Punjab Hills, to 0·11" in North Oudh and 0·12" in the West Punjab.

The rainfall was practically confined to the Punjab, Bengal and Upper Burma, the remaining parts of the country having been rainless or nearly so. The average actual rainfall of the week exceeded the average normal rainfall in no less than eleven divisions, viz., all the Assam divisions, East, Deltaic, Central and North Bengal, the South Punjab, South-Central Madras, the south of the East Coast and South Madras. This rainfall has diminished the deficiency in the seasonal rainfall which has hitherto prevailed over Northern India, and in the case of Deltaic, Central and North Bengal, has changed it into an excess. Elsewhere there has not been much change, and the three last columns of the table show that for the four weeks January 2nd to January 29th, no rain whatever has been received over Tenasserim, Arakan, South-West Bengal, the greater part of the North-Western Provinces, the South-East Punjab, Coorg, the Konkan, the Bombay Deccan, Khandesh, Berar, the Central Provinces, North Bombay, Rajputana, Central India and the greater part of Madras. In many of these regions the anticipated rainfall is light, and the absence of rain more or less unimportant, but in parts of the Punjab the actual deficiency is large, while over Madras, though the actual deficiency is small, the continued absence of rain is important.

The following important falls of rain are reported during the week under review:—Narayanganj 1·90", Faridpur 3·24", Magura (Jessore) 2·30", Bahera (Darbhanga) 1·27", Jhelum 1·62" and Hazara 1·46".

W. L. DALLAS,

Asst. Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India.

SIMLA, the 3rd February, 1898.

J. B. FULLER,

Offg. Secretary to the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weekly Report on the state of the Season and Prospects of the Crops.

Madras.—For week ending 5th February.—There was no rain during the week, except a few light scattered showers in Tanjore. The water-supply for irrigation is generally insufficient in rain-fed areas, except in Malabar and in parts of the Northern Circars and the Deccan. Agricultural operations continue, but are retarded by want of rain, which cannot now be expected for some weeks. Crops in rain-fed areas, except in the extreme north and in parts of the Deccan, are suffering from want of rain. The harvest continues and the outturn of crops is generally middling, but is poor in parts. Pasture is generally sufficient, but is failing in parts of the Deccan and the Carnatic. Fodder is generally available, but is growing dear. The condition of cattle is normal. Prices are very high generally; they are steady or are slightly easier, except in Bellary, Coimbatore, and Trichinopoly. Most staple grains are dearer than or are touching scarcity rates in Ganjam, Godavari, Kistna, Anantapur, Cuddapah, Nellore, North Arcot, and Salem. There is no improvement in prospects. For Nellore test work the figures are incomplete.

Bombay.—For week ending 7th February.—Reaping of early crops continues in three and of late crops in seven districts. The standing crops have been injured by blight, cold, or locusts in parts of seven districts. Cotton is diseased in parts of Bijapur. Preparations for next season are progressing in four districts. Fodder is sufficient. Agricultural stock is healthy. Prices have risen in three and fallen in seven districts; elsewhere they are stationary. The prices of jowari in Sholapur was 13⅝ seers per rupee. The average number on relief works, including dependants, was—Sholapur—8,962—of whom 8,376 are relief workers and 586 dependants. Of relief workers—2,955 are men, 3,866 women, and 1,555 children. Of dependants—19 are men, 46 women, and 521 children. On gratuitous relief—Sholapur 3,813, of whom 2,131 are men, 1,215 women, and 467 children.

Bengal.—For week ending 7th February.—There was general rain in Bihar and the north of Bengal, and slight showers are also reported from parts of East Bengal and Chota Nagpur. The spring crops in general have benefited by the rain, but a few crops in flower have suffered. In Jalpaiguri the standing crops are reported to have suffered from a severe hailstorm on the night of the 5th instant. Reports of the poppy crop in Bihar are favourable, but round Motihari it has been damaged by hail, and in Siwan some blight has appeared in light soils. The ploughing of lands for bhadoi and jute has begun in the Rajshahi Division. The pressing of sugarcane is proceeding, and potatoes, mustard, and other early spring crops are being gathered. The price of rice has fluctuated in a few places, but on the whole it has been stationary for some weeks past.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—For week ending 9th February.—Light rain has fallen in most districts and has benefited the unirrigated crops; in some districts, however, the showers were accompanied by hail. The crops on irrigated lands are reported to be doing well. More rain is required. Sowings of sawan (Panicum miliaceum) and other extra crops are in progress and peas are being gathered. Markets are fully supplied. Prices remain steady.

Punjab.—For week ending 7th February.—A fall of ⅛ of an inch is reported from one tahsil of the Rawalpindi district, and ½ inch in Umballa district. No rain elsewhere. Sugarcane is still being pressed in some districts.

Extra spring sowings have commenced in Amritsar. The condition of irrigated crops is generally good; unirrigated crops are suffering from want of rain, which is badly needed in most districts. Stocks of food-grain are sufficient. Locusts are reported in parts of Shahpur, but no damage has been done. Crops on land dependent on rain have been damaged by insects in Delhi. Caterpillars are reported to have injured the rapeseed crop in parts of Ferozepore. The condition of cattle is poor in Sialkot and in parts of Dera Ismail Khan; fair in Delhi, and good elsewhere. Fodder is scarce in Sialkot and in parts of Amritsar and Dera Ismail Khan and is becoming scarce in Jullundar; elsewhere it is sufficient. Prices have risen in Shahpur, fallen in Peshawar, and are almost unchanged elsewhere. Wheat is selling from 10¾ to 13¼, gram 11½ to 12¾; barley 19, great millet 19, bulrush millet 16 to 22, maize 17½ to 21½, and rice 10 to 10½ seers per rupee.

Central Provinces.—For week ending 7th February.—The weather was somewhat cloudy during the latter part of week with light rain in Saugor, Jubbulpore, Raipur, and Sambalpur. The winter crops are generally in fair to good condition, though they have suffered to some extent in places from want of rain and from the attacks of insects. Some of them are being reaped and others are ripening. An estimated yield of 12 annas is reported from Chhindwara. Fodder is growing scarce in portions of Sambalpur. The price of jowar has risen in Nimar and Chanda, and of rice in Mandla, Nagpur, and Chanda; the rise is due to exports to Madras; elsewhere prices have fallen or are stationary. Relief is confined to 228 sick in poor-houses and 195 children in orphanages.

Burma.—For week ending 5th February.—In Lower Burma threshing is nearly completed. In Upper Burma reaping of wet weather paddy is completed. Cultivation of dry weather paddy and miscellaneons crops is progressing and crops promise well. Reaping of jowar and maize is completed in Myingyan and of sesamum in Sagaing. Hailstorms have caused slight damage to peas in Mandalay. The price of paddy has risen slightly in Rangoon, Thongwa, Bassein, Tavoy, Thayetmyo, Pakoku, and Mandalay, and has fallen slightly in Prome; elsewhere it is stationary.

Assam.—For week ending 8th February.—Slight rainfall in all districts has been beneficial to fodder crops and to new tea clearances. Land is being prepared for summer paddy in most districts of the Assam Valley. Ploughing of land for low land late rice has commenced in Sylhet. Gathering of pulses and mustard, pressing of sugarcane, and pruning of tea continue. Condition of cattle is fair. Prices—common rice—Sylhet 12½, Gauhati and Sibsagar 12, Dhubri 11½, Tezpur 10½, Silchar 10, Nowgong and Dibrugarh 9 seers per rupee. Fodder is scarce in the Khasi and Jaintia Hills and Naga Hills and in parts of Cachar.

Mysore and Coorg.—For week ending 7th February.—MYSORE: The standing crops are in good condition. Prices have fallen slightly in Mysore and Hassan and have risen in Shimoga. Ragi (Eleusine coracana) has been harvested in parts of Kolar.

COORG: Threshing of rice and ragi (Eleusine coracana) has commenced. Coffee-picking continues. Prices of food-grains are stationary. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Berar and Hyderabad.—For week ending 7th February.—BERAR: The weather is cool. Picking of cotton and threshing of jowar are in progress. The winter crops are in fair condition. Fodder and water-supply are ample. Prices are almost stationary. Prices—Jowar—Akola 22, Amraoti 21, Basim 20, Buldana 22, Ellichpur 22, Wun 23 seers per rupee.

HYDERABAD: No rain during the week. The spring harvest has commenced in parts. Prices of grain are almost stationary. Prices—wheat—5, coarse rice 6½, and jowari 11¾ seers per current sicca rupee.

Rajputana.—For week ending 9th February.—Rainfall—Bikanir 7 cents and Suratgarh 12 cents. Standing crops are in good condition and prospects are fair to good. Agricultural stock is in fair condition in Meywar and Bikanir and good elsewhere. Pasturage or fodder is sufficient. Prices are falling in three States ; fluctuating in one ; and are steady elsewhere.

Central India.—For week ending 7th February.—Some rain fell at Indore during the week. Rain is urgently needed in the Bundelkhand and Bhopawar Agencies. The condition of the standing crops is good throughout Central India. Agricultural stock is in good condition. Pasturage is good and sufficient in all Agencies. Prices are falling in Bundelkhand, Baghelkhand and Bhopawar; and are steady elsewhere. The opium crops are in good condition in Gwalior, Bhopal, and Malwa.

Kashmir—For week ending 8th February.—The weather is fine. Prices continue below normal.

Jammu Province.—For week ending 8th February.—No rain. Prices are stationary.

Nepal.—For week ending 7th February.—Rain 1·42. From the evening of the 4th to the evening of the 5th there have been several good showers accompanied by thunderstorms, and for a few minutes by very small hailstones. The rains have considerably intensified the cold, but they will do good to the crops. Price 8 seers per rupee.

CIVIL VETERINARY ADMINISTRATION.

Calcutta, the 17th February 1898.

No. 352—143-3.—The following Proclamation which has been forwarded to the Government of India by the Government of South Australia is published for general information.

J. B. FULLER,

Offg. Secretary to the Government of India.

FOR PREVENTING THE INTRODUCTION OF RINDERPEST FROM INDIA.

By virtue of the provisions of "The Stock Diseases Act, 1888," I, the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Executive Council, for the purpose of preventing the introduction into South Australia of the disease in cattle known as rinderpest or cattle plague, do hereby prohibit, for a period of two years, the importation or introduction into South Australia from India of cattle, sheep, camels, goats, deer, the carcass of any stock, the whole or any part of the wool, skin, hide, bones, hair, horns, hoofs, or other portion of the carcass of any stock, and hay, straw, litter, manure, and fittings: And I declare that all cattle, sheep, camels, goats, deer, the carcass of any stock, or any part thereof, and all fodder and fittings (except returned fodder and fittings, to be dealt with as hereinafter mentioned), if brought to any port in South Australia contrary to this proclamation, may be seized by an inspector and forfeited and destroyed, or otherwise disposed of as the Commissioner of Crown Lands may direct: And I also declare that all returned fodder and fittings shipped in connection with horses exported from Australia to India may be admitted into South Australia on a permit by the Chief Inspector of Stock after such treatment or disinfection as he may direct, but not otherwise: And I direct that this proclamation shall take effect from the day of the publication thereof in the Government Gazette.

Given under my hand and the public seal of South Australia, at Adelaide, this tenth day November, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven.

By command,

S. & B., 486-97.

NOTICES.

All communications relating to Act V (the Inventions and Designs Act) of 1888 should be addressed to the "Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture (PATENTS BRANCH), CALCUTTA".

The office of the Secretary under the Act is open for the transaction of business from 11 A.M. to 4 P.M. on all days except Sundays and gazetted holidays.

The Government of India are advised that, as trade marks are not "designs" within the meaning of the Act, they cannot be registered under Part II.

The fees payable under the fourth and sixth schedules are now collected in cash, and applicants are warned that they must be responsible for any delay in cashing cheques.

Copies of the weekly notifications, and of the quarterly lists, of applications and specifications filed in the Secretary's office are now on sale to the public at one anna and eight annas a copy, respectively.

Attention is requested to the rules made by the Government on the 10th October, 1895, in regard to the preparation of applications, specifications and drawings.

All applications made under the Inventions and Designs Act, V of 1888, will from this date (December 19th, 1896) lie in the visitors' room of the Patents Office for ten days from the date of the Gazette of India in which their filing may have been notified; or, if the tenth day is a holiday, till the evening of the office day next following.

At the time of delivering or sending an application for leave to file a specification, the applicant shall cause a duplicate copy of the application to be delivered or sent therewith to the Secretary.

A. T. PRINGLE,

Offg. Secy. under the Inventions and Designs Act, 1888.

THE RESIDENT IN MYSORE.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Bangalore, the 8th February, 1898.

No. 595.—The Resident in Mysore is pleased to direct that the following amendments be made in the Rules issued under his Notification No. 2798, dated the 5th July, 1897:—

In Rule 1 for the words "District Magistrate" / "District Judge" substitute "Collector".

The 5th February 1898.

No. 544.—Notice is hereby given that the right to sell country Beer and Porter in each of the 30 taverns in the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore, specified in the subjoined schedule, for the year beginning 1st April, 1898 and ending 31st March, 1899, will be put up to public auction at the up-set annual prices specified therein. The sale will be conducted by the Collector, or by an officer specially deputed with the sanction of the Resident for this purpose, in the Mayo Hall, commencing at 12 noon on Thursday, the 10th March, 1898.

2. Each bidder at the auction will deposit a sum of R50 previous to bidding. The taverns will, subject to the provisions of the next succeeding clause, be knocked down to the approved highest bidder above the up-set price mentioned in the aforesaid schedule, subject to formal confirmation by the Collector, who will be at liberty to accept or reject the bid at his discretion, without assigning reasons for the same; such formal confirmation will, unless revised by the Resident for special reasons, be tantamount to an acceptance of the bid, and will be necessary whether the sale be held by the Collector himself, or by any other officer deputed as mentioned in clause 1. Parties intending to bid must attend either in person or by duly accredited agents.

3 As soon as the auction is completed, the deposits made by the unsuccessful bidders, if not forfeited as hereinafter provided, will be returned to them. As the auction proceeds, the person whose bid is accepted for each tavern, shall at once deposit a sum equal to a half a month's rent for that tavern. Should he fail to do so, the deposit made by him under clause 2 will be forfeited, the tavern will at once be put up again on the above conditions, and he will be debarred from bidding again for the same, or for any other tavern.

4. Persons to whom taverns have been knocked down, and who have made deposits as provided in clauses 2 and 3, shall also within seven days from the date of the auction, deposit such further sum as, with the 1st and 2nd deposits will make up an amount equal to two months' rent of each tavern knocked down to them, and shall take out licenses in the appended form A, on the conditions hereinafter set forth. On the failure of any person to make the deposit, or to take out licenses as aforesaid, the tavern or taverns will be re-sold at the risk of such person, or, if the auction hereby notified, has already been completed, will be otherwise disposed of at the discretion of the Collector of the Civil and Military Station.

5. Re-sales effected under clause 4 will be at the risk of the defaulting bidder, who will forfeit all gain, and in the event of a loss by re-sale, he will make good the deficiency between the total amount payable for the whole period under the terms of the original sale, and the total amount payable by the successful bidder at the re-sale. In the latter case, the forfeited deposit will be deducted from the loss arising from the re-sale, and the remainder, if any, will be recovered from the bidder in the same manner, as if it were an arrear of land revenue. Should, however, the forfeited deposit be greater than the loss by re-sale, the whole of such deposit will be credited to Government.

6. Sales in the 33 taverns at present licensed for 9 months ending 31st December, 1897, are given in the schedule.

CONDITIONS.

1. The privilege conferred by the license, extends only to the sales of country Beer or Porter manufactured by the licensed brewers in the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore or in the Nilgiris.

2. Each tavern shall be maintained in or close to the existing tavern as described in the schedule.

3. The amount for which the privilege has been purchased, shall be payable into the Resident's treasury in equal monthly instalments commencing from April 1898; each instalment shall be regarded as the rent for the month in respect of which it is payable. Each month's rent shall be payable on the 25th of the same month. The deposit of two months' rent made by the licensee will be taken in payment of the rents due for the last two months of the period of the license. Failing payment by the 25th of the same month, the Collector shall at once proceed to recover the arrears together with interest at 6 per cent. under the rules in force for the collection of land revenue, and may at his discretion cancel the license. No remission or abatement of the rent shall, on any account whatever, be claimable by the licensee.

4. The licensee shall purchase the beer to be sold in his tavern from any of the licensed brewers in the Civil and Military Station or from any licensed brewer in the Nilgiris or from their anthorised agents, and shall sell the same to the public at a price not less than 9 annas per imperial gallon.

5. The licensee of every tavern in the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore shall pay to the Municipal Commission a registration fee of R180 in two half-yearly instalments, and also a license fee of 2 rupees per hogshead on all beer sold by him in excess of 7½ hogsheads a month in each tavern.

6. The licensee shall use such measures for retail sale as may from time to time be prescribed by Government. He shall also provide himself with printed forms of account and permits, or passes for transport for beer, which forms shall be purchased from the Collector's office.

7. The remaining terms and conditions shall be as set forth in Appendix (A).

8. In case of any breach of the above conditions, either by the licensee or with his connivance or privity, by any person in his employment, or in the event of the licensee neglecting to open his shop or to carry on his business with due care and attention, it shall be competent to the Collector, to impose upon the licensee a fine not exceeding R 10 for every such breach, or at his discretion to declare the money deposited with him forfeited, and to cancel the license. When a license is so cancelled, the Collector may, at his discretion, re-sell the exclusive privilege at the risk of the licensee, and in such case all loss thereby caused shall be made good by the licensee, or the Collector may place the tavern under the direct management of Government. When a license is cancelled, and the shop is not re-sold, the rent for the remaining portion of the lease shall become due at once and shall be recovered as if it were an arrear of land revenue.

9. The penalties laid down in the last preceding clause shall not exempt the licensee or his employés from prosecution for any offence committed against the Excise Laws or Rules in force.

By Order,

K. D. ERSKINE, Captain,

First Assistant to the Resident.

PART IV.

Acts of the Governor General's Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 18th February 1898, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT NO. IV OF 1898.

An Act to amend the Indian Penal Code.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Indian Penal Code ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

XLV of 1860. Short title and commencement. 1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Penal Code Amendment Act, 1898 ; and

(2) It shall come into force at once.

XLV of 1860. Substitution of new section for section 4, Act XLV, 1860. 2. Section 4 of the Indian Penal Code is hereby repealed, and the following section is substituted therefor, namely :—

Extension of Code to extra-territorial offences. " 4. The provisions of this Code apply also to any offence committed by—

(1) any Native Indian subject of Her Majesty in any place without and beyond British India ;

(2) any other British subject within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India ;

(3) any servant of the Queen, whether a British subject or not, within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India.

Explanation.—In this section the word 'offence' includes every act committed outside British India which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under this Code.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a coolie, who is a Native Indian subject, commits a murder in Uganda. He can be tried and convicted of murder in any place in British India in which he may be found.

(b) B, a European British subject, commits a murder in Kashmir. He can be tried and convicted of murder in any place in British India in which he may be found.

(c) C, a foreigner who is in the service of the Punjab Government, commits a murder in Jhind. He can be tried and convicted of murder at any place in British India in which he may be found.

(d) D, a British subject living in Indore, instigates E to commit a murder in Bombay. D is guilty of abetting murder."

Abetment in British India of offences outside it. 3. After section 108 of the Indian Penal Code the following section shall be added, namely :— XLV of Abetment in British India of offences outside it. " 108A. A person abets an offence within the meaning of this Code who, in British India, abets the commission of any act without and beyond British India which would constitute an offence if committed in British India.

Illustration.

A, in British India, instigates B, a foreigner in Goa, to commit a murder in Goa. A is guilty of abetting murder."

Substitution of new section for section 124A, Act XLV, 1860. 4. Section 124A of the Indian Penal Code is hereby repealed, and the following section is substituted therefor, namely :— XLV of Sedition. " 124A. Whoever by words, either spoken or written, or by signs, or by visible representation, or otherwise, brings or attempts to bring into hatred or contempt, or excites or attempts to excite disaffection towards, Her Majesty or the Government established by law in British India, shall be punished with transportation for life or any shorter term, to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment which may extend to three years, to which fine may be added, or with fine.

Explanation 1.—The expression "disaffection" includes disloyalty and all feelings of enmity.

Explanation 2.—Comments expressing disapprobation of the measures of the Government with a view to obtain their alteration by lawful means, without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, do not constitute an offence under this section.

Explanation 3.—Comments expressing disapprobation of the administrative or other action of the Government without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection do not constitute an offence under this section."

Addition of new section after section 153, Act XLV, 1860.

5. After section 153 of the Indian Penal Code the following section shall be inserted, namely:—

Promoting enmity between classes.

"153A. Whoever by words, either spoken or written, or by signs, or by visible representations, or otherwise, promotes or attempts to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of Her Majesty's subjects shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both."

"Explanation.—It does not amount to an offence within the meaning of this section to point out, without malicious intention and with an honest view to their removal, matters which are producing, or have a tendency to produce, feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of Her Majesty's subjects."

Substitution of new section for section 505, Act XLV, 1860.

6. Section 505 of the Indian Penal Code is hereby repealed and the following section is substituted therefor, namely:— XLV of 1860.

Statements conducing to public mischief.

"505. Whoever makes, publishes or circulates any statement, rumour or report,—

(a) with intent to cause, or which is likely to cause, any officer, soldier or sailor in the army or navy of Her Majesty or in the Royal Indian Marine or in the Imperial Service Troops to mutiny or otherwise disregard or fail in his duty as such; or

(b) with intent to cause, or which is likely to cause, fear or alarm to the public, or to any section of the public whereby any person may be induced to commit an offence against the State or against the public tranquillity; or shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Exception.—It does not amount to an offence, within the meaning of this section, when the person making, publishing or circulating any such statement, rumour or report has reasonable grounds for believing that such statement, rumour or report is true and makes, publishes or circulates it without any such intent as aforesaid."

J. M. MACPHERSON,

Secretary to the Government of India.

Return of the number of persons in receipt of relief in districts affected by scarcity.

NOTE.—The figures are compiled from the Local Gazettes, and give the District details of the Provincial totals published weekly in the Crop and Weather summary in the Gazette of India.

Non-labouring children and other dependants of relief workers are classed as on relief works when distinguished in the local returns from persons gratuitously relieved in poor-houses or at their homes.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, February 5th, 1898.

Pressure has been unsteady during the week and the weather has been slightly disturbed over Northern India. A small depression appeared over Lower Sind on January 31st, and this was followed by showers over the North-Western Himalayas and the North Punjab on February 1st. A second depression appeared over the West Punjab on February 4th, but its effect on the weather was extremely slight. In the meantime easterly winds had set in over North-East India. These winds gave showers to Sibsagar and Silchar on the 3rd, to all the Assam stations and to North Bengal on the 4th, and to North and Central Bengal and the Gangetic Plain on the 5th. In Oudh the fall had been heavy. Over the central parts of India and the Peninsula the pressure during the week has been uniform and the weather fine. The mean temperature has been steadily lower than usual over Burma and Madras during the week and has been higher than usual elsewhere, the excess being steadily very large over the Punjab, Sind and Rajputana.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, January 30th.—Pressure had decreased everywhere and over the greater part of the country briskly to rapidly. Pressure was high over the central parts of the country and North-East India and was low over the south of the Bay. The winds were between south and east over Western, Central and North-West India and northerly over the Bay, while calms were reported from Bengal. The temperature was low for the time of year over the south and east of the Peninsula, the Central Provinces, Lower Bengal and Tenasserim, and higher than usual elsewhere. At Bickaneer the excess was 12° and at Saugor Island the deficiency was 3°·9. There was no rain or snow over India.

Monday, January 31st.—Pressure had continued to give way briskly to rapidly everywhere. The change was greatest in the north-west and a small depression was shown over Sind, while the highest pressures were reported from Assam and Upper Burma. The winds were practically unchanged in direction, but the force had risen in the north-west. The mean temperature was low over part of Burma and over the greater part of the Peninsula and was high elsewhere. At Jeypore the excess was 11°·7 and at Cuddapah the deficiency was 2°·9. Light snow had fallen over Kashmir and a shower had been received at Negapatam.

Tuesday, February 1st.—The barometer had risen briskly over North-West India and had fallen briskly in Upper Burma. In other places the changes had been slight. The small depression in the north-west had moved north-east ward to the Southern Punjab and had almost filled up. Pressure was highest over the central parts of the country and was low over North-West India, the south of the Bay and Central Burma. The winds were easterly over Northern India and along the west coast of the Peninsula, generally northerly over the Bay area and generally westerly elsewhere. The force bad been strong at some north-western stations. The mean temperature remained low over Tenasserim and the greater part of the Peninsula, while it was excessive elsewhere. At Ajmere the excess was as much as 14°, while at Cocanada the deficiency was 3°·6. Showers had been received in Kashmir and the North Punjab as well as at the stations of Wellington and Negapatam.

Wednesday, February 2nd.—Pressure had decreased slightly over Bengal and the Gangetic Plain and had changed slightly and rather irregularly elsewhere. Pressure was low over the Gangetic Plain and Bengal and was high over Burma and over the Peninsula and the central parts of India, but the pressure differences were small. The wind was south-westerly at the head of the Bay, westerly over Northern India and more or less variable elsewhere. The mean temperature remained low over the greater part of the Peninsula and of Burma and high elsewhere. At Ludhiana and Jhansi the excess equalled 12°, while at Vizagapatam the deficiency was 4°. Light scattered showers of hail or rain had been received at a few stations in Northern India.

Thursday, February 3rd.—The barometer had fallen over the whole country. Pressure was low over Bengal and over the south of the Bay with a broad intervening band of high pressure. Easterly winds were setting in over Assam and North Bengal, but elsewhere the wind directions were generally unchanged. The mean temperature remained low over Burma and the southern half of the Peninsula and excessive over Northern and Central India. At Jeypore the excess was 10° and at Madras the deficiency was 4°. Assam reported light showers but there was no other rainfall.

Friday, February 4th.—The barometer had fallen briskly to rapidly over Central and North-West India and had risen briskly to rapidly over North-East India. A small depression had appeared over the Southern Punjab, while readings were highest over Assam. Easterly winds were extending over Bengal and the North-Western Provinces, but this was the only change of importance. The mean temperature remained low over Burma and the Peninsula and high elsewhere. The excess was 8°·4 at Mooltan, 8°·6 at Sialkot, 8°·5 at Jhansi and 9°·4 at Balasore, while the deficiency was 4°·7 at Madras. Showers had extended from Assam into North Bengal.

Saturday, February 5th.—A large irregularly shaped low pressure area covered Northern India, while pressure was high over East Bengal, Assam and Burma. Over the central parts of India and the Peninsula the barometric readings were very uniform. A further extension of easterly winds into North-West India had occurred, but otherwise the winds were little changed. The mean temperature was lower than usual on both sides of the Peninsula, but elsewhere the heat was excessive. The variations from the normal were:— + 8°·7 at Sialkot, + 8°·9 at Lucknow, + 8°·3 at Burdwan, — 4°·2 at Madras and — 2°·4 at Belgaum. Light showers of rain and hail had been received over the North-West Himalays, and rain at several stations in the North-Western Provinces, Bihar, North Bengal, Assam and South-East Bengal The heaviest rainfall was reported from Oudh.

Temperature.—The temperature conditions during the week have been very steady. Over Burma and the greater part of the Peninsula the weather has been steadily cooler than usual, while over the central parts of the country and Northern India the heat has equally steadily been excessive.

The following table gives the temperature data for the week:—

Province.	January 1898.		February 1898					Mean variation of week.

Mean for whole of India	+2·9	+3·6	+4·5	+4·6	+3·8	+3·8	+3·5	+3·8

The above shows that on each day of the week the mean temperature of the whole country was excessive, the coolest day being the 30th January with a mean excess of 2°·9 and the hotest being the 2nd of February when the mean excess was 4°·6. The provincial figures show that over Madras and Burma the mean temperature of each day was low relatively to the normal, and that in all other provinces, with the single exception of Bombay on the 5th, the heat was daily excessive. The excess in Sind and Rajputana on January 31st and February 1st and in the Punjab on February 1st and 2nd was very remarkable.

Rain.—The rainfall table at the close of the summary shows that during the week under review rain has been received in twenty-one of the rainfall divisions as compared with twenty-four divisions last week. Of these twenty-one divisions fifteen received an average actual rainfall exceeding 0·10" and six received an average fall of less than 0·10". The fifteen divisions which received effective rainfall included the three Assam divisions, Central and North Bengal, the Bengal Hills, the two Bihar divisions, the two Oudh divisions, the North-Western Provinces Submontane and Hills divisions, and the North and Hills divisions of the Punjab. In all other parts of the Indian region rain was either altogether absent or so light as to be unimportant. The average actual rainfall in the divisions reporting effective falls ranged from 1·35" in Assam (Surma), 0·92" in the Assam Hills, 0·88" in the Brahmaputra Valley, 0·87" in South Bihar, 0·82" in the Bengal Hills and 0·77" in North Oudh to 0·12" in the Hill division of the North-Western Provinces. The rainfall of the week was in excess of the normal average in ten divisions, viz., all the Assam divisions, North Bengal, the Bengal Hills, South and North Bihar, South and North Oudh, and the North-Western Provinces (East Submontane). In all other places the rainfall was less than usual.

From January 2nd to date the rainfall has been heavier than usual in Central Burma, Assam, East Bengal, Deltaic Bengal, Central Bengal, North Bengal, South Bihar, Malabar and South Madras and has been lighter than usual in all the remaining divisions. Over the west of the Peninsula, the central parts of the country, North Bombay, and the greater part of the centre and east of the Peninsula there has been no rain throughout, and over the Punjab and part of the North-Western Provinces the deficiency is considerable to large.

The following were the principal large totals during the week under review :—

Assam	Karimganj (Sylhet)	2·50"
Bengal	Naugaon (Rajshahi)	1·12"
"	Peerganj (Rangpur)	1·63"
Bihar	Barh (Patna)	4·70"
Oudh	Gonda	2·32"
N.-W. Provinces	Bansi (Basti)	2·20"

W. L. DALLAS,

Asst Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India.

SIMLA, the 10th February 1898.

J. B FULLER,

Offg. Secretary to the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weekly Report on the state of the Season and Prospects of the Crops.

Madras.—For week ending 12th February.—Except in Cuddapah there was general rain during the week. Heavy local storms occurred averaging over two inches in Vizagapatam, and over one inch in Godaveri and Kistna. There were slight showers in parts of Bellary, Chingleput, Tanjore, and South Canara. The water-supply is generally insufficient, except in Malabar and in parts of the Circars and the Deccan Agricultural operations continue. The effect of the recent local storms on crops has not yet been ascertained, but some benefit to late dry crops must result. The harvest continues and the outturn of crops is generally middling. Pasture and fodder are getting scanty. The condition of cattle is normal. Prices are generally slightly easier, except in Chingleput, South Arcot, North Arcot, and Trichinopoly. There is no marked improvement in prospects.

Bombay.—For week ending 14th February.—There was rain throughout the presidency and it has been slightly injurious to crops in four districts. Crops have been damaged by blight, cold, or locusts in six districts. Cotton is poor in Bijapur and Dharwar. Harvesting of late crops is progressing in seven, and preparations for next season in four, districts. Fodder is sufficient. Agricultural stock is healthy. Prices have fallen in six districts and are almost stationary elsewhere. The price of jowari in Sholapur was $14\frac{18}{20}$ seers per rupee. The average number on relief works, including dependants, was—Sholapur 8,648; of whom 8,078 are relief workers and 570 dependants. On gratuitous relief—Sholapur 4,095.

Bengal.—For week ending 14th February.—There was rain over the greater part of the province during the week. The rain has benefited the spring crops generally, but in parts of Darbhanga and Monghyr the crops in flower are reported to have been slightly damaged. Prospects of the poppy crop are favourable. In Monghyr the late-sown poppy plants have improved. Boro or spring rice is being transplanted and is doing well. Ploughing is going on in several parts of Bengal Proper. Mustard, potatoes, and other early spring crops are still being gathered, and the pressing of sugarcane is in progress. There has been no marked change in prices for some weeks past. The fodder-supply is generally sufficient except at Kurigram in Rangpur and in the flooded tracts of Champaran.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—For week ending 16th February.—Good rain fell throughout the provinces, greatly benefiting the spring crops, especially those on unirrigated lands. Slight damage from hail is reported in some districts. Poppy is doing well and prospects are very favourable. Markets are well supplied and prices show a tendency to fall in places.

Punjab.—For week ending 14th February.—Rain has fallen all over the province, averaging from $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch to 5 inches. Sugarcane-pressing is still going on in some districts. Extra spring crops are being sown in Amritsar. The recent rains have benefited the crops and improved their condition in all districts and good harvests are expected. Stocks of food-grain are sufficient. Cattle are generally in good condition except in parts of Dera Ismail Khan. Fodder is scarce in parts of Amritsar and Dera Ismail Khan; and sufficient elsewhere. Prices are rising slightly in Peshawar, are unchanged in Delhi, Mooltan, and Lahore; and are falling elsewhere.

G

Wheat is selling from 10¾ to 15, gram 11½ to 13, barley 19, bulrush millet 18 to 23, maize 17½ to 22½, and great millet 19 seers per rupee.

Central Provinces.—For week ending 14th February.—General rain fell at the beginning of the week but the weather has since cleared. The heaviest falls were in Chanda 5½ inches; Seoni nearly 4½; Bhandara 3½; Damoh, Jubbulpore, and Mandla over 3; elsewhere the falls varied between a half and two and a half inches, except in Nimar which received only a few cents. Hailstorms are reported from Saugor, Jubbulpore, Narshinghpur, Hoshangabad, Betul, and Nagpur, but the damage done is believed to have been slight. The rain has done a little harm to some of the spring pulses and to produce lying on the threshing floors, but its general effect has been to materially improve the condition of the wheat crop, especially all that was sown late. The price of juar is generally steady or falling, except for a slight rise in Wardha and Nagpur; the price of rice has risen in Bhandara, Balaghat, and Raipur. Relief confined to 187 sick in poor-houses and 151 children in orphanages.

Burma.—For week ending 12th February.—In Lower Burma threshing is completed in five districts. In Upper Burma sowing of dry weather crops continues. Harvesting of cotton, wheat, gram, peas, and beans has begun in some districts. The standing crops are generally in good condition. The price of paddy has risen slightly in Akyab, Thongwa, and Pakokku; and fallen slightly in Rangoon, Amherst, Thayetmyo, Mandalay, and Bhamo; elsewhere it is stationary.

Assam.—For week ending 15th February.—The weather is seasonable. Land is under preparation for summer paddy in most districts of the Assam Valley and for low land late rice in Sylhet. Gathering of pulses and mustard, pressing of sugarcane, and pruning of tea are in progress. Prices of common rice—Sibsagar 12, Sylhet and Dhubri 11½, Gauhati 11, Tezpur 10½, Silchar 10, and Nowgong and Dibrugarh 9 seers per rupee Fodder is insufficient in Cachar, the Khasi and Jaintia Hills and the Naga Hills.

Mysore and Coorg.—For week ending 16th February.—MYSORE: Prospects are fair. Paddy has been harvested in parts of Kolar and Shimoga, and sown in Chitaldrug. Prices have risen slightly in Kolar, Chitaldrug, and Kadur, but have fallen in Tumkur and Shimoga.

COORG: Threshing of rice and ragi (Eleusine coracana) continues. Coffee-picking is nearly completed. Prices of food-grains are stationary. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Berar and Hyderabad.—For week ending 14th February.—BERAR: Weather is cool and cloudy. Standing crops are in good condition. Cotton-picking and threshing of jowar continue. Of the winter crops wheat is in ear and linseed in pod. Ploughing of fields for the next monsoon crop has commenced. Fodder and water are enough for requirements. Prices show a tendency to fall. Prices—jowar—Akola 22, Amraoti 22, Basim 20, Buldana 24, Ellichpur 22, and Wun 23 seers per rupee.

HYDERABAD: Rainfall during the week 69 cents. The spring crops which are fit for harvest are likely to suffer by the rain which has been general throughout; but the winter rice crops of the Telingana district are much benefited. Prices of grain are almost stationary. Wheat—5½, coarse rice 6¾, and jowari 11¾ seers per current sicca rupee.

Rajputana.—For week ending 16th February.—There was general rain during the week amounting to four inches in Bhurtpore, two inches in Tonk and Dholepore, over one inch in Deoli, Kerowlee, Bundi, Ulwar, Jeypore, Pertabgarh, Jhallawar, Kotah, and Jeysulmere, and half an inch in Kherwara, Meywar, Marwar, Sirohi, Abu, and Ajmere. There were showers also in Shahpura, Bikanir, and Kishengarh. The standing crops and prospects are good. The condition of agricultural stock is fair to good. Pasturage or fodder is sufficient. Prices are rising in two States; falling in five; and are steady elsewhere.

Central India.—For week ending 14th February.—Rain fell throughout Central India during the week. More rain is wanted in the Bhopawar agency. The condition of the standing crops and the probable outturn are good in all agencies. Agricultural stock and pasturage are good everywhere. Prices are falling in Bundelkhand, Baghelkhand, and Bhopawar; and are steady elsewhere. The opium crops are in fairly good condition in Gwalior, Bhopal, Malwa, but are slightly injured by the rain in Bhopawar.

Kashmir.—For week ending 15th February.—The weather is cloudy. Prices continue below normal.

Nepal.—For week ending 14th February.—Rainfall 0·57. The recent rains have done much good to the crops. The weather is now sunny and bright although some mornings are foggy. Price—8⅜ seers per rupee.

PART V.

Bills introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for making Laws and Regulations, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council, and Bills published under Rule 28.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 18th February 1898:—

We, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the list appended, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed thereto.

2. All the amendments proposed by us are printed in antique type. Of these a large proportion are merely verbal and do not call for explanation or comment. All the more important are detailed in the following paragraphs of this Report.

3. Clause 4. Definitions.—We have omitted the proposed new definitions of "accused," "Court of Session" and "trial".

"Complaint."—We have restored this definition to its original form, and amended the definition of "offence" so as to make it cover acts on which proceedings under section 20 of the Cattle-trespass Act, 1871, may be founded.

"Judicial proceeding."—We have added the words "on oath" in this definition, because the power to take evidence on oath is the characteristic test of judicial proceedings. We have omitted the new words providing for consequent proceedings which the Bill as introduced proposed to add to the definition, as they appear to be too wide. On the other hand, we have altered the word "means" at the commencement of the definition into "includes" and have thus given the Courts a certain latitude of construction.

"Pleader."—At the suggestion of the Bengal Government we have restored the definition as it is in the Code of 1882.

4. Clause 9.—We have inserted here as in a more appropriate place sub-section (2) of clause 269 and sub-section (3) of clause 193 of the Bill as introduced.

V A

5. Clause 10.—In sub-section (2) we have altered the limit of time from three months to six months to meet a suggestion of the Bengal Government.

6. Clause 14.—We have added a provision to sub-section (2) to enable Special Magistrates to be appointed for a term only. This will empower Local Governments to appoint Special Magistrates on probation and also to make appointments to meet temporary emergencies.

7. Clause 17.—We have recast sub-section (4) so as to provide for urgent applications being disposed of by the District Magistrate in the frequent case where there is no Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge for the division in question.

8. We have omitted clause 20 of the Bill as introduced, on the representation of the Bombay Government that the provision has now become obsolete and is no longer required. We have broken up clause 18 into two, which will prevent any alteration in the numbering of the following clauses.

9. Clause 21.—The Government of Madras recommend that all Presidency Magistrates should be subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate in the like manner as, in a district, Magistrates are subordinate to the District Magistrate. This appears to be sound in principle, and the clause as it stands enables the Chief Presidency Magistrate, with the sanction of the Local Government, to make rules on this footing. We are informed, however, that in Calcutta the Presidency Magistrates are not considered as subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate. If this be so, we have no doubt that the Local Government in sanctioning rules under this clause will pay such regard as it thinks right to any existing practice.

10. Clause 25.—We have added to the list of ex officio Justices of the Peace, Governors, Lieutenant-Governors and Chief Commissioners.

11. Clause 29.—We have omitted the proviso to this clause and specified in the second schedule the respective Courts by which offences under other laws are triable.

12. Clause 30.—We have amended this clause so as to make it capable of application to all non-regulation provinces. We have further, on the recommendation of the Punjab Government, authorized Local Governments to invest first class Magistrates with powers under the clause.

13. Clause 31.—In accordance with the recommendation of the Judges of the Bombay High Court, we have dispensed with the necessity for confirmation of sentences passed by Assistant Sessions Judges where such sentences exceed four years. For the most part such confirmation is simply a preliminary to an appeal and interposes a useless formality which delays the hearing of the appeal on the merits.

14. Clause 34.—Similar considerations apply to the confirmation of sentences passed by specially empowered Magistrates. We have therefore dispensed with such confirmation.

15. Clause 35.—On the recommendation of the High Court, North-Western Provinces, we have empowered Courts in India, as in England, to pass concurrent, as well as consecutive, sentences of transportation and imprisonment. The effect of this change will probably be to mitigate sentences and at the same time also to discourage frivolous appeals. We have also omitted the first of the proposed illustrations to this clause, as we think it might give rise to difficulties.

16. Clause 40.—We have omitted the illustration to this clause, as we think that in the case proposed to be covered by it the officer should be re-appointed.

17. Clause 42.—We have omitted sub-clause (c), as we think the matters for which it proposed to provide are sufficiently provided for by sub-clause (b) of this clause and Chapter IX.

18. Clause 54.—We have omitted the proposed sub-section (3), as we consider that the matter can best be dealt with by local legislation relating to chaukidars and village-policemen.

19. Clause 61.—We have omitted the proposed sub section (2), as various difficulties have been pointed out in connection with its provisions.

20. Clause 83.—We have omitted the proposed sub-section (3), as we consider that the powers in question should only be exercised by the Commissioner of Police in Presidency-towns. Similar consequential alterations have also been made in clauses 85 and 86.

21. Clause 88.—We have omitted sub-section (8), as the trial of what is practically an interpleader suit in a Criminal Court might give rise to difficulty.

22. Clause 103.—We have added a new sub-section (4) so as to provide that where a person is searched under a search-warrant he shall be entitled to a list of all things taken from him.

23. Clause 107.—We have amended this clause. As it stood, proceedings could not be taken against a person outside the jurisdiction although he might be instigating a breach of the peace within the jurisdiction, but, as such extended power requires careful exercise, we have provided that the power of taking action in such cases shall only be exercised by Chief Presidency or District Magistrates.

We can find no reason for conferring powers under sub-section (3) of this clause (formerly clause 108), which relates to inferior Courts, on Courts of Session and High Courts; so we have limited the sub-section to Magistrates not empowered to act under sub-section (1).

24. Clause 108.—We have inserted as clause 108 the clause of which notice was given by the Government on the 21st December last. In inserting it we have made the following modifications:—

We have confined the jurisdiction to Chief Presidency and District Magistrates and to specially empowered Presidency and First Class Magistrates, and we have provided that the bond may be with or without sureties

We have cut out the reference to "obscene matter," as we think that that is sufficiently provided for by the ordinary law. We have explained the reference to "seditious matter" by reference to the provisions of the proposed new section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, and we have included matter punishable under the proposed new section 153A of that Code.

We have cut out the reference to "defamatory matter" as that term is much too wide, and after consideration we have substituted the words "any matter concerning a Judge which amounts to criminal intimidation or defamation under the Indian Penal Code". The term "Judge" will, of course, have the meaning assigned to it by the Indian Penal Code. This perhaps does not protect all the public officers who, we think, are entitled to protection, but it is difficult to draw any other satisfactory line.

We have considered the question whether these orders should be subject to appeal or revision, and we have come to the conclusion that they ought to be subject to revision, as the High Court can then act of its own motion as well as on the petition of the party aggrieved. In case there should be any doubt on the point, we have provided in clause 439 (6) that all orders under the Code (not expressly excepted) made by an inferior Court shall be subject to revision by the High Court.

25. Clause 110.—We have added the offence of habitual cheating to sub-clause (d), we have omitted sub-clause (c) as unnecessary, and we have substituted a more specific provision for sub-clause (f) [now sub-clause (e)], which seemed dangerously wide.

26. Clause 118.—The proposal to substitute police supervision for giving security has received very little support from any quarter, and has been strongly condemned by the Government and High Court of the North-Western Provinces. We have therefore omitted sub-section (2) of this clause.

27. Clause 124—We have re-drafted this clause in accordance with suggestions from Bombay.

28 Clause 131.—We are of opinion that the proposed extension of the powers contained in this clause to officers of volunteers is undesirable for the reasons stated by the Government of Bengal, and have therefore omitted the reference to volunteers.

29. Clause 139.—We have after consideration restored sub-section (2) of this clause to its original form, as on the whole it seems to us to be better that the verdict of the jury should be final.

30. Clause 145.—As the law stands at present, the date of the order under sub-section (1) of this clause is taken as the critical date for the purpose of determining actual possession. This appears to give an unfair advantage to a person who has forcibly dispossessed another. But difficulties arise when the test of actual possession at the time of the institution of the proceedings is departed from. We think that the proviso we have added to sub-section (4) goes as far as is possible to meet the evil in question without involving the Magistrate in an inquiry into title or right to possession, which is the function of a Civil Court.

31. Clause 157.—We have omitted the proposed addition to this clause as unnecessary.

32 Clause 160.—We have omitted the proposed proviso to this clause, as we think that the question of the attendance of parda-nashin ladies may be left to custom and controlled by executive orders.

33. Clause 161.—We have amended this clause by reverting to the law as it stood under the Codes of 1861 and 1872. Under those Codes a person examined by a police-officer was bound to answer all material questions, but was not liable to be prosecuted for giving false evidence in respect of his answers under section 193 of the Indian Penal Code (see I. L. R. 7 Cal. 121 and 10 Cal. 405). It seems to us unfair that a man should be liable to be convicted of giving false evidence on the strength or by the aid of a statement supposed to have been given to a police-officer, but which is not given on oath, which he has not signed, and which he has had no opportunity of verifying. Such statements may be hurriedly taken down as rough notes, the police-officer is not trained in taking evidence, and the notes are often faired out by another officer. They bear no resemblance to depositions, and ought to have no weight as such attached to them. We are aware that there are inconveniences in abolishing the direct liability for giving false evidence to the police, but the balance of expediency seems to us to be in favour of the old law. The provisions of sections 202 and 203 of the Indian Penal Code appear to us to afford a sufficient safeguard against false information.

34. Clause 162.—This clause, as drafted, proposed to affirm the decision of the Allahabad High Court, which was in conflict with the decision of the Calcutta High Court. The Governments of Bengal, the North-Western Provinces, Madras, Bombay and Burma and most of the authorities consulted approve the decision of the Allahabad High Court, but the question involved (namely, whether the accused is entitled to inspect statements taken down by the police under section 161) is full of difficulty. In the first place, it is essential in the interests of public justice that the sources of police information should be kept secret. If the names of informers or detectives and the nature of their information be disclosed, the detection of crime would be seriously crippled. In the second place, it is unfair to a witness that his evidence should be discredited on the strength of an alleged statement made to a policeman, which he may have had no opportunity of verifying or correcting. Such statements must necessarily be often taken down hurriedly and may be incorrectly copied out. They are not taken down as depositions, or with regard to the rules of evidence, but merely to aid the police in the course of their investigation. But, in the third place, it may be most important for the accused to show that a witness called for the prosecution is telling a story substantially different from that which he told when first questioned by the police. We have endeavoured to reconcile these conflicting interests by reverting to the language of the Codes of 1861 and 1872 and adding a proviso, compelling the Court, on the application of the accused, to refer to such statements and then empowering it in its discretion to allow him to have copies of them. We then provide for the mode in which these statements are to be used. It is clear that a witness ought not to have his credit impeached on the strength of a statement alleged to have been made to a policeman unless and until it is shown that he has made that statement.

35. Clause 167.—It has been held by the High Court of Madras that the clause does not contemplate remands for successive periods of fifteen days. We think this decision is right and have put in words to make the point clear. Any further proceedings should be taken under section 344.

36. Clause 169.—We have omitted the proposed sub-section (2), as we think that the point is sufficiently covered by clause 173 (3).

37. Clause 174.—On the suggestion of the Government of the North-Western Provinces, we have omitted the proposed new sub-section (6) as unnecessary.

38. Clause 181.—On the recommendation of the High Court, North-Western Provinces, we have made provision in this clause for the Court by which the offences of kidnapping and abduction may be inquired into or tried.

39. Clause 191.—We have recast this clause so as to make it clear, first, that the accused shall be informed of his right to be tried by another Court; and, secondly, that, if he elects not to be tried by the Magistrate, he must signify his election as soon as possible.

40. Clause 194 (2).—The practice and procedure relating to criminal informations differs in many respects from the ordinary procedure laid down by this Code, as, for example, by dispensing with the preliminary inquiry before Magistrates. Now that the provisions of section 144 of Act X of 1875 are included in the Code instead of being contained in a separate Act, it is desirable to show that they are not subject to the general provisions of this Code. We have therefore prefixed the words "Notwithstanding anything in this Code contained" to this sub-section.

41. Clause 195.—We have, after consideration, restored this section to its original form, adding provisions to explain the ambiguous expression "the Court to which appeals ordinarily lie."

42. Clause 196.—We have added to the list of offences which can only be proceeded against under the order of the Government offences under sections 108A, 153A and 505. The two latter offences resemble in substance offences against the State, and offences under section 108A involve questions affecting foreign States.

43. Clause 202.—We have substituted the words "is not satisfied as to the truth of a complaint" for "sees reason to distrust the truth of a complaint" in this clause in order to give a little further latitude to the Magistrate's discretion.

44. Clause 222.—We have inserted the proposed sub-section (3) of clause 234 in this clause and have added a qualification to prevent the charge being framed in so vague a manner as to embarrass the accused.

45. Clause 225.—In accordance with the recommendation of the Calcutta High Court, we have omitted the proposed sub-section (2), as the point aimed at appears to be sufficiently covered by clause 537.

46. Clause 250.—We have inserted a heading to this clause to show that it applies to proceedings under the following Chapters as well as under Chapter XX.

47. Clauses 256 and 257.—After careful consideration we have adopted the redraft of these clauses suggested by the Judges of the Calcutta High Court. Even under these amended clauses, the right of cross-examination may be abused and witnesses unnecessarily harassed; but we think, on the whole, that the possible abuse of the system does not justify us in making any severer restriction on the existing right of the accused.

48. Clause 260.—We have included in sub-section (1) the offence of dishonest misappropriation of property under section 403 of the Penal Code.

49. Clause 292.—We have restored this clause substantially to the form which it had in the Code of 1872 and in the High Courts Criminal Procedure Act, 1875. We think that the right of reply should depend on the fact whether the accused does or does not produce evidence.

50. Clause 310.—We have omitted the proposed new clause (c) as unnecessary.

51. Clause 320.—The definition of "Judge" given by the Indian Penal Code is too wide, as it would include Honorary Magistrates and other persons not intended to be exempted from serving on juries. We have therefore limited the exemption to salaried Judges, whose public duties occupy their whole time. We have also made express provision for the exemption of legal practitioners in actual practice. They are exempt in England, and Local Governments have already exempted them in many parts of India. We think the exemption should be universal.

52. Clause 322.—On the recommendation of the North-Western Provinces High Court, we have provided for the local publication of extracts from the jury-list instead of the whole list.

53. L.—Special Provisions for High Court.—A question was raised in connection with these clauses whether the provisions of clause 275 relating to juries in Sessions Courts should not be extended to the High Court. We consider, however, that any alteration in the existing jury laws raises far-reaching questions of great difficulty upon which it is beyond the province of this Committee to enter.

54. Clause 345.—We have omitted the proposed references to sections 428, 429 and 430 of the Indian Penal Code in sub-section (2), as many objections have been raised to making offences under these sections compoundable.

55. Clause 376.—We considered a suggestion of the Calcutta High Court that, where one accused is sentenced to death and the other accused is sentenced to transportation only, the Court should have power to inquire into the facts of the case so far as relates to the latter. We think that the law should be left as it stands, as the Court can always communicate with the Local Government if it thinks that the sentence on the accused not sentenced to death should be remitted or reduced.

56. Clause 380.—We have omitted this clause in the Bill as introduced, as for reasons already given under clause 31 we think that the appeal should lie at once without the intermediate formality of confirmation. We have substituted a clause providing the procedure to be followed when a Magistrate not empowered under clause 562 is of opinion that a first offender should be dealt with under that provision.

57. Clause 388.—We have recast the proposed new sub-section (2) so as to enable a Court at once to pass sentence of imprisonment where a person ordered to pay money fails to enter into a bond undertaking to appear if the money is not paid or recovered by distress.

58. Clause 391.—We have altered the proposed new sub-section (3) in accordance with the suggestion of the North-Western Provinces High Court.

59. Clause 392.—A question has been raised as to the meaning of the term "by way of school discipline" in this clause. We have omitted the term and empowered the Local Government to provide for the whipping of juveniles in such manner as they may think fit.

60. Clause 399.—We have amended the drafting of the proposed new sub-section (3) to make its meaning clearer.

61. Clause 408.—We have recast the first proviso [now proviso (b)] to this clause to bring it into accord with clauses 31 and 34 as proposed to be amended by us. We have also provided that, when any person is convicted by a District Magistrate for an offence under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, the appeal shall lie direct to the High Court. In the case of a Chief Presidency Magistrate this is already provided for.

62. Clause 411.—Our attention has been called to this clause, which confers on all Presidency Magistrates, whether stipendiary or honorary, final powers six times as great as those of a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate. Outside of Calcutta, we believe that Presidency Magistrates are all stipendiary Magistrates, but we are informed that in Calcutta there are over 100 Honorary Presidency Magistrates, many of whom have no legal training. We do not think it right that these extensive powers should be exerciseable by non-stipendiary Magistrates, but, as there appears to be difficulty about differentiating their powers from those of stipendiary Magistrates, we have substituted three months for six months as the amount of the maximum sentence which can be given by any Presidency Magistrate without appeal.

63. Clause 431.—We think that an appeal against a sentence of fine should not abate by reason of the death of the accused, because it is a matter which affects his estate. We have accordingly excepted this case.

64. Clause 435.—We have restored this clause to its original form except that we have included in sub-section (3) proceedings under Chapter XII.

65. Clause 437.—We have restored this clause to its original form, as the proposed addition might give rise to difficulties.

66. Clause 438.—We have added a sub-section to enable an Additional Sessions Judge to exercise the power of a Sessions Judge under this chapter in cases transferred to him by the Sessions Judge.

67. Clause 439.—In accordance with various suggestions made we have modified sub-section (5) of this clause by providing that a party who is entitled to appeal and does not choose to exercise his right shall not be entitled to apply for revision. This will not interfere with the right of a revisional Court to interfere of its own motion where it is of opinion that substantial justice has not been done. We have also, as noticed above under clause 108, added a saving [sub-section (6)] of the general right of revision.

68 Clause 465.—We have omitted the proposed new sub-section (3) to which objection has been taken

69. Clause 476.—We have omitted the proposed new sub-section (3) as the matter can more conveniently be dealt with in clause 537.

70. Clause 480.—We have omitted the proposed reference to section 174 of the Penal Code as we think that the procedure of this clause should be confined to offences committed in the presence of the Court.

71. Clause 487.—We have omitted the reference to Presidency Magistrates in this clause as they are now sufficiently numerous to prevent any difficulty arising if the clause is made applicable to them.

72. Clause 503.—It may be inconvenient that a Resident in a Native State should himself be required to take evidence on commission. We have therefore provided by a new sub-section (4) for the delegation by him of his functions to an officer who has not less than first class magisterial powers.

73. Clause 507.—Various High Courts have held that the depositions taken under this chapter are only evidence in the Court from which the commission issued, and that if the evidence is required in another Court a fresh commission must issue. We have therefore provided that depositions may, subject to certain qualifications, be received at subsequent stages of the case.

74. Clause 512.—The Bombay High Court have suggested that the provisions of this clause should be extended to cases where the offender is unknown and should not be confined to cases where he has absconded We think, however, that a distinction should be drawn between the two cases, and therefore in adopting the Bombay High Court's suggestion we have provided that this procedure shall only apply to cases of great gravity, that it should only be put in force under an order of the High Court, and that mere delay, expense or inconvenience in obtaining the presence of the deponent should not be sufficient ground for making the deposition evidence against the person subsequently accused.

75. Clause 537.—We have omitted the words "whether interlocutory or final" proposed to be inserted after the word "orders," as we think they are unnecessary, having regard to the provisions of clause (a). We have added an Explanation which does not fetter the discretion of the Courts, but which directs their attention to the question whether objections for want of form have been taken at the earliest opportunity. This seems obviously right.

76. Clause 544.—The Bombay Government have suggested that restrictions should be imposed on the payment of the expenses of witnesses who are unnecessarily summoned. We think that, as the clause stands, the Local Government has full power to provide for such a matter by rule and therefore that further legislation is unnecessary.

77. Clause 550.—We have inserted a new clause after clause 549 giving police-officers express power to seize property which they suspect to have been stolen. This power is assumed in clause 523, which prescribes the procedure to be followed with respect to such property when seized, but, following the precedent of section 81 of the Calcutta Police Act, 1866, we think it is better to give the power expressly.

78. Clause 556 (as re-numbered).—We have added words to the Explanation to this clause to affirm a decision of the Allahabad High Court that a Magistrate is not disqualified from trying a case merely because he has had a local view. Of course, there may be other reasons arising out of his previous connection with the case which might render him unfit to try it, but these are left untouched by the clause.

79. Clause 557 (as re-numbered).—We have added a clause providing that pleaders should not sit as Honorary Magistrates in presidency-towns or districts in which they practise their profession. A pleader who has retired or is not engaged in practice in the district is often obviously the fittest person to be a Magistrate, but it is clearly wrong that a pleader should be alternating between practice and the Bench, acting one day as a Judge and another day as a pleader in the same Court. Of course, if he were appointed to act in a stipendiary post, he would necessarily give up his practice while so acting and no objection would arise. Having regard to the existing state of things, we have not gone so far as the English law relating to solicitors (Justices Qualification Act, 1871, 34 & 35 Vict., c. 18), which disqualifies them from being Justices in any county in which they act. We have merely provided that pleaders shall not sit while in actual practice.

80. Clause 562 (as re-numbered). First offenders.—We have altered the drafting of this clause to provide for two points. First, we think that these powers may be exercised by all Magistrates of the first class and by specially empowered Magistrates of the second class. Secondly, we have indicated the procedure to be followed when a Second Class Magistrate or a Third Class Magistrate who is not empowered considers that an order should be passed under this section.

81. Clause 563 (as re-numbered).—We have re-drafted this clause, as we propose to confine the exercise of the power of arrest to the Court having power to pass sentence, and not, as in England, to give power to any Magistrate to order the arrest of a first offender for breach of the conditions.

82. Clause 565 (as re-numbered). Habitual offenders.—In view of the strong objections that have been made to police-supervision, we have recast these clauses. In place of an order for police-supervision we propose to substitute an order simply requiring an habitual offender on release to give notice of his intended residence to the police; and we have empowered Local Governments, with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, to make rules providing the manner in which notice of residence or change of residence is to be given.

83. Schedule II.—We have considered the proposal given notice of by the Government to make offences under section 124A of the Penal Code triable by Presidency Magistrates or Magistrates of the first class. We think it better to confine the jurisdiction in such cases to Chief Presidency and District Magistrates. We have, as already noticed, guarded this new jurisdiction by providing for an appeal to the High Court.

84. We have placed offences under section 153A of the Indian Penal Code on the same footing as offences under section 505 of that Code are at present, except that we have taken away the jurisdiction of Second Class Magistrates.

85. We have altered the Courts by which offences under section 211 of the Penal Code are triable, empowering Presidency Magistrates and Magistrates of the first class to try cases punishable with imprisonment for seven years or upwards.

86. On the recommendation of the Punjab Government, we have extended the power to try cases under sections 365, 369, 377, 382, 401, 435, 440, 465, 468 and 471 of the Penal Code to Presidency Magistrates and Magistrates of the first class.

* Minute of Dissent appended.
† I have signed subject to the remarks embodied in the Note of Dissent appended hereto.

I sign the Report subject to the following observations :—

Section 108.—This is a most objectionable section. Simply on information, which may or may not be true, any person, alleged to be disseminating or attempting to disseminate, or in anywise abetting the dissemination of, seditious matter or any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 153A, may be required to give security for good behaviour, and on failing to give such security may be rigorously imprisoned. This section should, therefore, be omitted. If it is, however, retained, it should not be put into force without previous Government sanction; all orders made under it should be subject to appeal to, and revision by, the High Court; the period of security should be reduced to one month and sureties should not be required.

Section 145, clause (4), proviso.—On re-consideration I reserve my opinion until discussion in Council.

Sections 162 and 172.—I believe these sections, as now modified, will do. But I reserve my opinion regarding them.

Section 275.—In a trial by jury before the High Court, just as before the Court of Session, a majority of the jury should, at the option of the accused, consist of persons neither Europeans nor Americans. In all cases both before the High Court and the Court of Session the trial should be by jury.

Section 439, clause (5).—This section should be omitted as unnecessarily harsh.

Section 526, clause (8).—The trial should not proceed beyond the stage at which the accused is called on for his defence. The appeal, if final, should not be heard; the result of the application should be awaited.

Schedule II, column 8, section 124A.—The offence created by this section should be heard by the High Court and by the Court of Session, and not by any inferior Court. The trial should be by jury. The rest of the Bill seems to be reasonable. But I reserve my opinion until discussion in Council.

The 16th February, 1898. R. M. SAYANI.

I am glad to express my obligations to my Hon'ble Colleagues on the Select Committee for the courtesy and forbearance shown by them towards me, in the course of a protracted discussion that we had, from day to day, in connection with the several provisions and amendments in the draft Criminal Procedure Code. They have, however, not been able to agree with me as to some points; and it is only in respect of them that I feel bound to give expression to my dissentient views.

Clause 108.—The insertion as clause 108 of the clause of which notice was given by the Government on the 21st December last is, I submit, objectionable. Besides other exceptions to which it is open, the extension of the powers it confers is not safeguarded by a right of appeal to the High Court; while the scope of the clause is calculated to bring all Newspapers under a complete control of Magistrates, many of whom might not be indisposed to give effect to the provisions of the clause upon mere information. It is desirable also to subject the initiation of proceedings under this clause, if it is allowed to stand in its present form, to the sanction of the Local Government, which is already provided for prosecutions either under section 124A or the proposed new section 153A.

Orders under this clause have no doubt been made subject to Revision by High Court, but that procedure would place a person concerned rather under a considerable disadvantage, as, under sub-section (1) of section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the High Court may, in its discretion, exercise any of the powers conferred on a Court of appeal by certain Sections specified therein. Besides, as a matter of practice, the High Courts are generally not disposed in the exercise of their Revisional powers to go into questions of appreciation of the weight of evidence.

Clause 162.—This clause, as drafted, substantially affirms a recent ruling of a majority of the Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court, which I understand is in conflict with the decisions of the Calcutta High Court.

As the proviso attached to sub-section (1) of section 162 stands, it would, I think, be difficult, if not impracticable, for an accused person to prove a statement alleged to have been made to a Policeman, unless or until such person were to call the Policeman himself as his own witness.

Such a step would ordinarily prove dangerous to the defence of an accused person, as a policeman, being in the attitude of a hostile witness, might on cross-examination depose to matters tending to prejudice the defence seriously.

Clause 172 (2).—In this sub-section (2) the words "but to aid it in such inquiry or trial" should be eliminated. It is not just that a document, forming a part of the "Brief" for Prosecution, should be permitted to be looked into by a Court conducting an enquiry or a trial, in absence, or without the knowledge, of an accused person, when he or his agent can have no access to such a document, it being a "sealed book" to him.

Clause 439(5).—This sub-section (5) tends to deprive the accused of the benefit of double remedy, which has been allowed to him under the existing law. It is rather unreasonable that while the High Court is to exercise, on its own motion, the power of Revision, even in a case of this description, the party aggrieved is denied the right of moving it for the same purpose.

Clause 526(8).—The proposal for conferring on the trying Magistrate the power of rejecting an application for leave to move the High Court for the transfer of a case is not a sound one I may be allowed to invite the attention of the Council to the remarks of the Hon'ble Mr. Ilbert on the subject, in the Report of the proceedings of this Council dated the 25th January, 1884 An Application of the kind referred to in this clause is ordinarily made by the accused, and very seldom, or I should say rarely, by the Public Prosecutor or the Complainant. The power conferred upon a trying Magistrate is, I apprehend, liable to be abused where his mind is prejudiced with local feelings or like causes.

L Special Provision for High Court.—I regret I am unable to appreciate the force of the observation made in the Report in connection with a question raised as to the composition of jury. I see no reason why the provisions of clause 275 of Criminal Procedure Code, relating to juries in Sessions Court, should not be extended as well to Trials held before the High Court in the Presidency-towns. The existing distinction as to the exercise and application of powers under the jury system is, to say the least, most illogical, if not invidious.

Schedule II, sections 124A and 153A of Column 8.—The alteration proposed to be made here, for making offences under sections 124A and 153A triable by the Chief Presidency or District Magistrate, is open to a grave objection. There is no question of lending undue eclat or of giving notoriety to proceedings in cases of sedition. In absence of a specific provision in the Code, allowing such Trials to be held in the mufassal with the aid of jury, it is desirable, in the ends of justice, that persons accused of offences of sedition should be triable by independent Tribunals commanding the confidence of the people, so that no cause for any supposed distrust might arise.

A High Court or Sessions Court allowed to try cases with the aid of jury or assessors would generally be preferable to a District Magistrate, as in majority of instances such Prosecutions are likely to originate on his motion; and ordinarily he is the chief Executive authority also. If the law of sedition here is to be assimilated to the law of Great Britain, why should not the same safeguards be extended here which the humanity of the law allows there?

The Code provides remedy in such cases for applying for leave to transfer to High Court, but the procedure is attended with difficulties against which an accused person would have to contend, presumably to his disadvantage.

I would reserve my opinion as to one or two points.

BISHAMBAR NATH.

The 16th February, 1898.

I sign this Report with the following reservations:—

I disapprove of section 145 (4), proviso. The object of this can in my opinion be abundantly attained under the present law. It is distinctly an alteration of that law in respect of the power that it proposes to confer on a Magistrate, while no opportunity has been given to Local Governments or High Courts to express their opinion on this amendment. And all these authorities, except the Local Governments of Bengal and Assam, have approved of the present law as emphasized by the Bill Lastly, it is a very dangerous innovation, and it is one that in my opinion is almost certain to lead to a practice which is altogether opposed to the principle of all trials, and thus will cause disastrous consequences to the party against whom such an order is passed. On the other hand, if a Magistrate gives such a party an opportunity of meeting the case which he may think is primâ facie established, but which I may observe is not on the issue to which the proceedings have up to this time been directed, the proceedings will cease to have their summary character, and thus lose their principal recommendation. I shall take an opportunity, on an amendment to omit this proviso, to explain myself more fully At present I merely state generally the grounds upon which I shall proceed.

In respect of the new section 108, as I understand that some of the members of this Committee will move an amendment disapproving of it, I reserve my opinion in regard to the manner in which this section is to operate as to the freedom of action by a Magistrate without sanction of Government and the finality of his order.

No. II.

A
TO Consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

PART I.
PRELIMINARY.

CHAPTER I.

Short title. Commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898; and it shall come into force on the first day of July, 1898.

Extent.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India; but, in the absence of any specific provision to the contrary, nothing herein contained shall affect any special or local law now in force, or any special jurisdiction or power conferred, or any special form of procedure prescribed, by any other law for the time being in force, or shall apply to—

(a) the Commissioners of Police in the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, or the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay;

(b) heads of villages in the Presidency of Fort St. George; or

(c) village police-officers in the Presidency of Bombay:

Provided that the Local Government may, if it thinks fit, with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, by notification in the official Gazette, extend any of the provisions of this Code, with any necessary modifications, to such excepted persons.

Repeal of enactments.

2. (1) On and from the first day of July 1898, the enactments mentioned in the first schedule shall be repealed to the extent specified in the fourth column thereof, but not so as to restore any jurisdiction or form of procedure not then existing or followed, or to render unlawful the continuance of any confinement which is then lawful Notifications, etc., under repealed Acts.

(2) All notifications published, proclamations issued, powers conferred, forms prescribed, local limits defined, sentences passed and orders, rules and appointments made, under any enactment hereby repealed, or under any enactment repealed by any such enactment, and which are in force immediately before the first day of July, 1898, shall be deemed to have been respectively published, issued, conferred, prescribed, defined, passed and made under the corresponding section of this Code.

Pending cases.

(3) The provisions of this Code shall apply to all proceedings instituted after the commencement of this Code, and, so far as may be, to all cases pending in any Criminal Court when this Code comes into force.

References to Code of Criminal Procedure and other repealed enactments.

3. (1) In every enactment passed before this Code comes into force, in which reference is made to, or to any chapter or section of, the Code of Criminal Procedure, Act XXV of 1861 or Act X of 1872, or Act X of 1882, or to any other enactment hereby repealed, such reference shall, so far as may be practicable, be taken to be made to this Code or to its corresponding chapter or section.

Expressions in former Acts.

(2) In every enactment passed before this Code comes into force the expressions "Officer exercising (or 'having') the powers (or 'the full powers') of a Magistrate," "Subordinate Magistrate, first class," and "Subordinate Magistrate, second class," shall respectively be deemed to mean "Magistrate of the first class," "Magistrate of the second class" and "Magistrate of the third class," the expression "Magistrate of a division of a district" shall be deemed to mean "Subdivisional Magistrate," the expression "Magistrate of the district" shall be deemed to mean "District Magistrate," the expression "Magistrate of Police" shall be deemed to mean "Presidency Magistrate," and the expression "Joint Sessions Judge" shall mean "Additional Sessions Judge."

PART II.

CONSTITUTION AND POWERS OF CRIMINAL COURTS AND OFFICES.

CHAPTER II.

OF THE CONSTITUTION OF CRIMINAL COURTS AND OFFICES.

A.—Classes of Criminal Courts.

6. Besides the High Courts and the Courts constituted under any law other than this Code for the time being in force, there shall be five classes of Criminal Courts in British India, namely:—
Classes of Criminal Courts.

I.—Courts of Session:
II.—Presidency Magistrates:
III.—Magistrates of the first class:
IV.—Magistrates of the second class:
V.—Magistrates of the third class.

B.—Territorial Divisions.

7. (1) Every province (excluding the presidency-towns) shall be a sessions division, or shall consist of sessions divisions: and every sessions division shall, for the purposes of this Code, be a district or consist of districts.
Sessions divisions and districts.

(2) The Local Government may alter the limits, or, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, the number, of such divisions and districts.
Power to alter divisions and districts.

(3) The sessions divisions and districts existing when this Code comes into force shall be sessions divisions and districts respectively, unless and until they are so altered.
Existing divisions and districts maintained till altered.

(4) Every presidency-town shall, for the purposes of this Code, be deemed to be a district.
Presidency-towns to be deemed districts.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part II.—Constitution and Powers of Criminal Courts and Offices. Chapter II.—Of the Constitution of Criminal Courts and Offices.—Sections 8-15.)

Power to divide districts into subdivisions.

8. (1) The Local Government may divide any district outside the presidency-towns into subdivisions, or make any portion of any such district a subdivision, and may alter the limits of any subdivision.

Existing subdivisions maintained.

(2) All existing subdivisions which are now usually put under the charge of a Magistrate shall be deemed to have been made under this Code.

C.—Courts and Offices outside the Presidency-towns.

Court of Session.

9. (1) The Local Government shall establish a Court of Session for every sessions division, and appoint a Judge of such Court.

(2) The Local Government may, by general or special order in the official Gazette, direct at what place or places the Court of Session shall hold its sitting; but, until such order be made, the Courts of Session shall hold their sittings as heretofore.

(3) The Local Government may also appoint Additional Sessions Judges, and Assistant Sessions Judges to exercise jurisdiction in one or more such Courts.

(4) A Sessions Judge of one sessions division may be appointed by the Local Government to be also an Additional Sessions Judge of another division, and in such case he may sit for the disposal of cases at such place or places in either division as the Local Government may direct.

(5) All Courts of Session existing when this Code comes into force shall be deemed to have been established under this Act.

District Magistrate.

10. (1) In every district outside the presidency-towns the Local Government shall appoint a Magistrate of the first class, who shall be called the District Magistrate.

(2) The Local Government may appoint any Magistrate of the first class to be an Additional District Magistrate for a period not exceeding six months, and such Additional District Magistrate shall have all or any of the powers of a District Magistrate under this Code as the Local Government may direct.

Officers temporarily succeeding to vacancies in office of District Magistrate.

11. Whenever, in consequence of the office of a District Magistrate becoming vacant, any officer succeeds temporarily to the chief executive administration of the district, such officer shall, pending the orders of the Local Government, exercise all the powers and perform all the duties respectively conferred and imposed by this Code on the District Magistrate.

Subordinate Magistrates.

12. (1) The Local Government may appoint as many persons as it thinks fit, besides the District Magistrate, to be Magistrates of the first, second or third class in any district outside the presidency-towns; and the Local Government, or the District Magistrate subject to the control of the Local Government, may, from time to time, define local areas within which such persons may exercise all or any of the powers with which they may respectively be invested under this Code.

Local limits of their jurisdiction.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by such definition, the jurisdiction and powers of such persons shall extend throughout such district.

Power to put Magistrate in charge of subdivision.

13. (1) The Local Government may place any Magistrate of the first or second class in charge of a subdivision, and relieve him of the charge as occasion requires.

(2) Such Magistrates shall be called Subdivisional Magistrates.

Delegation of powers to District Magistrate.

(3) The Local Government may delegate its powers under this section to the District Magistrate.

Special Magistrates.

14. (1) The Local Government may confer upon any person all or any of the powers conferred or conferrable by or under this Code on a Magistrate of the first, second or third class in respect to particular cases or to a particular class or particular classes of cases, or in regard to cases generally, in any local area outside the presidency-towns.

(2) Such Magistrates shall be called Special Magistrates, and shall be appointed for such term as the Local Government may by general or special order direct.

(3) With the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, the Local Government may delegate, with such limitations as it thinks fit, to any officer under its control the power conferred by sub-section (1).

(4) No powers shall be conferred under this section on any police-officer below the grade of Assistant District Superintendent, and no powers shall be conferred on a police officer except so far as may be necessary for preserving the peace, preventing crime and detecting, apprehending and detaining offenders in order to their being brought before a Magistrate, and for the performance by the officer of any other duties imposed upon him by any law for the time being in force.

Benches of Magistrates.

15. (1) The Local Government may direct any two or more Magistrates in any place outside the presidency-towns to sit together as a Bench, and may by order invest such Bench with any of the

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part II.—Constitution and Powers of Criminal Courts and Offices. Chapter II.—Of the Constitution of Criminal Courts and Offices.—Sections 16-21.)

powers conferred or conferrable by or under this Code on a Magistrate of the first, second or third class, and direct it to exercise such powers in such cases, or such classes of cases only, and within such local limits, as the Local Government thinks fit.

Powers exerciseable by Bench in absence of special direction.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by any order under this section, every such Bench shall have the powers conferred by this Code on a Magistrate of the highest class to which any one of its members who is present taking part in the proceedings as a member of the Bench belongs, and as far as practicable shall, for the purposes of this Code, be deemed to be a Magistrate of such class.

Power to frame rules for guidance of Benches.

16. The Local Government may, or, subject to the control of the Local Government, the District Magistrate may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Code for the guidance of Magistrates' Benches in any district respecting the following subjects:—

(a) the classes of cases to be tried;

(b) the times and places of sitting;

(c) the constitution of the Bench for conducting trials;

(d) the mode of settling differences of opinion which may arise between the Magistrates in session.

Subordination of Magistrates and Benches to District Magistrate;

17. (1) All Magistrates appointed under sections 12, 13 and 14, and all Benches constituted under section 15, shall be subordinate to the District Magistrate, and he may, from time to time, make rules or give special orders consistent with this Code as to the distribution of business among such Magistrates and Benches; and to Subdivisional Magistrate.

(2) Every Magistrate (other than a Subdivisional Magistrate) and every Bench exercising powers in a subdivision shall also be subordinate to the Subdivisional Magistrate, subject, however, to the general control of the District Magistrate.

Subordination of Assistant Sessions Judges to Sessions Judge.

(3) All Assistant Sessions Judges shall be subordinate to the Sessions Judge in whose Court they exercise jurisdiction, and he may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Code as to the distribution of business among such Assistant Sessions Judges.

(4) The Sessions Judge may also, when he himself is unavoidably absent or incapable of acting, make provision for the disposal of any urgent application by an Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge or, if there be no Additional or Assistant Judge, by the District Magistrate, and such Judge or Magistrate shall have jurisdiction to deal with any such application.

(5) Neither the District Magistrate nor the Magistrates or Benches appointed or constituted under sections 12, 13, 14 and 15 shall be subordinate to the Sessions Judge, except to the extent and in the manner hereinafter expressly provided.

D.—Courts of Presidency Magistrates.

Appointment of Presidency Magistrates.

18. The Local Government shall, from time to time, appoint a sufficient number of persons (hereinafter called Presidency Magistrates) to be Magistrates for each of the presidency-towns, and shall appoint one of such persons to be Chief Presidency Magistrate for each such town.

Benches.

19. Any two or more of such persons may (subject to the rules made by the Chief Presidency Magistrate under the power hereinafter conferred) sit together as a Bench.

Local limits of jurisdiction.

20. Every Presidency Magistrate shall exercise jurisdiction in all places within the presidency-town for which he is appointed, and within the limits of the port of such town and of any navigable river or channel leading thereto, as such limits are defined under the law for the time being in force for the regulation of ports and port-dues.

Chief Presidency Magistrate.

21. Every Chief Presidency Magistrate shall exercise within the local limits of his jurisdiction all the powers conferred on him by this Code or which by any law or rule in force immediately before this Code comes into force are required to be exercised by any Senior or Chief Presidency Magistrate, and may, from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, make rules consistent with this Code to regulate—

(a) the conduct and distribution of business and the practice in the Courts of the Magistrates of the town;

(b) the times and places at which Benches of Magistrates shall sit;

(c) the constitution of such Benches;

(d) the mode of settling differences of opinion which may arise between Magistrate in session; and

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part II.—Constitution and Powers of Criminal Courts and Offices. Chapter II.—Of the Constitution of Criminal Courts and Offices.—Sections 22-27. Chapter III.—Powers of Courts.—Sections 28-29.)

(e) any other matter which could be dealt with by a District Magistrate under his general powers of control over the Magistrates subordinate to him.

E.—Justices of the Peace.

Justices of the Peace for the Mufassal.

22. The Governor General in Council, so far as regards the whole or any part of British India outside the presidency-towns, and every Local Government, so far as regards the territories subject to its administration (other than the towns aforesaid), may, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint such European British subjects as he or it thinks fit to be Justices of the Peace within and for the territories mentioned in such notification.

Justices of the Peace for the presidency-towns.

23. The Local Government, so far as regards the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, may, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint to be Justices of the Peace within the limits of the town mentioned in such notification any persons resident within British India and not being the subjects of any foreign State whom the Local Government thinks fit.

Present Justices of the Peace.

24. (1) Every person now acting as a Justice of the Peace within and for any part of British India other than the said towns, under any commission issued by a High Court, shall be deemed to have been appointed under section 22 by the Governor General in Council to act as a Justice of the Peace for the whole of British India other than the said towns.

(2) Every person now acting as a Justice of the Peace within the limits of any of the said towns under any such commission shall be deemed to have been appointed under section 23 by the Local Government.

Ex officio Justices of the Peace.

25. In virtue of their respective offices, the Governor General, Governors, Lieutenant-Governors and Chief Commissioners, the Ordinary Members of the Council of the Governor General, the Judges of the High Courts and the Recorder of Rangoon are Justices of the Peace within and for the whole of British India, Sessions Judges and District Magistrates are Justices of the Peace within and for the whole of the territories administered by the Local Government under which they are serving, and the Presidency Magistrates are Justices of the Peace within and for the towns of which they are respectively magistrates.

F.—Suspension and Removal.

Suspension and removal of Judges and Magistrates.

26. All Judges of Criminal Courts other than the High Courts established by Royal Charter, and all Magistrates, may be suspended or removed from office by the Local Government:

Provided that such Judges and Magistrates as now are liable to be suspended or removed from office by the Governor General in Council only shall not be suspended or removed from office by any other authority.

Suspension and removal of Justices of the Peace.

27. The Governor General in Council may suspend or remove from office any Justice of the Peace appointed by him, and the Local Government may suspend or remove from office any Justice of the Peace appointed by it.

CHAPTER III.

POWERS OF COURTS.

A.—Description of Offences cognisable by each Court.

Offences under Penal Code.

28. Subject to the other provisions of this Code, any offence under the Indian Penal Code may be tried— XLV of 1860.

(a) by the High Court, or

(b) by the Court of Session, or

(c) by any other Court by which such offence is shewn in the eighth column of the Second Schedule to be triable.

Illustration.

A is committed to the Sessions Court on a charge of culpable homicide. He may be convicted of voluntarily causing hurt, an offence triable by a Magistrate.

Offences under other laws.

29. (1) Subject to the provisions of section 447, any offence under any other law shall, when any Court is mentioned in this behalf in such law, be tried by such Court.

(2) When no Court is so mentioned, it may be tried by the High Court or by any Court constituted under this Code by which such offence is shewn in the eighth column of the Second Schedule to be triable.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part II.—Constitution and Powers of Criminal Courts and Offices. Chapter III.—Powers of Courts.—Sections 30-35.)

Offences not punishable with death.

30. In the territories respectively administered by the Lieutenant-Governors of the Punjab and Burma and the Chief Commissioners of Oudh, the Central Provinces, Coorg and Assam in Sind, and in those parts of the other Provinces in which there are Deputy Commissioners or Assistant Commissioners, the Local Government may, notwithstanding anything contained in section 29, invest the District Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first class with power to try as a Magistrate all offences not punishable with death.

B.—Sentences which may be passed by Courts of various Classes.

Sentences which High Courts and Sessions Judges may pass.

31. (1) A High Court may pass any sentence authorised by law.

(2) A Sessions Judge or Additional Sessions Judge may pass any sentence authorised by law; but any sentence of death passed by any such Judge shall be subject to confirmation by the High Court.

(3) An Assistant Sessions Judge may pass any sentence authorised by law, except a sentence of death or of transportation for a term exceeding seven years, or of imprisonment for a term exceeding seven years.

Sentences which Magistrates may pass.

32. (1) The Courts of Magistrates may pass the following sentences, namely:—

(a) Courts of Presidency Magistrates and of Magistrates of the first class:	Imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, including such solitary confinement as is authorised by law; Fine not exceeding one thousand rupees; Whipping.
(b) Courts of Magistrates of the second class:	Imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, including such solitary confinement as is authorised by law; Fine not exceeding two hundred rupees. Whipping (if specially empowered).
(c) Courts of Magistrates of the third class:	Imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month; Fine not exceeding fifty rupees.

(2) The Court of any Magistrate may pass any lawful sentence, combining any of the sentences which it is authorised by law to pass.

(3) No Court of any Magistrate of the second class shall pass a sentence of whipping unless it is specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government.

Power of Magistrates to sentence to imprisonment in default of fine.

33. (1) The Court of any Magistrate may award such term of imprisonment in default of payment of fine as is authorised by law in case of such default:

Provided that—

(a) the term is not in excess of the Magistrate's powers under this Code:

Proviso as to certain cases.

(b) in any case decided by a Magistrate where imprisonment has been awarded as part of the substantive sentence, the period of imprisonment awarded in default of payment of the fine shall not exceed one-fourth of the period of imprisonment which such Magistrate is competent to inflict as punishment for the offence otherwise than as imprisonment in default of payment of the fine.

(2) The imprisonment awarded under this section may be in addition to a substantive sentence of imprisonment for the maximum term awardable by the Magistrate under section 32.

Higher powers of certain District Magistrates.

34. The Court of a Magistrate, specially empowered under section 30, may pass any sentence authorised by law, except a sentence of death or of transportation for a term exceeding seven years or imprisonment for a term exceeding seven years.

Sentence in cases of conviction of several offences at one trial.

35. (1) When a person is convicted at one trial of two or more distinct offences, the Court may sentence him, for such offences, to the several punishments prescribed therefor which such Court is competent to inflict; such punishments, when consisting of imprisonment or transportation, to commence the one after the expiration of the other in such order as the Court may direct, unless the Court directs that such punishments shall run concurrently.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part II.—Constitution and Powers of Criminal Courts and Offices. Chapter III.—Powers of Courts.—Sections 38-41. Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter IV.—Of Aid and Information to the Magistrates, the Police and Persons making Arrests.—Section 42.)

(2) In the case of consecutive sentences, it shall not be necessary for the Court, by reason only of the aggregate punishment for the several offences being in excess of the punishment which it is competent to inflict on conviction of a single offence, to send the offender for trial before a higher Court:

Provided as follows:—

Maximum term of punishment.

(a) in no case shall such person be sentenced to imprisonment for a longer period than fourteen years:

(b) if the case is tried by a Magistrate (other than a Magistrate acting under section 34), the aggregate punishment shall not exceed twice the amount of punishment which he is, in the exercise of his ordinary jurisdiction, competent to inflict.

(3) For the purpose of confirmation or appeal aggregate sentences passed under this section in case of convictions for several offences at one trial shall be deemed to be a single sentence.

XLV of 1860.

EXPLANATION.—Separable offences which come within the provisions of section 71 of the Indian Penal Code are not distinct offences within the meaning of this section.

Illustration.

A breaks into a house with intent to commit theft and steals property therein. A has not committed distinct offences.

C.—Ordinary and Additional Powers.

Ordinary powers of Magistrates.

36. All District Magistrates, Subdivisional Magistrates and Magistrates of the first, second and third classes, have the powers hereinafter respectively conferred upon them and specified in the third schedule. Such powers are called their "ordinary powers."

Additional powers conferrable on Magistrates.

37. In addition to his ordinary powers, any Subdivisional Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first, second or third class may be invested by the Local Government or the District Magistrate, as the case may be, with any powers specified in the fourth schedule as powers with which he may be invested by the Local Government or the District Magistrate.

Control of District Magistrate's investing power.

38. The power conferred on the District Magistrate by section 37 shall be exercised subject to the control of the Local Government.

D.—Conferment, Continuance and Cancellation of Powers.

Mode of conferring powers.

39. (1) In conferring powers under this Code the Local Government may, by order, empower persons specially by name or in virtue of their office, or classes of officials generally by their official titles.

(2) Every such order shall take effect from the date on which it is communicated to the person so empowered.

Continuance of powers of officers transferred.

40. Whenever any person holding an office in the service of Government who has been invested with any powers under this Code throughout any local area is transferred to an equal or higher office of the same nature within a like local area under the same Local Government, he shall, unless the Local Government otherwise directs, or has otherwise directed, continue to exercise the same powers in the local area to which he is so transferred.

Powers may be cancelled.

41. (1) The Local Government may withdraw all or any of the powers conferred under this Code on any person by it or by any officer subordinate to it.

(2) Any powers conferred by the District Magistrate may be withdrawn by the District Magistrate.

PART III.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

CHAPTER IV.

OF AID AND INFORMATION TO THE MAGISTRATES, THE POLICE AND PERSONS MAKING ARRESTS.

Public when to assist Magistrates and police.

42. Every person is bound to assist a Magistrate or police-officer reasonably demanding his aid, whether within or without the presidency-towns,—

(a) in the taking or preventing the escape of any other person whom such Magistrate or police-officer is authorised to arrest;

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter IV.—Of Aid and Information to the Magistrates, the Police and Persons making Arrests.—Sections 43-45.)

(b) in the prevention or suppression of a breach of the peace, or in the prevention of any injury attempted to be committed to any railway, canal, telegraph or public property.

Aid to person, other than police-officer, executing warrant.

43. When a warrant is directed to a person other than a police-officer, any other person may aid in the execution of such warrant, if the person to whom the warrant is directed be near at hand and acting in the execution of the warrant.

Public to give information of certain offences.

44. (1) Every person, whether within or without the presidency-towns, aware of the commission of, or of the intention of any other person to commit, any offence punishable under the following sections of the Indian Penal Code (namely), 121, 121A, 122, 123, 124. 124A, 125, 126, 130, 143, 144, 145, 147, 148, 302, 303, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 456, 457, 458, 459 and 460, shall, in the absence of reasonable excuse, the burden of proving which shall lie upon the person so aware, forthwith give information to the nearest Magistrate or police-officer of such commission or intention. XLV of 1860.

(2) For the purposes of this section the term "offence" includes any act committed at any place out of British India which would constitute an offence if committed in British India.

Village-headmen, accountants, land-holders and others bound to report certain matters.

45. (1) Every village-headman, village-accountant, village-watchman, village-police-officer, owner or occupier of land, and the agent of any such owner or occupier, and every officer employed in the collection of revenue or rent of land on the part of Government or the Court of Wards, shall forthwith communicate to the nearest Magistrate or to the officer in charge of the nearest police-station, whichever is the nearer, any information which he may obtain respecting—

(a) the permanent or temporary residence of any notorious receiver or vendor of stolen property in any village of which he is headman, accountant, watchman or police-officer, or in which he owns or occupies land, or is agent, or collects revenue or rent:

(b) the resort to any place within, or the passage through, such village of any person whom he knows, or reasonably suspects, to be a thug, robber, escaped convict or proclaimed offender;

(c) the commission of, or intention to commit, in or near such village any non-bailable offence or any offence punishable under sections 143, 144, 145, 147 or 148 of the Indian Penal Code; XLV of 1860

(d) the occurrence in or near such village of any sudden or unnatural death or of any death under suspicious circumstances;

(e) the commission of, or intention to commit, at any place out of British India near such village any act which, if committed in British India, would be an offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460; XLV of 1860.

(f) any matter likely to affect the maintenance of order or the prevention of crime or the safety of person or property respecting which the District Magistrate, by general or special order made with the previous sanction of the Local Government, has directed him to communicate information.

(2) In this section—

(i) "village" includes village-lands; and

(ii) the expression "proclaimed offender" includes any person proclaimed as an offender by any Court or authority established or continued by the Governor General in Council in any part of India in respect of any act which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460. XLV of 1860.

Appointment of village-headmen by District Magistrate in certain cases for purposes of this section.

(3) Subject to rules in this behalf to be made by the Local Government, the District Magistrate may from time to time appoint one or more persons to be village-headmen for the purposes of this section in any village for which there is no such headman appointed under any other law. [Act X of 1882, s. 45A.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter V.—Of Arrest, Escape and Retaking.-Sections 46-54.)

CHAPTER V.

OF ARREST, ESCAPE AND RETAKING.

A.—Arrest generally.

Arrest how made.

46. (1) In making an arrest the police-officer or other person making the same shall actually touch or confine the body of the person to be arrested, unless there be a submission to the custody by word or action.

Resisting endeavour to arrest.

(2) If such person forcibly resists the endeavour to arrest him, or attempts to evade the arrest, such police-officer or other person may use all means necessary to effect the arrest.

(3) Nothing in this section gives a right to cause the death of a person who is not accused of an offence punishable with death, or with transportation for life.

Search of place entered by person sought to be arrested.

47. If any person acting under a warrant of arrest, or any police-officer having authority to arrest, has reason to believe that the person to be arrested has entered into, or is within, any place, the person residing in, or being in charge of, such place shall, on demand of such person acting as aforesaid or such police-officer, allow him free ingress thereto, and afford all reasonable facilities for a search therein.

Procedure where ingress not obtainable.

48. If ingress to such place cannot be obtained under section 47, it shall be lawful in any case for a person acting under a warrant and in any case in which a warrant may issue, but cannot be obtained without affording the person to be arrested an opportunity of escape, for a police-officer to enter such place and search therein, and, in order to effect an entrance into such place, to break open any outer or inner door or window of any house or place, whether that of the person to be arrested or of any other person, if after notification of his authority and purpose, and demand of admittance duly made he cannot otherwise obtain admittance :

Breaking open zanáná.

Provided that, if any such place is an apartment in the actual occupancy of a woman (not being the person to be arrested) who, according to custom, does not appear in public, such person or police-officer shall, before entering such apartment, give notice to such woman that she is at liberty to withdraw, and shall afford her every reasonable facility for withdrawing, and may then break open the apartment and enter it.

Power to break open doors and windows for purposes of liberation.

49. Any police-officer or other person authorised to make an arrest may break open any outer or inner door or window of any house or place in order to liberate himself or any other person who, having lawfully entered for the purpose of making an arrest, is detained therein.

No unnecessary restraint.

50. The person arrested shall not be subjected to more restraint than is necessary to prevent his escape.

Search of arrested persons.

51. Whenever a person is arrested by a police-officer under a warrant which does not provide for the taking of bail, or under a warrant which provides for the taking of bail but the person arrested cannot furnish bail, and whenever a person is arrested without warrant, or by a private person under a warrant, and cannot legally be admitted to bail, or is unable to furnish bail, the officer making the arrest or, when the arrest is made by a private person, the police-officer to whom he makes over the person arrested, may search such person, and place in safe custody all articles, other than necessary wearing-apparel, found upon him.

Mode of searching women.

52. Whenever it is necessary to cause a woman to be searched, the search shall be made by another woman, with strict regard to decency.

Power to seize offensive weapons.

53. The officer or other person making any arrest under this Code may take from the person arrested any offensive weapons which he has about his person, and shall deliver all weapons so taken to the Court or officer before which or whom the officer or person making the arrest is required by this Code to produce the person arrested.

B.—Arrest without Warrant.

When police may arrest without warrant.

54. (1) Any police-officer may, without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant, arrest—first—any person who has been concerned in any cognizable offence or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made, or credible information has been received, or a reasonable suspicion exists, of his having been so concerned ;

secondly—any person having in his possession without lawful excuse, the burden of proving which excuse shall lie on such person, any implement of house-breaking ;

thirdly—any person who has been proclaimed as an offender either under this Code or by order of the Local Government ;

fourthly—any person in whose possession anything is found which may reasonably be

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter V.—Of Arrest, Escape and Retaking.—Sections 55-59.)

suspected to be stolen property or who may reasonably be suspected of having committed an offence with reference to such thing;

fifthly—any person who obstructs a police-officer while in the execution of his duty, or who has escaped, or attempts to escape, from lawful custody;

sixthly—any person reasonably suspected of being a deserter from Her Majesty's Army or Navy or of belonging to Her Majesty's Indian Marine Service and being illegally absent from that service;

seventhly—any person who has been concerned in, or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been concerned in, any act committed at any place out of British India, which, if committed in British India, would have been punishable as an offence, and for which he is, under any law relating to extradition or under the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, or otherwise, liable to be apprehended or detained in custody in British India; and eighthly—any released convict committing a breach of the rules made under section 565, sub-section (3).

(2) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

55. (1) Any officer in charge of a police-station may, in like manner, arrest or cause to be arrested—

Arrest of vagabonds, habitual robbers, etc.

(a) any person found taking precautions to conceal his presence within the limits of such station, under circumstances which afford reason to believe that he is taking such precautions with a view to committing a cognizable offence; or

(b) any person within the limits of such station who has no ostensible means of subsistence, or who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself; or

(c) any person who is by repute an habitual robber, house-breaker or thief, or an habitual receiver of stolen property knowing it to be stolen, or who by repute habitually commits extortion or in order to the committing of extortion habitually puts or attempts to put persons in fear of injury.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

56. (1) When any officer in charge of a police-station requires any officer subordinate to him to arrest without a warrant (otherwise than in his presence) any person who may lawfully be arrested without a warrant, he shall deliver to the officer required to make the arrest an order in writing, specifying the person to be arrested and the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made.

Procedure when police-officer deputes subordinate to arrest without warrant.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

57. (1) When any person who in the presence of a police-officer has committed or has been accused of committing a non-cognizable offence refuses, on demand of such officer, to give his name and residence, or gives a name or residence which such officer has reason to believe to be false, he may be arrested by such officer in order that his name or residence may be ascertained.

Refusal to give name and residence.

(2) When the true name and residence of such person have been ascertained, he shall be released on his executing a bond with or without sureties to appear before a Magistrate if so required:

Provided that if such person be not resident in British India the bond must be secured by a surety or sureties resident in British India.

(3) Should the true name and residence of such person not be ascertained within twenty-four hours from the time of arrest or should he fail to execute the bond or, if so required, furnish sufficient sureties, he shall forthwith be forwarded to the nearest Magistrate having jurisdiction.

58. A police-officer may, for the purpose of arresting without warrant any person whom he is authorised to arrest under this chapter, pursue such person into any place in British India.

Pursuit of offenders into other jurisdictions.

59. (1) Any private person may arrest any person who, in his view, commits a non-bailable and cognizable offence, or who has been proclaimed as an offender;

Arrest by private persons.

and shall, without unnecessary delay, make over any person so arrested to a police-officer, or, in the absence of a police-officer, take such person to the nearest police-station.

Procedure on such arrest.

(2) If there is reason to believe that such person comes under the provisions of section 54, a police-officer shall re-arrest him.

(3) If there is reason to believe that he has committed a non-cognizable offence, and he refuses on the demand of a police-officer to give his name and residence, or gives a name or residence

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter V.—Of Arrest, Escape and Retaking.—Sections 60-67. Chapter VI.—Of Processes to compel Appearance.—Sections 68-70.)

which such officer has reason to believe to be false, he shall be dealt with under the provisions of section 57. If there is no sufficient reason to believe that he has committed any offence, he shall be at once released.

Person arrested to be taken before Magistrate or officer in charge of police-station.

60. A police-officer making an arrest without warrant shall, without unnecessary delay and subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail, take or send the person arrested before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, or before the officer in charge of a police-station.

Person arrested not to be detained more than twenty-four hours.

61. No police-officer shall detain in custody a person arrested without warrant for a longer period than under all the circumstances of the case is reasonable, and such period shall not, in the absence of a special order of a Magistrate under section 167, exceed twenty-four hours exclusive of the time necessary for the journey from the place of arrest to the Magistrate's Court.

Police to report apprehensions.

62. Officers in charge of police-stations shall report to the District Magistrate, or, if he so directs, to the Subdivisional Magistrate, the cases of all persons arrested without warrant, within the limits of their respective stations, whether such persons have been admitted to bail or otherwise.

Discharge of person apprehended.

63. No person who has been arrested by a police-officer shall be discharged except on his own bond, or on bail, or under the special order of a Magistrate.

Offence committed in Magistrate's presence.

64. When any offence is committed in the presence of a Magistrate within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he may himself arrest or order any person to arrest the offender, and may thereupon, subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail, commit the offender to custody.

Arrest by or in presence of Magistrate.

65. Any Magistrate may at any time arrest or direct the arrest, in his presence, within the local limits of his jurisdiction, of any person for whose arrest he is competent at the time and in the circumstances to issue a warrant.

Power, on escape, to pursue and retake.

66. If a person in lawful custody escapes or is rescued, the person from whose custody he escaped or was rescued may immediately pursue and arrest him in any place in British India.

Provisions of sections 47, 48 and 49 to apply to arrests under section 66.

67. The provisions of sections 47, 48 and 49 shall apply to arrests under section 66, although the person making any such arrest is not acting under a warrant and is not a police-officer having authority to arrest.

CHAPTER VI.

OF PROCESSES TO COMPEL APPEARANCE.

A.—Summons.

Form of summons.

68. (1) Every summons issued by a Court under this Code shall be in writing, in duplicate, signed and sealed by the presiding officer of such Court, or by such other officer as the High Court may, from time to time, by rule, direct.

Summons by whom served.

(2) Such summons shall be served by a police-officer, or, subject to such rules as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf, by an officer of the Court issuing it or other public servant.

(3) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Summons how served.

69. (1) The summons shall, if practicable, be served personally on the person summoned, by delivering or tendering to him one of the duplicates of the summons.

Signature of receipt for summons.

(2) Every person on whom a summons is so served shall, if so required by the serving officer, sign a receipt therefor on the back of the other duplicate.

(3) Service of a summons on an incorporated company or other body corporate may be effected by serving it on the secretary, local manager or other principal officer of the corporation, or by registered post letter addressed to the chief officer of the corporation in British India. In such case the service shall be deemed to have been effected when the letter would arrive in ordinary course of post.

Service when person summoned cannot be found.

70. Where the person summoned cannot by the exercise of due diligence be found, the summons may be served by leaving one of the duplicates for him with some adult male member of his family, or, in a presidency-town, with his servant residing with him; and the person with whom the summons is so left shall, if so required by the serving officer, sign a receipt therefor on the back of the other duplicate.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter VI.—Of Processes to compel Appearance.—Sections 71-79.)

Procedure when service cannot be effected as before provided.

71. If service in the manner mentioned in sections 69 and 70 cannot by the exercise of due diligence be effected, the serving officer shall affix one of the duplicates of the summons to some conspicuous part of the house or homestead in which the person summoned ordinarily resides, and thereupon the summons shall be deemed to have been duly served.

Service on servant of Government or of Railway Company.

72. (1) Where the person summoned is in the active service of the Government or of a Railway Company, the Court issuing the summons shall ordinarily send it in duplicate to the head of the office in which such person is employed; and such head shall thereupon cause the summons to be served in manner provided by section 69, and shall return it to the Court under his signature with the endorsement required by that section.

(2) Such signature shall be evidence of due service.

Service of summons outside local limits.

73. When a Court desires that a summons issued by it shall be served at any place outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, it shall ordinarily send such summons in duplicate to a Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person summoned resides or is, to be there served.

Proof of service in such cases, and when serving officer not present.

74. (1) When a summons issued by a Court is served outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, and in any case where the officer who has served a summons is not present at the hearing of the case, an affidavit, purporting to be made before a Magistrate, that such summons has been served, and a duplicate of the summons purporting to be endorsed (in manner provided by section 69 or section 70) by the person to whom it was delivered or tendered or with whom it was left, shall be admissible in evidence, and the statements made therein shall be deemed to be correct unless and until the contrary is proved.

(2) The affidavit mentioned in this section may be attached to the duplicate of the summons and returned to the Court.

B.—Warrant of Arrest.

Form of warrant of arrest.

75. (1) Every warrant of arrest issued by a Court under this Code shall be in writing, signed by the presiding officer, or, in the case of a Bench of Magistrates, by any member of such Bench, and shall bear the seal of the Court.

Continuance of warrant of arrest.

(2) Every such warrant shall remain in force until it is cancelled by the Court which issued it, or until it is executed.

Court may direct security to be taken.

76. (1) Any Court issuing a warrant for the arrest of any person may in its discretion direct by endorsement on the warrant that, if such person execute a bond with sufficient sureties for his attendance before the Court at a specified time and thereafter until otherwise directed by the Court, the officer to whom the warrant is directed shall take such security and shall release such person from custody.

(2) The endorsement shall state—

(a) the number of sureties;

(b) the amount in which they and the person for whose arrest the warrant is issued are to be respectively bound; and

(c) the time at which he is to attend before the Court.

Recognizance to be forwarded.

(3) Whenever security is taken under this section, the officer to whom the warrant is directed shall forward the bond to the Court.

Warrants to whom directed.

77. (1) A warrant of arrest shall ordinarily be directed to one or more police-officers, and, when issued by a Presidency Magistrate, shall always be so directed, but any other Court issuing such a warrant may, if its immediate execution is necessary and no police-officer is immediately available, direct it to any other person or persons; and such person or persons shall execute the same.

Warrant to several persons.

(2) When a warrant is directed to more officers or persons than one, it may be executed by all, or by any one or more, of them.

Warrant may be directed to landholders, etc.

78. (1) A District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate may direct a warrant to any landholder, farmer or manager of land within his district or subdivision for the arrest of any escaped convict, proclaimed offender or person who has been accused of a non-bailable offence, and who has eluded pursuit.

(2) Such landholder, farmer or manager shall acknowledge in writing the receipt of the warrant, and shall execute it if the person for whose arrest it was issued is in, or enters on, his land or farm, or the land under his charge.

(3) When the person against whom such warrant is issued is arrested, he shall be made over with the warrant to the nearest police-officer, who shall cause him to be taken before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, unless security is taken under section 76.

Warrant directed to police-officer.

79. A warrant directed to any police-officer may also be executed by any other police-officer whose name is endorsed upon the warrant by the officer to whom it is directed or endorsed.

V K

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter VI.—Of Processes to compel Appearance.—Sections 80-87.)

80. The police-officer or other person executing a warrant of arrest shall notify the substance thereof to the person to be arrested, and, if so required, shall show him the warrant.

Notification of substance of warrant.

81. The police-officer or other person executing a warrant of arrest shall (subject to the provisions of section 76 as to security) without unnecessary delay bring the person arrested before the Court before which he is required by law to produce such person.

Person arrested to be brought before Court without delay.

Where warrant may be executed.

82. A warrant of arrest may be executed at any place in British India.

83. (1) When a warrant is to be executed outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same, such Court may, instead of directing such warrant to a police-officer, forward the same by post or otherwise to any Magistrate or District Superintendent of Police or the Commissioner of Police in a Presidency-town within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it is to be executed.

Warrant forwarded for execution outside jurisdiction.

(2) The Magistrate or District Superintendent or Commissioner to whom such warrant is so forwarded shall endorse his name thereon and, if practicable, cause it to be executed in manner hereinbefore provided within the local limits of his jurisdiction.

84. (1) When a warrant directed to a police-officer is to be executed beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same, he shall ordinarily take it for endorsement either to a Magistrate or to a police-officer not below the rank of an officer in charge of a station, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the warrant is to be executed.

Warrant directed to police-officer for execution outside jurisdiction.

(2) Such Magistrate or police-officer shall endorse his name thereon, and such endorsement shall be sufficient authority to the police-officer to whom the warrant is directed to execute the same within such limits, and the local police shall, if so required, assist such officer in executing such warrant.

(3) Whenever there is reason to believe that the delay occasioned by obtaining the endorsement of the Magistrate or police-officer within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the warrant is to be executed will prevent such execution, the police-officer to whom it is directed may execute the same without such endorsement in any place beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it.

(4) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

85. When a warrant of arrest is executed outside the district in which it was issued, the person arrested shall, unless the Court which issued the warrant is within twenty miles of the place of arrest, or is nearer than the Magistrate or District Superintendent of Police or the Commissioner of Police in a Presidency-town within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the arrest was made, or unless security is taken under section 76, be taken before such Magistrate or Commissioner or District Superintendent.

Procedure on arrest of person against whom warrant issued.

86. (1) Such Magistrate or District Superintendent or Commissioner shall, if the person arrested appears to be the person intended by the Court which issued the warrant, direct his removal in custody to such Court:

Procedure by Magistrate before whom person arrested is brought.

Provided that if the offence is bailable, and such person is ready and willing to give bail to the satisfaction of such Magistrate, District Superintendent or Commissioner, or a direction has been endorsed under section 76 on the warrant and such person is ready and willing to give the security required by such direction, the Magistrate, District Superintendent or Commissioner shall take such bail or security, as the case may be, and forward the bond to the Court which issued the warrant.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a police-officer from taking security under section 76.

C.—Proclamation and Attachment.

87. (1) If any Court has reason to believe (whether after taking evidence or not) that any person against whom a warrant has been issued by it has absconded or is concealing himself so that such warrant cannot be executed, such Court may publish a written proclamation requiring him to appear at a specified place and at a specified time not less than thirty days from the date of publishing such proclamation.

Proclamation for person absconding.

(2) The proclamation shall be published as follows:—

(a) it shall be publicly read in some conspicuous place of the town or village in which such person ordinarily resides;

(b) it shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the house or homestead in which such person ordinarily resides

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter VI.—Of Processes to compel Appearance.—Sections 88-91.)

or to some conspicuous place of such town or village; and (c) a copy thereof shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the Court-house.

(3) A statement in writing by the Court issuing the proclamation to the effect that the proclamation was duly published on a specified day shall be conclusive evidence that the requirements of this section have been complied with, and that the proclamation was published on such day.

88. (1) The Court issuing a proclamation under section 87 may at any time order the attachment of any property, moveable or immoveable, or both, belonging to the proclaimed person.

Attachment of property of person absconding.

(2) Such order shall authorise the attachment of any property belonging to such person within the district in which it is made; and it shall authorise the attachment of any property belonging to such person without such district when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within whose district such property is situate.

(3) If the property ordered to be attached be debts or other moveable property, the attachment under this section shall be made—

(a) by seizure; or

(b) by the appointment of a receiver; or

(c) by an order in writing prohibiting the delivery of such property to the proclaimed person or to any one on his behalf; or

(d) by all or any two of such methods, as the Court thinks fit.

(4) If the property ordered to be attached be immoveable, the attachment under this section shall, in the case of land paying revenue to Government, be made through the Collector of the district in which the land is situate, and in all other cases—

(e) by taking possession; or

(f) by the appointment of a receiver; or

(g) by an order in writing prohibiting the payment of rent or delivery of property to the proclaimed person or to any one on his behalf; or

(h) by all or any two of such methods, as the Court thinks fit.

(5) If the property ordered to be attached consists of live stock or is of a perishable nature, the Court may, if it thinks it expedient, order immediate sale thereof, and in such case the proceeds of the sale shall abide the order of the Court.

(6) The powers, duties and liabilities of a receiver appointed under this section shall be the same as those of a receiver appointed under Chapter XXXVI of the Code of Civil Procedure. XIV of 1882.

(7) If the proclaimed person does not appear within the time specified in the proclamation, the property under attachment shall be at the disposal of Government; but it shall not be sold until the expiration of six months from the date of the attachment, unless it is subject to speedy and natural decay, or the Court considers that the sale would be for the benefit of the owner, in either of which cases the Court may cause it to be sold whenever it thinks fit.

89. If, within two years from the date of the attachment, any person whose property is or has been at the disposal of Government, under sub-section (7) of section 88, appears voluntarily or is apprehended and brought before the Court by whose order the property was attached, or the Court to which such Court is subordinate, and proves to the satisfaction of such Court that he did not abscond or conceal himself for the purpose of avoiding execution of the warrant, and that he had not such notice of the proclamation as to enable him to attend within the time specified therein, such property, or, if the same has been sold, the nett proceeds of the sale, or, if part only thereof has been sold, the nett proceeds of the sale and the residue of the property, shall, after satisfying thereout all costs incurred in consequence of the attachment, be delivered to him.

Restoration of attached property.

D.—Other Rules regarding Processes.

90. A Court may, in any case in which it is empowered by this Code to issue a summons for the appearance of any person other than a juror or assessor, issue, after recording its reasons in writing, a warrant for his arrest—

Issue of warrant in lieu of, or in addition to, summons.

(a) if, either before the issue of such summons, or after the issue of the same but before the time fixed for his appearance, the Court sees reason to believe that he has absconded or will not obey the summons; or

(b) if at such time he fails to appear and the summons is proved to have been duly served in time to admit of his appearing in accordance therewith and no reasonable excuse is offered for such failure.

91. When any person for whose appearance or arrest the officer presiding in any Court is empowered to issue a summons or warrant is present

Power to take bond for appearance.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter VI.—Of Processes to compel Appearance. —Sections 92-93. Chapter VII.—Of Processes to compel the production of Documents and other Moveable Property, and for the Discovery of Persons wrongfully confined.—Sections 94-98.)

in such Court, such officer may require such person to execute a bond with or without sureties for his appearance in such Court.

Arrest on breach of bond for appearance

92. When any person who is bound by any bond taken under this Code to appear before a Court does not so appear, the officer presiding in such Court may issue a warrant directing that such person be arrested and produced before him.

Provisions of this chapter generally applicable to summonses and warrants of arrest.

93. The provisions contained in this Chapter relating to a summons and warrant, and their issue, service and execution, shall, so far as may be, apply to every summons and every warrant of arrest issued under this Code.

CHAPTER VII.

OF PROCESSES TO COMPEL THE PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS AND OTHER MOVEABLE PROPERTY, AND FOR THE DISCOVERY OF PERSONS WRONGFULLY CONFINED.

A.—Summons to produce.

Summons to produce document or other thing.

94. (1) Whenever any Court, or, in any place beyond the limits of the towns of Calcutta and Bombay, any officer in charge of a police-station, considers that the production of any document or other thing is necessary or desirable for the purposes of any investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code by or before such Court or officer, such Court may issue a summons, or such officer a written order, to the person in whose possession or power such document or thing is believed to be, requiring him to attend and produce it, or to produce it, at the time and place stated in the summons or order.

(2) Any person required under this section merely to produce a document or other thing shall be deemed to have complied with the requisition if he cause such document or thing to be produced instead of attending personally to produce the same.

I of 1872

(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, sections 123 and 124, or to apply to a letter, post-card, telegram or other document or any parcel or thing in the custody of the Postal or Telegraph authorities.

Procedure as to letters and telegrams

95 (1) If any document, parcel or thing in such custody is, in the opinion of any District Magistrate, Chief Presidency Magistrate, High Court or Court of Session, wanted for the purpose of any investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, such Magistrate or Court may require the Postal or Telegraph authorities, as the case may be, to deliver such document, parcel or thing to such person as such Magistrate or Court directs.

(2) If any such document, parcel or thing is, in the opinion of any other Magistrate, or of any Commissioner of Police or District Superintendent of Police, wanted for any such purpose, he may require the Postal or Telegraph Department, as the case may be, to cause search to be made for and to detain such document, parcel or thing pending the orders of any such District Magistrate, Chief Presidency Magistrate or Court.

B.—Search-warrants.

When search-warrant may be issued

96. (1) Where any Court has reason to believe that a person to whom a summons or order under section 94 or a requisition under section 95, sub-section (1), has been or might be addressed will not or would not produce the document or thing as required by such summons or requisition, or where such document or thing is not known to the Court to be in the possession of any person, or where the Court considers that the purposes of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code will be served by a general search or inspection, it may issue a search-warrant, and the person to whom such warrant is directed may search or inspect in accordance therewith and the provisions hereinafter contained.

(2) Nothing herein contained shall authorise any Magistrate other than a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate to grant a warrant to search for a document, parcel or other thing in the custody of the Postal or Telegraph authorities

Power to restrict warrant.

97. The Court may, if it thinks fit, specify in the warrant the particular place or part thereof to which only the search or inspection shall extend, and the person charged with the execution of such warrant shall then search or inspect only the place or part so specified

Search of house suspected to contain stolen property, forged documents etc

98. (1) If a District Magistrate, Subdivisional Magistrate, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, upon information and after such inquiry as he thinks necessary, has reason to believe that any place is used for the deposit or sale of stolen property, or for the deposit or sale or manufacture of forged documents, false seals or counterfeit stamps or coin, or instruments or materials for counterfeiting coin or stamps or for forging, or that any forged documents, false seals or counterfeit stamps or coin, or instruments or materials used for counterfeiting coin or stamps

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter VII.—Of Processes to compel the production of Documents and other Moveable Property, and for the Discovery of Persons wrongfully confined.—Sections 98-102.)

or for forging, are kept or deposited in any place, he may by his warrant authorise any police-officer above the rank of a constable—

(a) to enter, with such assistance as may be required, such place, and

(b) to search the same in manner specified in the warrant, and

(c) to take possession of any property, documents, seals, stamps or coins therein found which he reasonably suspects to be stolen, unlawfully obtained, forged, false or counterfeit, and also of any such instruments and materials as aforesaid, and

(d) to convey such property, documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials before a Magistrate, or to guard the same on the spot until the offender is taken before a Magistrate, or otherwise to dispose thereof in some place of safety, and

(e) to take into custody and carry before a Magistrate every person found in such place who appears to have been privy to the deposit, sale or manufacture or keeping of any such property, documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials, knowing or having reasonable cause to suspect the said property to have been stolen or otherwise unlawfully obtained, or the said documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials to have been forged, falsified or counterfeited, or the said instruments or materials to have been or to be intended to be used for counterfeiting coin or stamps or for forging.

(2) The provisions of this section with respect to—

(a) counterfeit coin,

(b) coin suspected to be counterfeit, and

(c) instruments or materials for counterfeiting coin, shall, so far as they can be made applicable, apply, respectively, to—

I of 1889. (a) pieces of metal made in contravention of the Metal Tokens Act, 1889, or brought into British India in contravention of any notification for the time being in force under section 19 of the

VIII of 1878. Sea Customs Act, 1878,

(b) pieces of metal suspected to have been so made or to have been so brought into British India or to be intended to be issued in contravention of the former of those Acts, and

(c) instruments or materials for making pieces of metal in contravention of that Act.

99. When, in the execution of a search-warrant at any place beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued the same, any of the things for which search is made are found, such things, together with the list of the same prepared under the provisions hereinafter contained, shall be immediately taken before the Court issuing the warrant, unless such place is nearer to the Magistrate having jurisdiction therein than to such Court, in which case the list and things shall be immediately taken before such Magistrate; and, unless there be good cause to the contrary, such Magistrate shall make an order authorising them to be taken to such Court.

Disposal of things found in search beyond jurisdiction.

C.—Discovery of Persons wrongfully confined.

100. If any Presidency Magistrate, Magistrate of the first class or Subdivisional Magistrate has reason to believe that any person is confined under such circumstances that the confinement amounts to an offence, he may issue a search-warrant, and the person to whom such warrant is directed may search for the person so confined; and such search shall be made in accordance therewith, and the person, if found, shall be immediately taken before a Magistrate, who shall make such order as in the circumstances of the case seems proper.

Search for persons wrongfully confined.

D.—General Provisions relating to Searches.

101. The provisions of sections 43, 75, 77, 79, 82, 83 and 84 shall, so far as may be, apply to all search-warrants issued under section 96, section 98 or section 100.

Direction, etc., of search-warrants.

102. (1) Whenever any place liable to search or inspection under this chapter is closed, any person residing in, or being in charge of, such place shall, on demand of the officer or other person executing the warrant, and on production of the warrant, allow him free ingress thereto, and afford all reasonable facilities for a search therein.

Persons in charge of closed place to allow search.

(2) If ingress into such place cannot be so obtained, the officer or other person executing the warrant may proceed in manner provided by section 48.

(3) Where any person in or about such place is reasonably suspected of concealing about his person any article for which search should be made, such person may be searched. If such person be a woman, the directions of section 52 shall be observed.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter VII.—Of Processes to compel the production of Documents and other Moveable Property, and for the Discovery of Persons wrongfully confined.—Sections 103-105. Part IV.—Prevention of Offences. Chapter VIII.—Of Security for keeping the Peace and for Good Behaviour.—Sections 106-107.)

103. (1) Before making a search under this chapter, the officer or other person about to make it shall call upon two or more respectable inhabitants of the locality in which the place to be searched is situate to attend and witness the search.

Search to be made in presence of witnesses.

(2) The search shall be made in their presence, and a list of all things seized in the course of such search and of the places in which they are respectively found shall be prepared by such officer or other person and signed by such witnesses; but no person witnessing a search under this section shall be required to attend the Court as a witness of the search unless specially summoned by it.

(3) The occupant of the place searched, or some person in his behalf, shall, in every instance, be permitted to attend during the search, and a copy of the list prepared under this section, signed by the said witnesses, shall be delivered to such occupant or person at his request.

Occupant of place searched may attend.

(4) When any person is searched under section 102 (3), a list of all things taken possession of shall be prepared, and a copy thereof shall be delivered to such person at his request.

E.—Miscellaneous.

104. Any Court may, if it thinks fit, impound any document or thing produced before it under this Code.

Power to impound document, etc., produced.

105. Any Magistrate may direct a search to be made in his presence of any place for the search of which he is competent to issue a search-warrant.

Magistrate may direct search in his presence.

PART IV.

PREVENTION OF OFFENCES.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF SECURITY FOR KEEPING THE PEACE AND FOR GOOD BEHAVIOUR.

A.—Security for keeping the Peace on Conviction.

106. (1) Whenever any person accused of rioting, assault or other offence involving a breach of the peace, or of abetting the same, or of assembling armed men or taking other unlawful measures with the evident intention of committing the same, or any person accused of committing criminal intimidation, is convicted of such offence before a High Court, a Court of Session or the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class, and such Court is of opinion that it is necessary to require such person to execute a bond for keeping the peace,

Security for keeping the peace on conviction.

such Court may, at the time of passing sentence on such person, order him to execute a bond for a sum proportionate to his means, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace during such period, not exceeding three years, as it thinks fit to fix.

(2) If the conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, the bond so executed shall become void.

(3) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision.

B.—Security for keeping the Peace in other cases and Security for Good Behaviour.

107. (1) Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is informed that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity, or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace, or disturb the public tranquillity, the Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace for such period not exceeding one year as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

Security for keeping the peace in other cases.

(2) Proceedings shall not be taken under this section unless either the person informed against or the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended is within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction, and no proceedings shall be taken before any Magistrate, other than a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate, unless both the person informed against, and the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended, are within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction.

(3) When any Magistrate not empowered to proceed under sub-section (1) has reason to believe that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity, and that such breach of the peace or disturbance cannot be prevented otherwise than by detaining such person in custody, such Magistrate or Court may, after recording his reasons, issue a warrant for his arrest (if he is not already in custody or before the Court), and may send him before a Magistrate empowered to deal with the case, together with a copy of his reasons.

Procedure of Magistrate, not empowered to act under sub-section (1).

(4) A Magistrate before whom a person is sent under this section may in his discretion detain such person in custody until the completion of the inquiry hereinafter prescribed.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

Part IV.—Prevention of Offences. Chapter VIII.—Of Security for keeping the Peace and for Good Behaviour.—Sections 108-115.)

Security for good behaviour from persons disseminating seditious matter.

108. Whenever a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate, or a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, has information that there is within the limits of his jurisdiction any person who, within or without such limits, either orally or in writing, disseminates or attempts to disseminate, or in anywise abets the dissemination of,—

(a) any seditious matter, that is to say, any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, or

(b) any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 153A of the Indian Penal Code, or

(c) any matter concerning a Judge which amounts to criminal intimidation or defamation under the Indian Penal Code, such Magistrate may (in manner hereinafter provided) require such person to shew cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

Security for good behaviour from vagrants and suspected persons.

109. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Subdivisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class receives information—

(a) that any person is taking precautions to conceal his presence within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction, and that there is reason to believe that such person is taking such precautions with a view to committing any cognizable offence, or

(b) that there is within such limits a person who has no ostensible means of subsistence, or who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself, such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

Security for good behaviour from habitual offenders.

110. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, or Subdivisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government receives information that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction—

(a) is by habit a robber, house-breaker or thief, or

(b) is by habit a receiver of stolen property knowing the same to have been stolen, or

(c) habitually protects or harbours thieves or aids in the concealment or disposal of stolen property, or

(d) habitually commits mischief, extortion or cheating or attempts so to do, or

(e) habitually commits, or attempts to commit, or abets the commission of, offences involving a breach of the peace, such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding three years, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

Proviso as to European vagrants.

111. The provisions of sections 109 and 110 do not apply to European British subjects in cases where they may be dealt with under the European Vagrancy Act, 1874. IX of 1874.

Order to be made.

112. When a Magistrate acting under section 107, section 108, section 109 or section 110 deems it necessary to require any person to show cause under such section, he shall make an order in writing, setting forth the substance of the information received, the amount of the bond to be executed, the term for which it is to be in force, and the number, character and class of sureties (if any) required.

Procedure in respect of person present in Court.

113. If the person in respect of whom such order is made is present in Court, it shall be read over to him, or, if he so desires, the substance thereof shall be explained to him.

Summons or warrant in case of person not so present.

114. If such person is not present in Court, the Magistrate shall issue a summons requiring him to appear, or, when such person is in custody, a warrant directing the officer in whose custody he is to bring him before the Court:

Provided that whenever it appears to such Magistrate, upon the report of a police-officer or upon other information (the substance of which report or information shall be recorded by the Magistrate), that there is reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace, and that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person, the Magistrate may at any time issue a warrant for his arrest.

Copy of order under section 112 to accompany summons or warrant.

115. Every summons or warrant issued under section 114 shall be accompanied by a copy of the order made under section 112, and such copy shall be delivered by the officer serving or executing such summons or warrant to the person served with, or arrested under, the same.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IV.—Prevention of Offences. Chapter VIII.—Of Security for keeping the Peace and for Good Behaviour.—Sections 116-123.)

Power to dispense with personal attendance.

116. The Magistrate may, if he sees sufficient cause, dispense with the personal attendance of any person called upon to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond for keeping the peace, and may permit him to appear by a pleader.

Inquiry as to truth of information.

117. (1) When an order under section 112 has been read or explained under section 113 to a person present in Court, or when any person appears or is brought before a Magistrate in compliance with, or in execution of, a summons or warrant issued under section 114, the Magistrate shall proceed to inquire into the truth of the information upon which action has been taken, and to take such further evidence as may appear necessary.

(2) Such inquiry shall be made, as nearly as may be practicable where the order requires security for keeping the peace, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in summons-cases; and, where the order requires security for good behaviour, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant-cases, except that no charge need be framed.

(3) For the purposes of this section the fact that a person is an habitual offender may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise.

(4) Where two or more persons have been associated together in the matter under inquiry, they may be dealt with in the same or separate inquiries as the Magistrate shall think just.

Order to give security.

118. (1) If, upon such inquiry, it is proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, with or without sureties, the Magistrate shall make an order accordingly:

Provided—

first, that no person shall be ordered to give security of a nature different from, or of an amount larger than or for a period longer than, that specified in the order made under section 112:

secondly, that the amount of every bond shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case and shall not be excessive:

thirdly, that, when the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made is a minor, the bond shall be executed only by his sureties.

Discharge of person informed against.

119. If, on an inquiry under section 117, it is not proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, the Magistrate shall make an entry on the record to that effect, and, if such person is in custody only for the purposes of the inquiry, shall release him, or, if such person is not in custody, shall discharge him.

C.—Proceedings in all cases subsequent to Order to furnish Security.

Commencement of period for which security is required.

120. (1) If any person in respect of whom an order requiring security is made under section 106 or section 118 is, at the time such order is made, sentenced to, or undergoing a sentence of, imprisonment, the period for which such security is required shall commence on the expiration of such sentence.

(2) In other cases such period shall commence on the date of such order unless the Magistrate, for sufficient reason, fixes a later date

Contents of bond.

121. The bond to be executed by any such person shall bind him to keep the peace or to be of good behaviour, as the case may be, and in the latter case the commission or attempt to commit, or the abetment of, any offence punishable with imprisonment, wherever it may be committed, is a breach of the bond.

Power to reject sureties.

122. A Magistrate may refuse to accept any surety offered under this chapter, on the ground that, for reasons to be recorded by the Magistrate, such surety is an unfit person.

Imprisonment in default of security.

123. (1) If any person ordered to give security under section 106 or section 118 does not give such security on or before the date on which the period for which such security is to be given commences, he shall, except in the case next hereinafter mentioned, be committed to prison, or, if he is already in prison, be detained in prison until such period expires or until within such period he gives the security to the Court or Magistrate who made the order requiring it.

Proceedings when to be laid before High Court or Court of Session.

(2) When such person has been ordered by a Magistrate to give security for a period exceeding one year, such Magistrate shall, if such person does not give such security as aforesaid, issue a warrant directing him to be detained in prison pending the orders of the Sessions Judge or, if such Magistrate be a Presidency Magistrate, pending the orders of the High Court; and the proceedings shall be laid, as soon as conveniently may be, before such Court.

(3) Such Court, after examining such proceedings and requiring from the Magistrate any further information or evidence which it thinks necessary, may pass such order on the case as it thinks fit:

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IV:—Prevention of Offences. Chapter VIII.—Of Security for keeping the Peace and for Good Behaviour.—Sections 124-126.) Chapter IX.—Unlawful Assemblies.—Sections 127-130.)

Provided that the period (if any) for which anyperson is imprisoned for failure to give security shall not exceed three years.

(4) If the security be tendered to the officer in charge of the jail, he shall forthwith refer the matter to the Court or Magistrate who made the order and shall await the orders of such Court or Magistrate.

Kind of imprisonment.

(5) Imprisonment for failure to give security for keeping the peace shall be simple.

(6) Imprisonment for failure to give security for good behaviour may be rigorous or simple as the Court or Magistrate in each case directs.

Power to release persons imprisoned for failing to give security.

124. (1) Whenever the District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate is of opinion that any person imprisoned for failing to give security under this chapter, whether by the order of such Magistrate or that of his predecessor in office, or of some subordinate Magistrate, may be released without hazard to the community or to any other person, he may order such person to be discharged.

(2) Whenever any person has been imprisoned for failing to give security under this chapter, the Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may (unless the order has been made by some Court superior to his own) make an order reducing the amount of the security or the number of sureties or the time for which security has been required.

(3) Whenever the District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate is of opinion that any person imprisoned for failing to give security under this chapter as ordered by the Court of Session or High Court may be released without hazard to the community, such Magistrate shall make an immediate report of the case for the orders of the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be, and such Court may, if it thinks fit, order such person to be discharged.

Power of District Magistrate to cancel any bond for keeping the peace or good behaviour.

125. The Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may at any time for sufficient reasons to be recorded in writing, cancel any bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour executed under this chapter by order of any Court in his district not superior to his Court.

Discharge of sureties.

126. (1) Any surety for the peaceable conduct or good behaviour of another person may at any time apply to a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Subdivisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class to cancel any bond executed under this chapter within the local limits of his jurisdiction.

(2) On such application being made, the Magistrate shall issue his summons or warrant, as he thinks fit, requiring the person for whom such surety is bound to appear or to be brought before him.

(3) When such person appears or is brought before the Magistrate, such Magistrate shall cancel the bond, and shall order such person to give, for the unexpired portion of the term of such bond, fresh security of the same description as the original security. Every such order shall, for the purposes of sections 121, 122, 123 and 124, be deemed to be an order made under section 106 or section 118, as the case may be.

CHAPTER IX.

UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLIES.

Assembly to disperse on command of Magistrate or police-officer.

127. (1) Any Magistrate or officer in charge of a police-station may command any unlawful assembly, or any assembly of five or more persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace, to disperse; and it shall thereupon be the duty of the members of such assembly to disperse accordingly.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Use of civil force to disperse.

128. If, upon being so commanded, any such assembly does not disperse, or if, without being so commanded, it conducts itself in such a manner as to show a determination not to disperse, any Magistrate or officer in charge of a police-station, whether within or without the presidency-towns, may proceed to disperse such assembly by force, and may require the assistance of any male person, not being an officer or soldier in Her Majesty's Army or a volunteer enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869, and acting as such, for the purpose of dispersing such assembly, and, if necessary, arresting and confining the persons who form part of it, in order to disperse such assembly or that they may be punished according to law. XX of 1869.

Use of military force.

129. If any such assembly cannot be otherwise dispersed, and if it is necessary for the public security that it should be dispersed, the Magistrate of the highest rank who is present may cause it to be dispersed by military force.

Duty of officer commanding troops required by Magistrate to disperse assembly.

130. (1) When a Magistrate determines to disperse any such assembly by military force, he may require any commissioned or non-commissioned officer in command of any soldiers in Her Majesty's Army or of any volunteers enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869, to disperse such assembly by military force, and to arrest and confine such persons forming part of it as the Magistrate may direct, or as it may be necessary to arrest and confine in order to disperse the assembly or to have them punished according to law. XX of 1869.

(2) Every such officer shall obey such requisition in such manner as he thinks fit; but in so doing he shall use as little force, and do as little injury to person and property, as may be consistent with dispersing the assembly and arresting and detaining such persons.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IV.—Prevention of Offences. Chapter IX.—Unlawful Assemblies.—Sections 131-132. Chapter X.—Public Nuisances.—Sections 133-135.)

Power of commissioned military officers to disperse assembly.

131. When the public security is manifestly endangered by any such assembly, and when no Magistrate can be communicated with, any commissioned officer of Her Majesty's Army may disperse such assembly by military force, and may arrest and confine any persons forming part of it, in order to disperse such assembly or that they may be punished according to law; but if, while he is acting under this section, it becomes practicable for him to communicate with a Magistrate, he shall do so, and shall thenceforward obey the instructions of the Magistrate as to whether he shall or shall not continue such action.

Protection against prosecution for acts done under this chapter.

132. No prosecution against any person for any act purporting to be done under this chapter shall be instituted in any Criminal Court, except with the sanction of the Governor General in Council; and—

(a) no Magistrate or police-officer acting under this chapter in good faith,

(b) no officer acting under section 131 in good faith,

(c) no person doing any act in good faith, in compliance with a requisition under section 128 or section 130, and

(d) no inferior officer, or soldier, or volunteer, doing any act in obedience to any order which he was bound to obey, shall be deemed to have thereby committed an offence.

CHAPTER X.

PUBLIC NUISANCES.

Conditional order for removal of nuisance.

133. (1) Whenever a District Magistrate, a Subdivisional Magistrate or, when empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, a Magistrate of the first class, considers, on receiving a police report or other information, and on taking such evidence (if any) as he thinks fit, that any unlawful obstruction or nuisance should be removed from any way, river or channel which is or may be lawfully used by the public, or from any public place, or that any trade or occupation, or the keeping of any goods or merchandise, by reason of its being injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community, should be suppressed or removed or prohibited, or that the construction of any building, or the disposal of any substance as likely to occasion conflagration or explosion, should be prevented or stopped, or that any building is in such a condition that it is likely to fall and thereby cause injury to persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood or passing by, and that in consequence its removal, repair or support is necessary, or that any tank, well or excavation adjacent to any such way or public place should be fenced in such a manner as to prevent danger arising to the public, such Magistrate may make a conditional order requiring the person causing such obstruction or nuisance, or carrying on such trade or occupation, or keeping any such goods or merchandise, or owning, possessing or controlling such building, substance, tank, well or excavation, within a time to be fixed in the order, to remove such obstruction or nuisance; or to suppress or remove such trade or occupation; or to remove such goods or merchandise; or to prevent or stop the construction of such building; or to remove, repair or support it; or to alter the disposal of such substance; or to fence such tank, well or excavation, as the case may be; or to appear before himself or some other Magistrate of the first or second class, at a time and place to be fixed by the order, and move to have the order set aside or modified in manner hereinafter provided.

(2) No order duly made by a Magistrate under this section shall be called in question in any Civil Court.

Explanation.—A "public place" includes also property belonging to the State, camping-grounds and grounds left unoccupied for sanitary and recreative purposes.

Service or notification of order.

134. (1) The order shall, if practicable, be served on the person against whom it is made in manner herein provided for service of a summons.

(2) If such order cannot be so served, it shall be notified by proclamation, published in such manner as the Local Government may by rule direct, and a copy thereof shall be stuck up at such place or places as may be fittest for conveying the information to such person.

Person to whom order is addressed to obey,

135. The person against whom such order is made shall—

(a) perform, within the time specified in the order, the act directed thereby; or or show cause or claim jury.

(b) appear in accordance with such order and either show cause against the same, or apply to

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IV.—Prevention of Offences. Chapter X.—Public Nuisances.—Sections 136-143.)

the Magistrate by whom it was made to appoint a jury to try whether the same is reasonable and proper.

Consequence of his failing to do so.

136. If such person does not perform such act or appear and show cause or apply for the appointment of a jury as required by section 135, he shall be liable to the penalty prescribed in that behalf in section 188 of the Indian Penal Code, and the order shall be made absolute. XLV of 1860.

Procedure where he appears to show cause.

137. (1) If he appears and shows cause against the order, the Magistrate shall take evidence in the matter as in a summons-case.

(2) If the Magistrate is satisfied that the order is not reasonable and proper, no further proceedings shall be taken in the case.

(3) If the Magistrate is not so satisfied, the order shall be made absolute.

Procedure where he claims jury.

138. (1) On receiving an application under section 135 to appoint a jury, the Magistrate shall—

(a) forthwith appoint a jury consisting of an uneven number of persons not less than five, of whom the foreman and one-half of the remaining members shall be nominated by such Magistrate, and the other members by the applicant;

(b) summon such foreman and members to attend at such place and time as the Magistrate thinks fit; and (c) fix a time within which they are to return their verdict.

(2) The time so fixed may, for good cause shown, be extended by the Magistrate.

Procedure where jury finds Magistrate's order to be reasonable.

139. (1) If the jury or a majority of the jurors find that the order of the Magistrate is reasonable and proper as originally made, or subject to a modification which the Magistrate accepts, the Magistrate shall make the order absolute, subject to such modification (if any).

(2) In other cases, no further proceedings shall be taken under this chapter.

Procedure on order being made absolute.

140. (1) When an order has been made absolute under section 136, section 137 or section 139, the Magistrate shall give notice of the same to the person against whom the order was made, and shall further require him to perform the act directed by the order within a time to be fixed in the notice, and inform him that, in case of disobedience, he will be liable to the penalty provided by section 188 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

Consequences of disobedience to order.

(2) If such act is not performed within the time fixed, the Magistrate may cause it to be performed, and may recover the costs of performing it, either by the sale of any building, goods or other property removed by his order, or by the distress and sale of any other moveable property of such person within or without the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction. If such other property is without such limits, the order shall authorise its attachment and sale when endorsed by the Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property to be attached is found.

(3) No suit shall lie in respect of anything done in good faith under this section.

Procedure on failure to appoint jury or omission to return verdict.

141. If the applicant by neglect or otherwise prevents the appointment of the jury, or if from any cause the jury appointed do not return their verdict within the time fixed or within such further time as the Magistrate may in his discretion allow, the Magistrate may pass such order as he thinks fit, and such order shall be executed in the manner provided by section 140.

Injunction pending inquiry.

142. (1) If a Magistrate making an order under section 133 considers that immediate measures should be taken to prevent imminent danger or injury of a serious kind to the public, he may, whether a jury is to be, or has been, appointed or not, issue such an injunction to the person against whom the order was made as is required to obviate or prevent such danger or injury pending the determination of the matter.

(2) In default of such person forthwith obeying such injunction, the Magistrate may himself use, or cause to be used, such means as he thinks fit to obviate such danger or to prevent such injury.

(3) No suit shall lie in respect of anything done in good faith by a Magistrate under this section.

Magistrate may prohibit repetition or continuance of public nuisance.

143. A District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate, or any other Magistrate empowered by the Local Government or the District Magistrate in this behalf, may order any person not to repeat or continue a public nuisance, as defined in the Indian Penal Code or any special or local law. XLV of 1860.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IV.—Prevention of Offences. Chapter XI.—Temporary Orders in Urgent Cases of Nuisance or apprehended Danger.—Section 144. Chapter XII.—Disputes as to Immoveable Property.—Sections 145-146.)

CHAPTER XI.

TEMPORARY ORDERS IN URGENT CASES OF NUISANCE OR APPREHENDED DANGER.

Power to issue order absolute at once in urgent cases of nuisance or apprehended danger.

144. (1) In cases where, in the opinion of a District Magistrate, a Chief Presidency Magistrate, a Subdivisional Magistrate, or of any other Magistrate specially empowered by the Local Government or the Chief Presidency Magistrate or the District Magistrate to act under this section, immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable, such Magistrate may, by a written order stating the material facts of the case and served in manner provided by section 134, direct any person to abstain from a certain act or to take certain order with certain property in his possession or under his management, if such Magistrate considers that such direction is likely to prevent, or tends to prevent, obstruction, annoyance or injury, or risk of obstruction, annoyance or injury, to any person lawfully employed, or danger to human life, health or safety, or a riot or an affray.

(2) An order under this section may, in cases of emergency or in cases where the circumstances do not admit of the serving in due time of a notice upon the person against whom the order is directed, be passed ex parte.

(3) An order under this section may be directed to a particular individual, or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place.

(4) Any Magistrate may rescind or alter any order made under this section by himself or any Magistrate subordinate to him or by his predecessor in office.

(5) No order under this section shall remain in force for more than two months from the making thereof; unless, in cases of danger to human life, health or safety, or a likelihood of a riot or an affray, the Local Government, by notification in the official Gazette, otherwise directs.

CHAPTER XII.

DISPUTES AS TO IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

Procedure where dispute concerning land, etc., is likely to cause breach of peace.

145. (1) Whenever a District Magistrate, Subdivisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is satisfied from a police report or other information that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists concerning any and or water or the boundaries thereof, within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he shall make an order in writing, stating the grounds of his being so satisfied, and requiring the parties concerned in such dispute to attend his Court in person or by pleader, within a time to be fixed by such Magistrate, and to put in written statements of their respective claims as respects the fact of actual possession of the subject of dispute.

(2) For the purposes of this section the expression "land or water" includes buildings, markets, fisheries, crops or other produce of land, and the rents or profits of any such property.

(3) A copy of the order shall be served in manner provided by this Code for the service of a summons.

Inquiry as to possession.

(4) The Magistrate shall then, without reference to the merits of the claims of any of such parties to a right to possess the subject of dispute, peruse the statements so put in, hear the parties, receive the evidence produced by them respectively, consider the effect of such evidence, take such further evidence (if any) as he thinks necessary, and, if possible, decide whether any and which of the parties was at the date of the order before mentioned in such possession of the said subject:

Provided that, if it appears to the Magistrate that any party has within two months next before the date of such order been forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed, he may treat the party so dispossessed as if he had been in possession at such date.

(5) Nothing in this section shall preclude any party so required to attend, or any other person interested, from showing that no such dispute as aforesaid exists or has existed; and in such case the Magistrate shall cancel his said order, and all further proceedings thereon shall be stayed, but, subject to such cancellation, the order of the Magistrate under sub-section (1) shall be final.

Party in possession to retain possession until legally evicted.

(6) If the Magistrate decides that one of the parties was in such possession of the said subject, he shall issue an order declaring such party to be entitled to possession thereof until evicted therefrom in due course of law, and forbidding all disturbance of such possession until such eviction.

(7) Proceedings under this section shall not abate by reason only of the death of any of the parties thereto.

Power to attach subject of dispute.

146. (1) If the Magistrate decides that none of the parties was then in such possession, or is unable to satisfy himself as to which of them was then in such possession of the subject of dispute, he may attach it until a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties thereto, or the person entitled to possession thereof.

(2) When the Magistrate attaches the subject of dispute, he may, if he thinks fit, appoint a receiver thereof, who, subject to the control of the Magistrate, shall have all the powers of a receiver appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure. XIV of 1882

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IV.—Prevention of Offences. Chapter XII.—Disputes as to Immoveable Property.—Sections 147-148. Chapter XIII.—Preventive Action of the Police.—Sections 149-153. Part V.—Information to the Police and their Powers to Investigate. Chapter XIV.—Sections 154-155.)

Disputes concerning easements, etc.

147. Whenever any such Magistrate is satisfied as aforesaid that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists concerning the right of use of any land or water (including any right of way) within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he may inquire into the matter in manner provided by section 145; and may, if it appears to him that such right exists, make an order permitting such thing to be done, or directing that such thing shall not be done, as the case may be, until the person objecting to such thing being done, or claiming that such thing may be done, obtains the decision of a competent Court adjudging him to be entitled to prevent the doing of, or to do such thing, as the case may be :

Provided that no order shall be passed under this section permitting the doing of anything where the right to do such thing is exerciseable at all times of the year, unless such right has been exercised within three months next before the institution of the inquiry ; or, where the right is exerciseable only at particular seasons or on particular occasions, unless the right has been exercised during the last of such seasons or occasions before such institution.

Local inquiry.

148. (1) Whenever a local inquiry is necessary for the purposes of this chapter, any District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate may depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to make the inquiry, and may furnish him with such written instructions as may seem necessary for his guidance, and may declare by whom the whole or any part of the necessary expenses of the inquiry shall be paid.

(2) The report of the person so deputed may be read as evidence in the case.

Order as to costs.

(3) When any costs have been incurred by any party to a proceeding under this chapter for witnesses, or pleaders' fees, or both, the Magistrate passing a decision under section 145, section 146 or section 147 may direct by whom such costs shall be paid, whether by such party or by any other party to the proceeding, and whether in whole or in part or proportion. All costs so directed to be paid may be recovered as if they were fines.

CHAPTER XIII.

PREVENTIVE ACTION OF THE POLICE.

Police to prevent cognizable offences.

149. Every police-officer may interpose for the purpose of preventing, and shall, to the best of his ability, prevent, the commission of any cognizable offence.

Information of design to commit such offences.

150. Every police-officer receiving information of a design to commit any cognizable offence shall communicate such information to the police-officer to whom he is subordinate, and to any other officer whose duty it is to prevent or take cognizance of the commission of any such offence.

Arrest to prevent such offences.

151. A police-officer knowing of a design to commit any cognizable offence may arrest, without orders from a Magistrate and without a warrant, the person so designing, if it appears to such officer that the commission of the offence cannot be otherwise prevented.

Prevention of injury to public property.

152. A police-officer may of his own authority interpose to prevent any injury attempted to be committed in his view to any public property, moveable or immoveable, or the removal or injury of any public landmark, or buoy or other mark used for navigation.

Inspection of weights and measures.

153. (1) Any officer in charge of a police-station may, without a warrant, enter any place within the limits of such station for the purpose of inspecting or searching for any weights or measures or instruments for weighing, used or kept therein, whenever he has reason to believe that there are in such place any weights, measures or instruments for weighing which are false.

(2) If he finds in such place any weights, measures or instruments for weighing which are false, he may seize the same, and shall forthwith give information of such seizure to a Magistrate having jurisdiction.

PART V.

INFORMATION TO THE POLICE AND THEIR POWERS TO INVESTIGATE.

CHAPTER XIV.

Information in cognizable cases.

154. Every information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence, if given orally to an officer in charge of a police-station, shall be reduced to writing by him or under his direction, and be read over to the informant ; and every such information, whether given in writing or reduced to writing as aforesaid, shall be signed by the person giving it, and the substance thereof shall be entered in a book to be kept by such officer in such form as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf.

Information in non-cognizable cases.

155. (1) When information is given to an officer in charge of a police-station of the commission within the limits of such station of a non-cognizable offence,

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part V.—Information to the Police and their Powers to Investigate. Chapter XIV. —Sections 156-162.)

he shall enter in a book to be kept as aforesaid the substance of such information and refer the nformant to the Magistrate.

Investigation into non-cognizable cases.

(2) No police-officer shall investigate a non-cognizable case without the order of a Magistrate of the first or second class having power to try such case or commit the same for trial, or of a Presidency Magistrate.

(3) Any police-officer receiving such order may exercise the same powers in respect of the investigation (except the power to arrest without warrant) as an officer in charge of a police-station may exercise in a cognizable case.

Investigation into cognizable cases.

156. (1) Any officer in charge of a police-station may, without the order of a Magistrate, investigate any cognizable case which a Court having jurisdiction over the local area within the limits of such station would have power to inquire into or try under the provisions of Chapter XV relating to the place of inquiry or trial.

(2) No proceeding of a police-officer in any such case shall at any stage be called in question on the ground that the case was one which such officer was not empowered under this section to investigate.

(3) Any Magistrate empowered under section 190 may order such an investigation as above mentioned.

Procedure where cognizable offence suspected.

157. (1) If, from information received or otherwise, an officer in charge of a police-station has reason to suspect the commission of an offence which he is empowered under section 156 to investigate, he shall forthwith send a report of the same to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of such offence upon a police-report, and shall proceed in person, or shall depute one of his subordinate officers to proceed, to the spot to investigate the facts and circumstances of the case, and to take such measures as may be necessary for the discovery and arrest of the offender:

Provided as follows:—

Where local investigation dispensed with.

(a) when any information as to the commission of any such offence is given against any person by name and the case is not of a serious nature, the officer in charge of a police-station need not proceed in person or depute a subordinate officer to make an investigation on the spot;

Where police-officer in charge sees no sufficient ground for investigation.

(b) if it appear to the officer in charge of a police-station that there is no sufficient ground for entering on an investigation, he shall not investigate the case.

(2) In each of the cases mentioned in clauses (a) and (b) of the proviso to sub-section (1), the officer in charge of the police-station shall state in his said report his reasons for not fully complying with the requirements of that sub-section.

Reports under section 157 how submitted.

158. (1) Every report sent to a Magistrate under section 157 shall, if the Local Government so directs, be submitted through such superior officer of police as the Local Government, by general or special order, appoints in that behalf.

(2) Such superior officer may give such instructions to the officer in charge of the police-station as he thinks fit, and shall, after recording such instructions on such report, transmit the same without delay to the Magistrate.

Power to hold investigation or preliminary inquiry.

159. Such Magistrate, on receiving such report, may direct an investigation or, if he thinks fit, at once proceed, or depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to proceed, to hold a* preliminary inquiry into, or otherwise to dispose of, the case in manner provided in this Code.

Police-officer's power to require attendance of witnesses.

160. Any police-officer making an investigation under this chapter may, by order in writing, require the attendance before himself of any person being within the limits of his own or any adjoining station who, from the information given or otherwise, appears to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case; and such person shall attend as so required.

Examination of witnesses by police.

161. (1) Any police-officer making an investigation under this chapter may examine orally any person supposed to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case.

(2) Such person shall be bound to answer all questions relating to such case put to him by such officer, other than questions the answers to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge or to a penalty or forfeiture.

Statements to police not to be signed or admitted in evidence.

162. (1) No statement made by any person to a police-officer in the course of an investigation under this chapter shall, if taken down in writing, be signed by the person making it, nor shall such writing be used as evidence:

Provided that, when any witness is called for the prosecution whose statement has been taken down in writing as aforesaid, the Court shall, on the request of the accused, refer to such writing and may then direct that the accused be furnished with a copy thereof: and such statement may be used to impeach the credit of such witness in manner provided by the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. I of 1872.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part V.—Information to the Police and their Powers to Investigate. Chapter XIV. —Sections 163-167.)

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to apply to any statement falling within the provisions of section 32, sub-section (1), of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

I of 1872.

163. (1) No police-officer or person in authority shall offer or make, or cause to be offered or made, any such inducement, threat or promise as is mentioned in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 24.

No inducement to be offered.

I of 1872.

(2) But no police-officer or other person shall prevent, by any caution or otherwise, any person from making in the course of any investigation under this chapter any statement which he may be disposed to make of his own free will.

164. (1) Every Magistrate not being a police-officer may record any statement or confession made to him in the course of an investigation under this chapter or at any time afterwards before the commencement of the inquiry or trial.

Power to record statements and confessions.

(2) Such statements shall be recorded in such of the manners hereinafter prescribed for recording evidence as is, in his opinion, best fitted for the circumstances of the case. Such confessions shall be recorded and signed in the manner provided in section 364, and such statements or confessions shall then be forwarded to the Magistrate by whom the case is to be inquired into or tried.

(3) No Magistrate shall record any such confession unless, upon questioning the person making it, he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily; and, when he records any confession, he shall make a memorandum at the foot of such record to the following effect:—

"I believe that this confession was voluntarily made. It was taken in my presence and hearing, and was read over to the person making it and admitted by him to be correct, and it contains a full and true account of the statement made by him.

(Signed) A. B.,
Magistrate."

Explanation.—It is not necessary that the Magistrate receiving and recording a confession or statement should be a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case.

165. (1) Whenever an officer in charge of a police-station, or a police-officer making an investigation, considers that the production of any document or thing is necessary to the conduct of an investigation into any offence which he is authorised to investigate, and there is reason to believe that a person to whom a summons or order under section 94 has been or might be issued will not or would not produce such document or thing according to the directions of the summons or order, or when such document or thing is not known to be in the possession of any person, such officer may search, or cause search to be made, for the same, in any place within the limits of the station of which he is in charge, or to which he is attached.

Search by police-officer.

(2) Such officer shall, if practicable, conduct the search in person.

(3) If he is unable to conduct the search in person, and there is no other person competent to make the search present at the time, he may require any officer subordinate to him to make the search, and he shall deliver to such subordinate officer an order in writing, specifying the document or thing for which search is to be made, and the place to be searched; and such subordinate officer may thereupon search for such thing in such place.

(4) The provisions of this Code as to search-warrants shall, so far as may be, apply to a search made under this section.

166. (1) An officer in charge of a police-station may require an officer in charge of another police-station, whether in the same or a different district, to cause a search to be made in any place, in any case in which the former officer might cause such search to be made within the limits of his own station.

When officer in charge of police-station may require another to issue search-warrant.

(2) Such officer, on being so required, shall proceed according to the provisions of section 165, and shall forward the thing found, if any, to the officer at whose request the search was made.

167. (1) Whenever it appears that any investigation under this chapter cannot be completed within the period of twenty-four hours fixed by section 61, and there are grounds for believing that the accusation or information is well-founded, the officer in charge of the police-station shall forthwith transmit to the nearest Magistrate a copy of the entries in the diary hereinafter prescribed relating to the case, and shall at the same time forward the accused (if any) to such Magistrate.

Procedure when investigation cannot be completed in twenty-four hours.

(2) The Magistrate to whom an accused person is forwarded under this section may, whether he has or has not jurisdiction to try the case, from time to time authorise the detention of the accused in such custody as such Magistrate thinks fit, for a term not exceeding fifteen days in the whole. If he has not jurisdiction to try the case or commit it for trial, and considers further detention unnecessary, he may order the accused to be forwarded to a Magistrate having such jurisdiction.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part V.—Information to the Police and their Powers to Investigate. Chapter XIV. —Sections 168-172.)

(3) A Magistrate authorising under this section detention in the custody of the police shall record his reasons for so doing.

(4) If such order be given by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate, he shall forward a copy of his order, with his reasons for making it, to the Magistrate to whom he is immediately subordinate.

Report of investigation by subordinate police-officer.

168. When any subordinate police-officer has made any investigation under this chapter, he shall report the result of such investigation to the officer in charge of the police-station.

Release of accused when evidence deficient.

169. If, upon an investigation under this chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police-station that there is not sufficient evidence or reasonable ground of suspicion to justify the forwarding of the accused to a Magistrate, such officer shall, if such person is in custody, release him on his executing a bond, with or without sureties, as such officer may direct, to appear, if and when so required, before a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a police-report and to try the accused or commit him for trial.

Case to be sent to Magistrate when evidence is sufficient.

170. (1) If, upon an investigation under this chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police-station that there is sufficient evidence or reasonable ground as aforesaid, such officer shall forward the accused under custody to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence upon a police-report and to try the accused or commit him for trial or, if the offence is bailable and the accused is able to give security, shall take security from him for his appearance before such Magistrate on a day fixed and for his attendance from day to day before such Magistrate until otherwise directed.

(2) When the officer in charge of a police-station forwards an accused person to a Magistrate or takes security for his appearance before such Magistrate under this section, he shall send to such Magistrate any weapon or other article which it may be necessary to produce before him, and shall require the complainant (if any) and so many of the persons who appear to such officer to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case as he may think necessary, to execute a bond to appear before the Magistrate as thereby directed and prosecute or give evidence (as the case may be) in the matter of the charge against the accused.

(3) If the Court of the District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate be mentioned in the bond, such Court shall be held to include any Court to which such Magistrate may refer the case for inquiry or trial, provided reasonable notice of such reference be given to such complainant or persons.

(4) The day fixed under this section shall be the day whereon the accused person is to appear if security for his appearance has been taken, or the day on which he may be expected to arrive at the Court of the Magistrate, if he is to be forwarded in custody.

(5) The officer in whose presence the bond is executed shall deliver a copy thereof to one of the persons who executed it, and shall then send to the Magistrate the original with its report.

Complainants and witnesses not to be required to accompany police-officer.

171. No complainant or witness on his way to the Court of the Magistrate shall be required to accompany a police-officer, Complainants and witnesses not to be subjected to restraint.

or shall be subjected to unnecessary restraint or inconvenience, or required to give any security for his appearance other than his own bond:

Recusant complainant or witness may be forwarded in custody.

Provided that, if any complainant or witness refuses to attend or to execute a bond as directed in section 170, the officer in charge of the police-station may forward him in custody to the Magistrate, who may detain him in custody until he executes such bond, or until the hearing of the case is completed.

Diary of proceedings in investigation.

172. (1) Every police-officer making an investigation under this chapter shall day by day enter his proceedings in the investigation in a diary, setting forth the time at which the information reached him, the time at which he began and closed his investigation, the place or places visited by him, and a statement of the circumstances ascertained through his investigation.

(2) Any Criminal Court may send for the police-diaries of a case under inquiry or trial in such Court, and may use such diaries, not as evidence in the case, but to aid it in such inquiry or trial. Neither the accused nor his agents shall be entitled to call for such diaries, nor shall he or they be entitled to see them merely because they are referred to by the Court; but if they are used by the police-officer who made them to refresh his memory, or if the Court uses them for the purpose of contradicting such police-officer, the

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

1872 provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 161 or section 145, as the case may be, shall apply.

Report of police-officer.

173. (1) Every investigation under this chapter shall be completed without unnecessary delay, and, as soon as it is completed, the officer in charge of the police-station shall forward to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a police-report a report in the form prescribed by the Local Government, setting forth the names of the parties, the nature of the information and the names of the persons who appear to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case, and stating whether the accused person has been forwarded in custody, or has been released on his bond, and, if so, whether with or without sureties.

(2) Where a superior officer of police has been appointed under section 158, the report shall, in any cases in which the Local Government by general or special order so directs, be submitted through that officer, and he may, pending the orders of the Magistrate, direct the officer in charge of the police-station to make further investigation.

(3) Whenever it appears from a report forwarded under this section that the accused has been released on his bond, the Magistrate shall make such order for the discharge of such bond or otherwise as he thinks fit.

Police to inquire and report on suicide, etc.

174. (1) The officer in charge of a police-station, or some other police-officer specially empowered by the Local Government in that behalf, on receiving information that a person—

(a) has committed suicide, or

(b) has been killed by another, or by an animal, or by machinery, or by an accident, or

(c) has died under circumstances raising a reasonable suspicion that some other person has committed an offence, shall immediately give intimation thereof to the nearest Magistrate empowered to hold inquests, and, unless otherwise directed by any rule prescribed by the Local Government, or by any general or special order of the District or Subdivisional Magistrate, shall proceed to the place where the body of such deceased person is, and there, in the presence of two or more respectable inhabitants of the neighbourhood, shall make an investigation, and draw up a report of the apparent cause of death, describing such wounds, fractures, bruises and other marks of injury as may be found on the body, and stating in what manner, or by what weapon or instrument (if any), such marks appear to have been inflicted.

(2) The report shall be signed by such police-officer and other persons, or by so many of them as concur therein, and shall be forthwith forwarded to the District Magistrate or the Subdivisional Magistrate.

(3) When there is any doubt regarding the cause of death, or when for any other reason the police-officer considers it expedient so to do, he shall, subject to such rules as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf, forward the body, with a view to its being examined, to the nearest Civil Surgeon, or other qualified medical man appointed in this behalf by the Local Government, if the state of the weather and the distance admit of its being so forwarded without risk of such putrefaction on the road as would render such examination useless.

(4) In the Presidencies of Fort St. George and Bombay, investigations under this section may be made by the head of the village, who shall then report the result to the nearest Magistrate authorised to hold inquests.

(5) The following Magistrates are empowered to hold inquests, namely, any District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate, and any Magistrate specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government or the District Magistrate.

Power to summon persons.

175. (1) A police-officer proceeding under section 174 may, by order in writing, summon two or more persons as aforesaid for the purpose of the said investigation, and any other person who appears to be acquainted with the facts of the case. Every person so summoned shall be bound to attend and to answer truly all questions other than questions the answers to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge, or to a penalty or forfeiture.

(2) If the facts do not disclose a cognizable offence to which section 170 applies, such persons shall not be required by the police-officer to attend a Magistrate's Court.

Inquiry by Magistrate into cause of death.

176. (1) When any person dies while in the custody of the police, the nearest Magistrate empowered to hold inquests shall, and, in any other case mentioned in section 174, clauses (a), (b) and (c) of sub-section (1), any Magistrate so empowered may hold an inquiry into the cause of death

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XV.—Of the Jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts in Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 177-181.)

either instead of, or in addition to, the investigation held by the police-officer; and, if he does so, he shall have all the powers in conducting it which he would have in holding an inquiry into an offence. The Magistrate holding such an inquiry shall record the evidence taken by him in connection therewith in any of the manners hereinafter prescribed according to the circumstances of the case.

Power to disinter corpses.

(2) Whenever such Magistrate considers it expedient to make an examination of the dead body of any person who has been already interred, in order to discover the cause of his death, the Magistrate may cause the body to be disinterred and examined.

PART VI.

PROCEEDINGS IN PROSECUTIONS.

CHAPTER XV.

OF THE JURISDICTION OF THE CRIMINAL COURTS IN INQUIRIES AND TRIALS.

A.—Place of Inquiry or Trial.

Ordinary place of inquiry and trial.

177. Every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into and tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed.

Power to order cases to be tried in different sessions divisions.

178. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 177, the Local Government may direct that any cases or class of cases committed for trial in any district may be tried in any sessions division:

24 & 25 Vict. c. 104.

Provided that such direction be not repugnant to any direction previously issued by the High Court under section 15 of the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or under this Code, section 526.

Accused triable in district where act is done or where consequence ensues.

179. When a person is accused of the commission of any offence by reason of anything which has been done, and of any consequence which has ensued, such offence may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any such thing has been done, or any such consequence has ensued.

Illustrations.

(a) A is wounded within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X, and dies within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Z. The offence of the culpable homicide of A may be inquired into or tried either by X or Z.

(b) A is wounded within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X, and is, during ten days within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Y, and during ten days more within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Z, unable in the local limits of the jurisdiction of either Court Y or Court Z to follow his ordinary pursuits. The offence of causing grievous hurt to A may be inquired into or tried by X, Y or Z.

(c) A is put in fear of injury within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X, and is thereby induced, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Y, to deliver property to the person who put him in fear. The offence of extortion committed on A may be inquired into or tried either by X or Y.

(d) A is wounded in the Native State of Baroda, and dies of his wounds in Poona. The offence of causing A's death may be inquired into and tried in Poona.

Place of trial where act is offence by reason of relation to other offence.

180. When an act is an offence by reason of its relation to any other act which is also an offence or which would be an offence if the doer were capable of committing an offence, a charge of the first-mentioned offence may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction either act was done.

Illustrations.

(a) A charge of abetment may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the abetment was committed, or by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offence abetted was committed.

(b) A charge of receiving or retaining stolen goods may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the goods were stolen, or by any Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any of them were at any time dishonestly received or retained.

(c) A charge of wrongfully concealing a person known to have been kidnapped may be inquired into or tried by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the wrongful concealing, or by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the kidnapping, took place.

Being a thug or belonging to a gang of dacoits, escape from custody, etc.

181. (1) The offence of being a thug, of being a thug and committing murder, of dacoity, of dacoity with murder, of having belonged to a gang of dacoits, or of having escaped from custody, may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person charged is.

Criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust.

(2) The offence of criminal misappropriation or of criminal breach of trust may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any part of the property which is the subject of the offence was received or retained by the accused person, or the offence was committed.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XV.—Of the Jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts in Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 182-188.)

(3) The offence of stealing anything may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such thing was stolen or was possessed by the thief or by any person who received or retained the same knowing or having reason to believe it to be stolen.

Stealing.

(4) The offence of kidnapping or abduction may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person kidnapped or abducted was kidnapped or abducted or was conveyed or concealed or detained.

Kidnapping and abduction.

182. When it is uncertain in which of several local areas an offence was committed, or Place of inquiry or trial where scene of offence is uncertain or not in one district only; or where offence is continuing, or consists of several acts.

where an offence is committed partly in one local area and partly in another, or where an offence is a continuing one, and continues to be committed in more local areas than one, or where it consists of several acts done in different local areas, it may be inquired into or tried by a Court having jurisdiction over any of such local areas.

183. An offence committed whilst the offender is in the course of performing a journey or voyage may be inquired into or tried by a Court through or into the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offender, or the person against whom, or the thing in respect of which, the offence was committed, passed in the course of that journey or voyage.

Offence committed on a journey.

184. All offences against the provisions of any law for the time being in force relating to Railways, Telegraphs, the Post-office or Arms and Ammunition may be inquired into or tried in a presidency-town, whether the offence is stated to have been committed within such town or not:

Offences against Railway, Telegraph, Post-office and Arms Acts.

Provided that the offender and all the witnesses necessary for his prosecution are to be found within such town.

185. (1) Whenever any doubt arises as to the Court by which any offence should under the preceding provisions of this chapter be inquired into or tried, the High Court, within the local limits of whose appellate criminal jurisdiction the offender actually is, may decide by which Court the offence shall be inquired into or tried.

High Court to decide, in case of doubt, district where inquiry or trial shall take place.

(2) In Lower Burma, when the offender is an European British subject, the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon, and in all other cases the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, shall for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be the High Court.

186. (1) When a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate, or, if he is specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, a Magistrate of the first class, sees reason to believe that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction has committed without such limits (whether within or without British India) an offence which cannot, under the provisions of sections 177 to 184 (both inclusive), or any other law for the time being in force, be inquired into or tried within such local limits, but is under some law for the time being in force triable in British India, such Magistrate may inquire into the offence as if it had been committed within such local limits, and compel such person in manner hereinbefore provided to appear before him, and send such person to the Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into or try such offence, or, if such offence is bailable, take a bond with or without sureties for his appearance before such Magistrate.

Power to issue summons or warrant for offence committed beyond local jurisdiction.

Magistrate's procedure on arrest.

(2) When there are more Magistrates than one having such jurisdiction and the Magistrate acting under this section cannot satisfy himself as to the Magistrate to or before whom such person should be sent, or bound to appear, the case shall be reported for the orders of the High Court.

187. (1) If the person has been arrested under a warrant issued under section 186 by a Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate, such Magistrate shall send the person arrested to the District or Subdivisional Magistrate to whom he is subordinate, unless the Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into or try such offence issues his warrant for the arrest of such person, in which case the person arrested shall be delivered to the police-officer executing such warrant, or shall be sent to the Magistrate by whom such warrant was issued.

Procedure where warrant issued by subordinate Magistrate.

(2) If the offence which the person arrested is alleged or suspected to have committed is one which may be inquired into or tried by any Criminal Court in the same district other than that of the Magistrate acting under section 186, such Magistrate shall send such person to such Court.

188. When a Native Indian subject of Her Majesty commits an offence at any place without and beyond the limits of British India, or Liability of British subjects for offences committed out of British India.

when any British subject commits an offence in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India, or

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XV.—Of the Jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts in Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 189-194.)

(b) when a servant of the Queen (whether a British subject or not) commits an offence in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India, he may be dealt with in respect of such offence as if it had been committed at any place within British India at which he may be found:

Political Agent to certify fitness of inquiry into charge.

Provided that no charge as to any such offence shall be inquired into in British India unless the Political Agent, if there be one, for the territory in which the offence is alleged to have been committed certifies that, in his opinion, the charge ought to be inquired into in British India; and, where there is no Political Agent, the sanction of the Local Government shall be required:

XXI of 1879.

Provided also that any proceedings taken against any person under this section which would be a bar to subsequent proceedings against such person for the same offence if such offence had been committed in British India shall be a bar to further proceedings against him under the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act, 1879, in respect of the same offence in any territory beyond the limits of British India.

Power to direct copies of depositions and exhibits to be received in evidence.

189. Whenever any such offence as is referred to in section 188 is being inquired into or tried, the Local Government may, if it thinks fit, direct that copies of depositions made or exhibits produced before the Political Agent or a judicial officer in or for the territory in which such offence is alleged to have been committed shall be received as evidence by the Court holding such inquiry or trial in any case in which such Court might issue a Commission for taking evidence as to the matters to which such depositions or exhibits relate.

B.—Conditions requisite for Initiation of Proceedings.

[Act X of 1882, s. 191.]

Cognizance of offences by Magistrates.

190. (1) Except as hereinafter provided, any Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, and any other Magistrate specially empowered in this behalf, may take cognizance of any offence—

(a) upon receiving a complaint of facts which constitute such offence;

(b) upon a police-report of such facts;

(c) upon information received from any person other than a police-officer, or upon his own knowledge or suspicion, that such offence has been committed.

(2) The Local Government, or the District Magistrate subject to the general or special orders of the Local Government, may empower any Magistrate to take cognizance under sub-section (1), clause (a) or clause (b), of offences for which he may try or commit for trial.

(3) The Local Government may empower any Magistrate of the first or second class to take cognizance under sub-section (1), clause (c), of offences for which he may try or commit for trial.

Transfer or commitment on application of accused.

191. When a Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence under sub-section (1), clause (c), of the preceding section, the accused shall, before any evidence is taken, be informed that he is entitled to have the case tried by another Court, and if the accused, or any of the accused if there be more than one, objects to being tried by such Magistrate, the case shall, instead of being tried by such Magistrate, be committed to the Court of Session or transferred to another Magistrate. [Act X of 1882, s. 191, last para.]

Transfer of cases by Magistrates.

192. (1) Any Chief Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate may transfer any case, of which he has taken cognizance, for inquiry or trial to any Magistrate subordinate to him.

(2) Any District Magistrate may empower any Magistrate of the first class who has taken cognizance of any case to transfer it for inquiry or trial to any other specified Magistrate in his district who is competent under this Code to try the accused or commit him for trial; and such Magistrate may dispose of the case accordingly.

Cognizance of offences by Courts of Session.

193. (1) Except as otherwise expressly provided by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force, no Court of Session shall take cognizance of any offence as a Court of original jurisdiction unless the accused has been committed to it by a Magistrate duly empowered in that behalf.

(2) Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges shall try such cases only as the Local Government by general or special order may direct them to try, or, in the case of Assistant Sessions Judges, as the Sessions Judge of the division by general or special order may make over to them for trial.

Cognizance of offences by High Court.

194. (1) The High Court may take cognizance of any offence upon a commitment made to it in manner hereinafter provided.

Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect the provisions of any letters patent granted under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or any other provision of this Code. 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XV.—Of the Jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts in Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 195-197.)

(2) (a) Notwithstanding anything in this Code contained, the Advocate General may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council or the Local Government, exhibit to the High Court, against persons subject to the jurisdiction of the High Court, informations for all purposes for which Her Majesty's Attorney-General may exhibit informations on behalf of the Crown in the High Court of Justice in England.

Informations by Advocate General.

[Act X of 1875, s. 144.] (b) Such proceedings may be taken upon every such information as may lawfully be taken in case of similar informations filed by Her Majesty's Attorney-General so far as the circumstances of the case and the practice and procedure of the said High Court will admit.

(c) All fines, penalties, forfeitures, debts and sums of money recovered or levied under or by virtue of any such information shall belong to the Government of India.

(d) The High Court may make rules for carrying into effect the provisions of this section.

195. (1) No Court shall take cognizance—

(a) of any offence punishable under sections 172 to 188 (both inclusive) of the Indian Penal Code, except with the previous sanction, or on the complaint, of the public servant concerned or of some public servant to whom he is subordinate ;

Prosecution for contempts of lawful authority of public servants. XLV of 1860.

(b) of any offence punishable under section 193, 194, 195, 196, 199, 200, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211 or 228 of the same Code, when such offence is committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except with the previous sanction, or on the complaint, of such Court, or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate ;

Prosecution for certain offences against public justice.

(c) of any offence described in section 463 or punishable under section 471, 475 or 476 of the same Code, when such offence has been committed by a party to any proceeding in any Court in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in such proceeding, except with the previous sanction, or on the complaint, of such Court, or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate.

Prosecution for certain offences relating to documents given in evidence.

(2) In clauses (b) and (c) of this section the term "Court" means a Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court, but does not include a Registrar or Sub-Registrar under the Indian Registration Act, 1877.

III of 1877. (3) The provisions of this section, with reference to the offences named therein, apply also to the abetment of such offences, and attempts to commit them.

(4) The sanction referred to in this section may be expressed in general terms, and need not name the accused person ; but it shall, so far as practicable, specify the Court or other place in which, and the occasion on which, the offence was committed.

Nature of sanction necessary.

(5) When sanction is given in respect of any offence referred to in this section, the Court taking cognizance of the case may frame a charge of any other offence so referred to which is disclosed by the facts.

(6) Any sanction given or refused under this section may be revoked or granted by any authority to which the authority giving or refusing it is subordinate ; and no sanction shall remain in force for more than six months from the date on which it was given : provided that the High Court may, for good cause shewn, extend the time

(7) For the purposes of this section every Court shall be deemed to be subordinate only to the Court to which appeals from the former Court ordinarily lie, that is to say :—

(a) where such appeals lie to more than one Court, the Appellate Court of inferior jurisdiction shall be the Court to which such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate ;

(b) where such appeals lie to a Civil and also to a Revenue Court, such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the Civil or Revenue Court according to the nature of the case in connection with which the offence is alleged to have been committed ;

(c) where no appeal lies, such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the principal Court of original jurisdiction within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such first-mentioned Court is situate.

196 No Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under Chapter VI of the Indian Penal Code (except section 127), or punishable under section 108A, or section 153A or section 294A or section 505 of the same Code, unless upon complaint made by order of, or under authority from, the Governor General in Council, the Local Government, or some officer empowered by the Governor General in Council in this behalf.

Prosecution for offences against State. XLV of 1860.

197. (1) When any Judge, or any public servant not removable from his office without the sanction of the Government of India or the Local Government, is accused as such Judge or public servant of any offence no Court shall take cognizance of such offence except with the previous sanction of the Government having power to order his removal or of some officer empowered in this behalf by such Government, or of some Court or other authority to which such Judge or public servant is subordinate, and whose power to give such sanction has not been limited by such Government.

Prosecution of Judges and public servants.

Part VI.—Poceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XV.—Of the Jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts in Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 198-199. Chapter XVI.—Of Complaints to Magistrates.—Sections 200-203. Chapter XVII.—Of the Commencement of Proceedings before Magistrates —Section 204.)

Power of Government as to prosecution.

(2) Such Government may determine the person by whom, and the manner in which, and the offence or offences for which, the prosecution of such Judge or public servant is to be conducted, and may specify the Court before which the trial is to be held.

Prosecution for breach of contract, defamation and offences against marriage.

XLV of 1860.

198. No Court shall take cognizance of an offence falling under Chapter XIX or Chapter XXI of the Indian Penal Code or under sections 493 to 496 (both inclusive) of the same Code, except upon a complaint made by some person aggrieved by such offence.

Prosecution for adultery or enticing a married woman.

XLV of 1860.

199. No Court shall take cognizance of an offence under section 497 or section 498 of the Indian Penal Code, except upon a complaint made by the husband of the woman, or, in his absence, by some person who had care of such woman on his behalf at the time when such offence was committed.

CHAPTER XVI.

OF COMPLAINTS TO MAGISTRATES.

Examination of complainant.

200. Subject to the provisions of section 476, a Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence on complaint shall at once examine the complainant upon oath, and the substance of the examination shall be reduced to writing and shall be signed by the complainant, and also by the Magistrate:

Provided as follows:—

(a) when the complaint is made in writing, nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require a Magistrate to examine the complainant before transferring the case under section 192;

(b) where the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate, such examination may be on oath or not as the Magistrate in each case thinks fit, and need not be reduced to writing; but the Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, before the matter of the complaint is brought before him, require it to be reduced to writing:

(c) when the case has been transferred under section 192 and the Magistrate so transferring it has already examined the complainant, the Magistrate to whom it is so transferred shall not be bound to re-examine the complainant.

Procedure by Magistrate not competent to take cognizance of the case.

201. (1) If the complaint has been made in writing to a Magistrate who is not competent to take cognizance of the case, he shall return the complaint for presentation to the proper Court with an endorsement to that effect.

(2) If the complaint has not been made in writing, such Magistrate shall direct the complainant to the proper Court.

Postponement of issue of process.

202. (1) If the Chief Presidency Magistrate, or any other Presidency Magistrate whom the Local Government may from time to time authorise in this behalf, or any Magistrate of the first or second class, is not satisfied as to the truth of a complaint of an offence of which he is authorised to take cognizance, he may, when the complainant has been examined, record his reasons, and may then postpone the issue of process for compelling the attendance of the person complained against. and either inquire into the case himself or direct a previous local investigation to be made by any officer subordinate to such Magistrate, or by a police-officer, or by such other person, not being a Magistrate or police-officer, as he thinks fit, for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complaint.

(2) If such investigation is made by some person not being a Magistrate or a police-officer, he shall exercise all the powers conferred by this Code on an officer in charge of a police-station, except that he shall not have power to arrest without warrant.

(3) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Dismissal of complaint.

203. The Magistrate before whom a complaint is made or to whom it has been transferred may dismiss the complaint if, after examining the complainant and considering the result of the investigation (if any) made under section 202, there is in his judgment no sufficient ground for proceeding. In such case he shall briefly record his reasons for so doing.

CHAPTER XVII.

OF THE COMMENCEMENT OF PROCEEDINGS BEFORE MAGISTRATES.

Issue of process.

204. (1) If, in the opinion of a Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence, there is sufficient ground for proceeding, and the case appears to be one in which, according to the fourth column of the second schedule, a summons should issue in the first instance, he shall issue his summons for the attendance of the accused. If the case appears to be one in which, according to that column, a warrant should issue in the first instance, he may issue a warrant, or, if he thinks fit, a summons, for causing the accused to be brought or to appear at a certain time before such Magistrate or (if he has not jurisdiction himself) some other Magistrate having jurisdiction.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the provisions of section 90.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XVII.—Of the Commencement of Proceedings before Magistrates.—Section 205. Chapter XVIII.—Of Inquiry into Cases triable by the Court of Session or High Court.—Sections 206-212.)

(3) When by any law for the time being in force any process-fees or other fees are payable, no process shall be issued until the fees are paid, and, if such fees are not paid within a reasonable time, the Magistrate may dismiss the complaint.

Magistrate may dispense with personal attendance of accused.

205. (1) Whenever a Magistrate issues a summons, he may, if he sees reason so to do, dispense with the personal attendance of the accused, and permit him to appear by his pleader.

(2) But the Magistrate inquiring into or trying the case may, in his discretion, at any stage of the proceedings, direct the personal attendance of the accused, and, if necessary, enforce such attendance in manner hereinbefore provided.

CHAPTER XVIII.

OF INQUIRY INTO CASES TRIABLE BY THE COURT OF SESSION OR HIGH COURT.

Power to commit for trial.

206. (1) Subject to the provisions of section 443, any Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Subdivisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, or any Magistrate empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, may commit any person for trial to the Court of Session or High Court for any offence triable by such Court.

(2) But, save as herein otherwise provided, no person triable by the Court of Session shall be committed for trial to the High Court.

Procedure in inquiries preparatory to commitment.

207. The following procedure shall be adopted in inquiries before Magistrates where the case is triable exclusively by a Court of Session or High Court, or, in the opinion of the Magistrate, ought to be tried by such Court.

Taking of evidence produced.

208. (1) The Magistrate shall, when the accused appears or is brought before him, proceed to hear the complainant (if any), and take in manner hereinafter provided all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution or in behalf of the accused, or as may be called for by the Magistrate.

(2) The accused shall be at liberty to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution, and in such case the prosecutor may re-examine them.

Process for production of further evidence.

(3) If the complainant or officer conducting the prosecution, or the accused, applies to the Magistrate to issue process to compel the attendance of any witness or the production of any document or thing, the Magistrate shall issue such process unless, for reasons to be recorded, he deems it unnecessary to do so.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to require a Presidency Magistrate to record his reasons.

When accused person to be discharged.

209. (1) When the evidence referred to in section 208, sub-sections (1) and (3), has been taken, and he has (if necessary) examined the accused for the purpose of enabling him to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him, such Magistrate shall, if he finds that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused person for trial, record his reasons and discharge him, unless it appears to the Magistrate that such person should be tried before himself or some other Magistrate, in which case he shall proceed accordingly.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a Magistrate from discharging the accused at any previous stage of the case if, for reasons to be recorded by such Magistrate, he considers the charge to be groundless.

When charge is to be framed.

210. (1) When, upon such evidence being taken and such examination (if any) being made, the Magistrate is satisfied that there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, he shall frame a charge under his hand, declaring with what offence the accused is charged.

Charge to be explained, and copy furnished, to accused.

(2) As soon as the charge has been framed, it shall be read and explained to the accused, and a copy thereof shall, if he so requires, be given to him free of cost.

List of witnesses for defence on trial.

211. (1) The accused shall be required at once to give in, orally or in writing, a list of the persons (if any) whom he wishes to be summoned to give evidence on his trial.

Further list.

(2) The Magistrate may, in his discretion, allow the accused to give in any further list of witnesses at a subsequent time; and, where the accused is committed for trial before the High Court, nothing in this section shall be deemed to preclude the accused from giving, at any time before his trial, to the Clerk of the Crown a further list of the persons whom he wishes to be summoned to give evidence on such trial.

Power of Magistrate to examine such witnesses

212. The Magistrate may, in his discretion, summon and examine any witness named in any list given in to him under section 211.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XVIII.—Of Inquiry into Cases triable by the Court of Session or High Court.—Sections 213-219.)

Order of commitment.

213. (1) When the accused, on being required to give in a list under section 211, has declined to do so, or when he has given in such list and the witnesses (if any) included therein whom the Magistrate desires to examine have been summoned and examined under section 212, the Magistrate may make an order committing the accused for trial by the High Court or the Court of Session (as the case may be), and (unless the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate) shall also record briefly the reasons for such commitment.

(2) If the Magistrate, after hearing the witnesses for the defence, is satisfied that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused, he may cancel the charge and discharge the accused.

Person charged outside presidency-towns jointly with European British subject.

214. If any person (not being an European British subject) is accused before a Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate of having committed an offence conjointly with an European British subject who is about to be committed for trial, or to be tried, before the High Court on a similar charge arising out of the same transaction, and the Magistrate finds that there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, he shall commit him for trial before the High Court, and not before the Court of Session.

Quashing commitments under section 213 or 214.

215. A commitment once made under section 213 or section 214 by a competent Magistrate or by a Court of Session under section 477, or by a Civil or Revenue Court under section 478, can be quashed by the High Court only, and only on a point of law.

Summons to witnesses for defence when accused is committed.

216. When the accused has given in any list of witnesses under section 211 and has been committed for trial, the Magistrate shall summon such of the witnesses included in the list, as have not appeared before himself, to appear before the Court to which the accused has been committed:

Provided that, where the accused has been committed to the High Court, the Magistrate may, in his discretion, leave such witnesses to be summoned by the Clerk of the Crown, and such witnesses may be summoned accordingly:

Refusal to summon unnecessary witness unless deposit made.

Provided also that if the Magistrate thinks that any witness is included in the list for the purpose of vexation or delay, or of defeating the ends of justice, the Magistrate may require the accused to satisfy him that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the evidence of such witness is material, and, if he is not so satisfied, may refuse to summon the witness (recording his reasons for such refusal), or may before summoning him require such sum to be deposited as such Magistrate thinks necessary to defray the expense of obtaining the attendance of the witness and all other proper expenses.

Bond of complainants and witnesses.

217. (1) Complainants and witnesses for the prosecution and defence, whose attendance before the Court of Session or High Court is necessary and who appear before the Magistrate, shall execute before him bonds binding themselves to be in attendance when called upon at the Court of Session or High Court to prosecute or to give evidence, as the case may be.

Detention in custody in case of refusal to attend or to execute bond.

(2) If any complainant or witness refuses to attend before the Court of Session or High Court, or execute the bond above directed, the Magistrate may detain him in custody until he executes such bond, or until his attendance at the Court of Session or High Court is required, when the Magistrate shall send him in custody to the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be.

Commitment when to be notified.

218. (1) When the accused is committed for trial, the Magistrate shall issue an order to such person as may be appointed by the Local Government in this behalf, notifying the commitment, and stating the offence in the same form as the charge, unless the Magistrate is satisfied that such person is already aware of the commitment and the form of the charge;

Charge, etc., to be forwarded to High Court or Court of Session.

and shall send the charge, the record of the inquiry and any weapon or other thing which is to be produced in evidence, to the Court of Session or (where the commitment is made to the High Court) to the Clerk of the Crown or other officer appointed in this behalf by the High Court.

English translation to be forwarded to High Court.

(2) When the commitment is made to the High Court and any part of the record is not in English, an English translation of such part shall be forwarded with the record.

Power to summon supplementary witnesses.

219 (1) The Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, summon and examine supplementary witnesses after the commitment and before the commencement of the trial, and bind them over in manner hereinbefore provided to appear and give evidence.

(2) Such examination shall, if possible, be taken in the presence of the accused, and, where the Magistrate is not a Presidency Magistrate, a copy of the evidence of such witnesses shall, if the accused so require, be given to him free of cost.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XVIII.—Of Inquiry into Cases triable by the Court of Session or High Court.—Section 220. Chapter XIX.—Of the Charge.—Sections 221-224.)

220. Until and during the trial, the Magistrate shall, subject to the provisions of this Code regarding the taking of bail, commit the accused, by warrant, to custody.

Custody of accused pending trial.

CHAPTER XIX.

OF THE CHARGE.

Form of Charges.

221. (1) Every charge under this Code shall state the offence with which the accused is charged.

Charge to state offence.

(2) If the law which creates the offence gives it any specific name, the offence may be described in the charge by that name only.

Specific name of offence sufficient description.

(3) If the law which creates the offence does not give it any specific name, so much of the definition of the offence must be stated as to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged.

How stated where offence has no specific name.

(4) The law and section of the law against which the offence is said to have been committed shall be mentioned in the charge.

(5) The fact that the charge is made is equivalent to a statement that every legal condition required by law to constitute the offence charged was fulfilled in the particular case.

What implied in charge.

(6) In the presidency-towns the charge shall be written in English; elsewhere it shall be written either in English or in the language of the Court.

Language of charge.

(7) If the accused has been previously convicted of any offence, and it is intended to prove such previous conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment which the Court is competent to award, the fact, date and place of the previous conviction shall be stated in the charge. If such statement is omitted, the Court may add it at any time before sentence is passed.

Previous conviction when to be set out.

Illustrations.

(a) A is charged with the murder of B. This is equivalent to a statement that A's act fell within the definition of murder given in sections 299 and 300 of the Indian Penal Code; that it did not fall within any of the general exceptions of the same Code; and that it did not fall within any of the five exceptions to section 300, or that, if it did fall within Exception I, one or other of the three provisoes to that exception applied to it.

XLV of 1860.

(b) A is charged, under section 326 of the Indian Penal Code, with voluntarily causing grievous hurt to B by means of an instrument for shooting. This is equivalent to a statement that the case was not provided for by section 335 of the Indian Penal Code, and that the general exceptions did not apply to it.

XLV of 1860.

(c) A is accused of murder, cheating, theft, extortion, adultery or criminal intimidation, or using a false property-mark. The charge may state that A committed murder, or cheating, or theft, or extortion, or adultery, or criminal intimidation, or that he used a false property-mark, without reference to the definitions of those crimes contained in the Indian Penal Code; but the sections under which the offence is punishable must, in each instance, be referred to in the charge.

XLV of 1860.

(d) A is charged, under section 184 of the Indian Penal Code, with intentionally obstructing a sale of property offered for sale by the lawful authority of a public servant. The charge should be in those words.

222. (1) The charge shall contain such particulars as to the time and place of the alleged offence, and the person (if any) against whom, or the thing (if any) in respect of which, it was committed, as are reasonably sufficient to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged.

Particulars as to time, place and person.

(2) When the accused is charged with criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money, it shall not be necessary to specify the particular items misappropriated or the exact dates of misappropriation, but it shall be sufficient to specify the gross sum misappropriated, and the dates between which it was misappropriated. Provided that the time included between the first and last of such dates shall not exceed one year.

223. When the nature of the case is such that the particulars mentioned in sections 221 and 222 do not give the accused sufficient notice of the matter with which he is charged, the charge shall also contain such particulars of the manner in which the alleged offence was committed as will be sufficient for that purpose.

When manner of committing offence must be stated.

Illustrations.

(a) A is accused of the theft of a certain article at a certain time and place. The charge need not set out the manner in which the theft was effected.

(b) A is accused of cheating B at a given time and place. The charge must set out the manner in which A cheated B.

(c) A is accused of giving false evidence at a given time and place. The charge must set out that portion of the evidence given by A which is alleged to be false.

(d) A is accused of obstructing B, a public servant, in the discharge of his public functions at a given time and place. The charge must set out the manner in which A obstructed B in the discharge of his functions.

(e) A is accused of the murder of B at a given time and place. The charge need not state the manner in which A murdered B.

(f) A is accused of disobeying a direction of the law with intent to save B from punishment. The charge must set out the disobedience charged and the law infringed.

224. In every charge words used in describing an offence shall be deemed to have been used in the sense attached to them respectively by the law under which such offence is punishable.

Words in charge taken in sense of law under which offence is punishable.

V. Q.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XIX.—Of the Charge.—Sections 225-232.)

225. No error in stating either the offence or the particulars required to be stated in the charge, and no omission to state the offence or those particulars, shall be regarded at any stage of the case as material, unless the accused was in fact misled by such error or omission, and it has occasioned a failure of justice.

Effect of errors.

Illustrations.

(a) A is charged, under section 242 of the Indian Penal Code, with "having been in possession of counterfeit coin, having known at the time when he became possessed thereof that such coin was counterfeit," the word "fraudulently" being omitted in the charge. Unless it appears that A was in fact misled by this omission, the error shall not be regarded as material.

XLV of 1860.

(b) A is charged with cheating B, and the manner in which he cheated B is not set out in the charge, or is set out incorrectly. A defends himself, calls witnesses, and gives his own account of the transaction. The Court may infer from this that the omission to set out the manner of the cheating is not material.

(c) A is charged with cheating B, and the manner in which he cheated B is not set out in the charge. There were many transactions between A and B, and A had no means of knowing to which of them the charge referred, and offered no defence. The Court may infer from such facts that the omission to set out the manner of the cheating was, in this case, a material error.

(d) A is charged with the murder of Khoda Baksh on the 21st January, 1882. In fact, the murdered person's name was Haidar Baksh, and the date of the murder was the 20th January, 1882. A was never charged with any murder but one, and had heard the inquiry before the Magistrate, which referred exclusively to the case of Haidar Baksh. The Court may infer from these facts that A was not misled, and that the error in the charge was immaterial.

(e) A was charged with murdering Haidar Baksh on the 20th January, 1882, and Khoda Baksh (who tried to arrest him for that murder) on the 21st January, 1882. When charged for the murder of Haidar Baksh, he was tried for the murder of Khoda Baksh. The witnesses present in his defence were witnesses in the case of Haidar Baksh. The Court may infer from this that A was misled and that the error was material.

226. When any person is committed for trial without a charge, or with an imperfect or erroneous charge, the Court, or, in the case of a High Court, the Clerk of the Crown, may frame a charge, or add to or otherwise alter the charge, as the case may be, having regard to the rules contained in this Code as to the form of charges.

Procedure on commitment without charge or with imperfect charge.

Illustrations.

1. A is charged with the murder of C. A charge of abetting the murder of C may be added or substituted.

2. A is charged with forging a valuable security under section 467 of the Indian Penal Code. A charge of fabricating false evidence under section 193 may be added.

XLV of 1860.

3. A is charged with receiving stolen property knowing it to be stolen. During the trial it incidentally appears that he has in his possession instruments for the purpose of counterfeiting coin. A charge under section 235 of the Indian Penal Code cannot be added.

227. (1) Any Court may alter or add to any charge at any time before judgment is pronounced, or, in the case of trials before the Court of Session or High Court, before the verdict of the jury is returned or the opinions of the assessors are expressed.

Court may alter charge.

(2) Every such alteration shall be read and explained to the accused.

228. If the charge framed or alteration made under section 226 or section 227 is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is not likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused in his defence or the prosecutor in the conduct of the case, the Court may, in its discretion, after such charge or alteration has been framed or made, proceed with the trial as if the new or altered charge had been the original charge.

When trial may proceed immediately after alteration.

229. If the new or altered charge is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused or the prosecutor as aforesaid, the Court may either direct a new trial or adjourn the trial for such period as may be necessary.

When new trial may be directed, or trial suspended.

230. If the offence stated in the new or altered charge is one for the prosecution of which previous sanction is necessary, the case shall not be proceeded with until such sanction is obtained, unless sanction has been already obtained for a prosecution on the same facts as those on which the new or altered charge is founded.

Stay of proceedings if prosecution of offence in altered charge require previous sanction.

231. Whenever a charge is altered or added to by the Court after the commencement of the trial, the prosecutor and the accused shall be allowed to recall or re-summon, and examine with reference to such alteration, any witness who may have been examined, and also to call any further witness whom the Court may think to be material.

Recall of witnesses when charge altered.

232. (1) If any Appellate Court, or the High Court in the exercise of its powers of revision or of its powers under Chapter XXVII, is of opinion that any person convicted of an offence was misled in his defence by the absence of a charge or by an error in the charge, it shall direct a new trial to be had upon a charge framed in whatever manner it thinks fit.

Effect of material error.

(2) If the Court is of opinion that the facts of the case are such that no valid charge could be preferred against the accused in respect of the facts proved, it shall quash the conviction.

Illustration.

A is convicted of an offence, under section 196 of the Indian Penal Code, upon a charge which omits to state that he knew the evidence, which he corruptly used or attempted to use as true or genuine, was false or fabricated. If the Court thinks it probable that A had such knowledge, and that he was misled in his defence by the omission from the charge of the statement that he had it, it shall direct a new trial upon an amended charge; but, if it appears probable from the proceedings that A had no such knowledge, it shall quash the conviction.

Joinder of Charges.

Separate charges for distinct offences.

233. For every distinct offence of which any person is accused there shall be a separate charge, and every such charge shall be tried separately, except in the cases mentioned in sections 234, 235, 236 and 239.

Illustration.

A is accused of a theft on one occasion, and of causing grievous hurt on another occasion. A must be separately charged and separately tried for the theft and causing grievous hurt.

Three offences of same kind within year may be charged together.

234. (1) When a person is accused of more offences than one of the same kind committed within the space of twelve months from the first to the last of such offences, he may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, any number of them not exceeding three.

(2) Offences are of the same kind when they are punishable with the same amount of punishment under the same section of the Indian Penal Code or of any special or local law. XLV of 1860.

Trial for more than one offence.

235. (1) If, in one series of acts so connected together as to form the same transaction, more offences than one are committed by the same person, he may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, every such offence.

Offence falling within two definitions.

(2) If the acts alleged constitute an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished, the person accused of them may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, each of such offences.

Acts constituting one offence, but constituting when combined a different offence.

(3) If several acts, of which one or more than one would by itself or themselves constitute an offence, constitute when combined a different offence, the person accused of them may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, the offence constituted by such acts when combined, and for any offence constituted by any one, or more, of such acts.

(4) Nothing contained in this section shall affect the Indian Penal Code, section 71. XLV of 1860.

to sub-section (1)—

(a) A rescues B, a person in lawful custody, and in so doing causes grievous hurt to C, a constable in whose custody B was. A may be charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 225 and 333 of the Indian Penal Code.

(b) A commits house-breaking by day with intent to commit adultery, and commits, in the house so entered, adultery with B's wife. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 454 and 497 of the Indian Penal Code.

(c) A entices B, the wife of C, away from C, with intent to commit adultery with B, and then commits adultery with her. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 498 and 497 of the Indian Penal Code.

(d) A has in his possession several seals, knowing them to be counterfeit and intending to use them for the purpose of committing several forgeries punishable under section 466 of the Indian Penal Code. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, the possession of each seal under section 473 of the Indian Penal Code.

(e) With intent to cause injury to B, A institutes a criminal proceeding against him, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such proceeding; and also falsely accuses B of having committed an offence, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such charge. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, two offences under section 211 of the Indian Penal Code.

(f) A, with intent to cause injury to B, falsely accuses him of having committed an offence, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such charge. On the trial, A gives false evidence against B, intending thereby to cause B to be convicted of a capital offence. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 211 and 194 of the Indian Penal Code.

(g) A, with six others, commits the offences of rioting, grievous hurt and assaulting a public servant endeavouring in the discharge of his duty as such to suppress the riot. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 147, 325 and 152 of the Indian Penal Code.

(h) A threatens B, C and D at the same time with injury to their persons with intent to cause alarm to them. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, each of the three offences under section 506 of the Indian Penal Code.

The separate charges referred to in Illustrations (a) to (h) respectively may be tried at the same time.

to sub-section (2)—

(i) A wrongfully strikes B with a cane. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 352 and 323 of the Indian Penal Code.

(j) Several stolen sacks of corn are made over to A and B, who know they are stolen property, for the purpose of concealing them. A and B thereupon voluntarily assist each other to conceal the sacks at the bottom of a grain-pit. A and B may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 411 and 414 of the Indian Penal Code.

(k) A exposes her child with the knowledge that she is thereby likely to cause its death. The child dies in consequence of such exposure. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 317 and 304 of the Indian Penal Code.

(l) A dishonestly uses a forged document as genuine evidence, in order to convict B, a public servant, of an offence under section 167 of the Indian Penal Code. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 471 (read with 466) and 196 of the same Code.

to sub-section (3)—

(m) A commits robbery on B, and in doing so voluntarily causes hurt to him. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 323, 392 and 394 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

Where it is doubtful what offence has been committed.

236. If a single act or series of acts is of such a nature that it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute, the accused may be charged with having committed all or any of such offences, and any number of such charges may be tried at once; or he may be charged in the alternative with having committed some one of the said offences.

Illustrations.

(a) A is accused of an act which may amount to theft, or receiving stolen property, or criminal breach of trust or cheating. He may be charged with theft, receiving stolen property, criminal breach of trust and cheating, or he may be charged with having committed theft, or receiving stolen property, or criminal breach of trust or cheating.

(b) A states on oath before the Magistrate that he saw B hit C with a club Before the Sessions Court A states on oath that B never hit C. A may be charged in the alternative and convicted of intentionally giving false evidence, although it cannot be proved which of these contradictory statements was false.

When a person is charged with one offence, he can be convicted of another.

237. (1) If, in the case mentioned in section 236, the accused is charged with one offence, and it appears in evidence that he committed a different offence for which he might have been charged under the provisions of that section, he may be convicted of the offence which he is shown to have committed, although he was not charged with it.

(2) When the accused is charged with an offence, he may be convicted of having attempted to commit that offence, although the attempt is not separately charged.

Illustration.

A is charged with theft. It appears that he committed the offence of criminal breach of trust, or that of receiving stolen goods. He may be convicted of criminal breach of trust, or of receiving stolen goods (as the case may be), though he was not charged with such offence.

When offence proved included in offence charged.

238. (1) When a person is charged with an offence consisting of several particulars, a combination of some only of which constitutes a complete minor offence, and such combination is proved, but the remaining particulars are not proved, he may be convicted of the minor offence, though he was not charged with it.

(2) When a person is charged with an offence and facts are proved which reduce it to a minor offence, he may be convicted of the minor offence, although he is not charged with it.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise a conviction of any offence referred to in section 198 or section 199 when no complaint has been made as required by that section.

Illustrations.

(a) A is charged, under section 407 of the Indian Penal Code, with criminal breach of trust in respect of property entrusted to him as a carrier. It appears that he did commit criminal breach of trust under section 406 in respect of the property but that it was not entrusted to him as a carrier. He may be convicted of criminal bereach of trust under section 406. XLV of 1860.

(b) A is charged, under section 325 of the Indian Penal Code, with causing grievous hurt. He proves that he acted on grave and sudden provocation. He may be convicted under section 335 of that Code. XLV of 1860.

What persons may be charged jointly.

239. When more persons than one are accused of the same offence or of different offences committed in the same transaction, or when one person is accused of committing any offence, and another of abetment of, or attempt to commit, such offence, they may be charged and tried together or separately, as the Court thinks fit, and the provisions contained in the former part of this chapter shall apply to all such charges.

Illustrations.

(a) A and B are accused of the same murder. A and B may be charged and tried together for the murder.

(b) A and B are accused of a robbery, in the course of which A commits a murder with which B has nothing to do. A and B may be tried together on a charge, charging both of them with the robbery, and A alone with the murder.

(c) A and B are both charged with a theft, and B is charged with two other thefts committed by him in the course of the same transaction A and B may be both tried together on a charge, charging both with the one theft, and B alone with the two other thefts.

Withdrawal of remaining charges on conviction on one of several charges.

240. When a charge containing more heads than one is framed against the same person, and when a conviction has been had on one or more of them, the complainant, or the officer conducting the prosecution, may, with the consent of the Court, withdraw the remaining charge or charges, or the Court of its own accord may stay the inquiry into, or trial of, such charge or charges. Such withdrawal shall have the effect of an acquittal on such charge or charges, unless the conviction be set aside, in which case the said Court (subject to the order of the Court setting aside the conviction) may proceed with the inquiry into or trial of the charge or charges so withdrawn.

CHAPTER XX.

OF THE TRIAL OF SUMMONS-CASES BY MAGISTRATES.

Procedure in summons-cases.

241. The following procedure shall be observed by Magistrates in the trial of summons-cases.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XX.—Of the Trial of Summons-cases by Magistrates.—Sections 242-250.)

Substance of accusation to be stated.

242. When the accused appears or is brought before the Magistrate, the particulars of the offence of which he is accused shall be stated to him, and he shall be asked if he has any cause to show why he should not be convicted; but it shall not be necessary to frame a formal charge.

Conviction on admission of truth of accusation.

243. If the accused admits that he has committed the offence of which he is accused, his admission shall be recorded as nearly as possible in the words used by him; and, if he shows no sufficient cause why he should not be convicted, the Magistrate shall convict him accordingly.

Procedure when no such admission is made.

244. (1) If the accused does not make such admission, the Magistrate shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any), and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution, and also to hear the accused and take all such evidence as he produces in his defence.

(2) The Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, on the application of the complainant or accused, issue process to compel the attendance of any witness or the production of any document or other thing.

(3) The Magistrate may, before summoning any witness on such application, require that his reasonable expenses, incurred in attending for the purposes of the trial, be deposited in Court.

Acquittal.

245. (1) If the Magistrate upon taking the evidence referred to in section 244 and such further evidence (if any) as he may, of his own motion, cause to be produced, and (if he thinks fit) examining the accused, finds the accused not guilty, he shall record an order of acquittal.

Sentence.

(2) If he finds the accused guilty, he shall pass sentence upon him according to law.

Finding not limited by complaint or summons.

246. A Magistrate may, under section 243 or section 245, convict the accused of any offence triable under this chapter which from the facts admitted or proved he appears to have committed, whatever may be the nature of the complaint or summons.

Non-appearance of complainant.

247. If the summons has been issued on complaint, and upon the day appointed for the appearance of the accused, or any day subsequent thereto to which the hearing may be adjourned, the complainant does not appear, the Magistrate shall, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, acquit the accused, unless for some reason he thinks proper to adjourn the hearing of the case to some other day.

Withdrawal of complaint.

248. If a complainant, at any time before a final order is passed in any case under this chapter, satisfies the Magistrate that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw his complaint, the Magistrate may permit him to withdraw the same, and shall thereupon acquit the accused.

Power to stop proceedings when no complainant.

249. In any case instituted otherwise than upon complaint, a Presidency Magistrate, a Magistrate of the first class, or, with the previous sanction of the District Magistrate, any other Magistrate, may, for reasons to be recorded by him, stop the proceedings at any stage without pronouncing any judgment either of acquittal or conviction, and may thereupon release the accused.

Frivolous Accusations in Summons and Warrant Cases.

Frivolous or vexatious accusations.

250. (1) If, in any case instituted by complaint as defined in this Code, or upon information given to a police-officer or to a Magistrate, a person is accused before a Magistrate of any offence triable by a Magistrate, and the Magistrate by whom the case is heard discharges or acquits the accused and is satisfied that the accusation against him was frivolous or vexatious, the Magistrate may, in his discretion, by his order of discharge or acquittal, direct the person upon whose complaint or information the accusation was made to pay to the accused, or to each of the accused where there are more than one, such compensation, not exceeding fifty rupees, as the Magistrate thinks fit:

Provided that, before making any such direction, the Magistrate shall—

(a) record and consider any objection which the complainant or informant may urge against the making of the direction, and,

(b) if the Magistrate directs any compensation to be paid, state in writing, in his order of discharge or acquittal, his reasons for awarding the compensation.

(2) Compensation of which a Magistrate has ordered payment under sub-section (1) shall be recoverable as if it were a fine:

Provided that, if it cannot be recovered, the imprisonment to be awarded shall be simple, and for such term, not exceeding thirty days, as the Magistrate directs.

(3) A complainant or informant who has been ordered under sub-section (1) by a Magistrate of the second or third class to pay compensation to an accused person may appeal from the order, in so far as the order relates to the payment of the compensation, as if such complainant or informant had been convicted on a trial held by such Magistrate.

XL

V R

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXI.—Of the Trial of Warrant-cases by Magistrates.—Sections 251-259.)

(4) Where an order for payment of compensation to an accused person is made in a case which is subject to appeal under sub-section (3), the compensation shall not be paid to him before the period allowed for the presentation of the appeal has elapsed, or, if an appeal is presented, before the appeal has been decided.

(5) At the time of awarding compensation in any subsequent civil suit relating to the same matter, the Court shall take into account any compensation paid or recovered under this section.

CHAPTER XXI.

OF THE TRIAL OF WARRANT-CASES BY MAGISTRATES.

Procedure in warrant-cases.

251. The following procedure shall be observed by Magistrates in the trial of warrant-cases.

Evidence for prosecution.

252. (1) When the accused appears or is brought before a Magistrate, such Magistrate shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any) and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution.

(2) The Magistrate shall ascertain, from the complainant or otherwise, the names of any persons likely to be acquainted with the facts of the case and to be able to give evidence for the prosecution, and shall summon to give evidence before himself such of them as he thinks necessary.

Discharge of accused.

253. (1) If, upon taking all the evidence referred to in section 252, and making such examination (if any) of the accused as the Magistrate thinks necessary, he finds that no case against the accused has been made out which, if unrebutted, would warrant his conviction, the Magistrate shall discharge him.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a Magistrate from discharging the accused at any previous stage of the case if, for reasons to be recorded by such Magistrate, he considers the charge to be groundless.

Charge to be framed when offence appears proved.

254. If, when such evidence and examination have been taken and made, the Magistrate is of opinion that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed an offence triable under this chapter, which such Magistrate is competent to try, and which, in his opinion, could be adequately punished by him, he shall frame in writing a charge against the accused.

Plea.

255. (1) The charge shall then be read and explained to the accused, and he shall be asked whether he is guilty or has any defence to make.

(2) If the accused pleads guilty, the Magistrate shall record the plea, and may in his discretion convict him thereon.

Defence.

256. (1) If the accused refuses to plead, or does not plead, or claims to be tried, he shall be required to state whether he wishes to cross-examine any, and, if so, which, of the witnesses for the prosecution. If he says he does so wish, the witnesses named by him shall be re-called and after cross-examination and re-examination (if any) they shall be discharged. The accused shall then be called upon to enter upon his defence and to produce his evidence.

(2) If the accused puts in any written statement, the Magistrate shall file it with the record.

Process for compelling production of evidence at instance of accused.

257. (1) If the accused, after he has entered upon his defence, applies to the Magistrate to issue any process for compelling the attendance of any witness for the purpose of examination or cross-examination, or the production of any document or other thing, the Magistrate shall issue such process unless he considers that such application should be refused on the ground that it is made for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice. Such ground shall be recorded by him in writing:

Provided that, when the accused has cross-examined or had the opportunity of cross-examining any witness after the charge is framed, the attendance of such witness shall not be compelled under this section, unless the Magistrate is satisfied that it is necessary for the purposes of justice.

(2) The Magistrate may, before summoning any witness on such application, require that his reasonable expenses incurred in attending for the purposes of the trial be deposited in Court.

Acquittal.

258. (1) If in any case under this chapter in which a charge has been framed the Magistrate finds the accused not guilty, he shall record an order of acquittal.

Conviction.

(2) If in any such case the Magistrate finds the accused guilty, he shall pass sentence upon him according to law.

Absence of complainant.

259. When the proceedings have been instituted upon complaint, and upon any day fixed for the hearing of the case the complainant is absent, and the offence may be lawfully compounded, the Magistrate may, in his discretion, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, at any time before the charge has been framed, discharge the accused.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXII.—Of Summary Trials.—Sections 260-263.)

CHAPTER XXII.

OF SUMMARY TRIALS.

Power to try summarily.

260. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in this Code—

(a) the District Magistrate,

(b) any Magistrate of the first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, and

(c) any Bench of Magistrates invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the first class and specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, may, if he or they think fit, try in a summary way all or any of the following offences:—

(a) offences not punishable with death, transportation or imprisonment for a term exceeding six months;

(b) offences relating to weights and measures under sections 264, 265 and 266 of the Indian Penal Code;

(c) hurt, under section 323 of the same Code;

(d) theft, under section 379, 380 or 381 of the same Code, where the value of the property stolen does not exceed fifty rupees;

(e) dishonest misappropriation of property under section 403 of the same Code, where the value of the property misappropriated does not exceed fifty rupees;

(f) receiving or retaining stolen property, under section 411 of the same Code, where the value of such property does not exceed fifty rupees;

(g) assisting in the concealment or disposal of stolen property, under section 414 of the same Code, where the value of such property does not exceed fifty rupees;

(h) mischief, under section 427 of the same Code;

(i) house-trespass, under section 448 of the same Code;

(j) insult with intent to provoke a breach of the peace, under section 504, and criminal intimidation, under section 506, of the same Code;

(k) abetment of any of the foregoing offences;

(l) an attempt to commit any of the foregoing offences, when such attempt is an offence;

(m) offences under section 20 of the Cattle-trespass Act, 1871: I of 1871.

Provided that no case in which a Magistrate exercises the special powers conferred by section 34 shall be tried in a summary way.

(2) When in the course of a summary trial it appears to the Magistrate or Bench that the case is one which is of a character which renders it undesirable that it should be tried summarily, the Magistrate or Bench shall recall any witnesses who may have been examined and proceed to re-hear the case in manner provided by this Code.

Power to invest Bench of Magistrates invested with less power.

261. The Local Government may confer on any Bench of Magistrates invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the second or third class power to try summarily all or any of the following offences:—

(a) offences against the Indian Penal Code, sections 277, 278, 279, 285, 286, 289, 290, 292, 293, 294, 323, 334, 336, 341, 352, 426 and 447; XLV of 1860.

(b) offences against Municipal Acts, and the conservancy clauses of Police Acts which are punishable only with fine, or with imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month;

(c) abetment of any of the foregoing offences;

(d) an attempt to commit any of the foregoing offences, when such attempt is an offence.

Procedure for summons and warrant cases applicable.

262. (1) In trials under this chapter, the procedure prescribed for summons-cases shall be followed in summons-cases, and the procedure prescribed for warrant-cases shall be followed in warrant-cases, except as hereinafter mentioned.

Limit of imprisonment.

(2) No sentence of imprisonment for a term exceeding three months shall be passed in the case of any conviction under this chapter.

Record in cases where there is no appeal.

263. In cases where no appeal lies, the Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates need not record the evidence of the witnesses or frame a formal charge; but he or they shall enter in such form as the Local Government may direct the following particulars:—

(a) the serial number;

(b) the date of the commission of the offence;

(c) the date of the report or complaint;

(d) the name of the complainant (if any);

(e) the name, parentage and residence of the accused;

(f) the offence complained of and the offence (if any) proved, and in cases coming under clause (d), clause (e), clause (f) or clause (g) of sub-section (1) of section 260 the value of the property in respect of which the offence has been committed;

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXII.—Of Summary Trials.—Sections 264-265. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 266-271.)

(g) the plea of the accused and his examination (if any);

(h) the finding, and, in the case of a conviction, a brief statement of the reasons therefor;

(i) the sentence or other final order; and

(j) the date on which the proceedings terminated.

264. (1) In every case tried summarily by a Magistrate or Bench in which an appeal lies, such Magistrate or Bench shall, before passing sentence, record a judgment embodying the substance of the evidence and also the particulars mentioned in section 263.

Record in appealable cases.

(2) Such judgment shall be the only record in cases coming within this section.

265. (1) Records made under section 263 and judgments recorded under section 264 shall be written by the presiding officer, either in English or in the language of the Court, or, if the Court to which such presiding officer is immediately subordinate so directs, in such officer's mother-tongue.

Language of record and judgment.

(2) The Local Government may authorise any Bench of Magistrates empowered to try offences summarily to prepare the aforesaid record or judgment by means of an officer appointed in his behalf by the Court to which such Bench is immediately subordinate, and the record or judgment so prepared shall be signed by each member of such Bench present taking part in the proceedings.

Bench may be authorised to employ clerk.

(3) If no such authorisation be given, the record prepared by a member of the Bench and signed as aforesaid shall be the proper record.

(4) If the Bench differ in opinion, any dissentient member may write a separate judgment.

CHAPTER XXIII.

OF TRIALS BEFORE HIGH COURTS AND COURTS OF SESSION.

A.—Preliminary.

266. In this chapter, except in sections 276 and 307, and in Chapter XVIII, the expression "High Court" means a High Court of Judicature established or to be established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, and includes the Chief Court of the Punjab, the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon and such other Courts as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, declare to be High Courts for the purposes of this chapter.

"High Court" defined.

24 & 25 Vict., c. 104.

267. All trials under this chapter before a High Court shall be by jury; Trials before High Court to be by jury.

and, notwithstanding anything herein contained, in all criminal cases transferred to a High Court under this Code or under the Letters Patent of any High Court established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, the trial may, if the High Court so directs, be by jury.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 104.

268. All trials before a Court of Session shall be either by jury, or with the aid of assessors.

Trials before Court of Session to be by jury or with assessors.

269. (1) The Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, by order in the official Gazette, direct that the trial of all offences, or of any particular class of offences, before any Court of Session, shall be by jury in any district, and may, with the like sanction, revoke or alter such order.

Local Government may order trials before Court of Session to be by jury.

(2) The Local Government, by like order, may also declare that, in the case of any district in which the trial of any offence is to be by jury, the trial of such offences shall, if the Judge, on application made to him or of his own motion, so directs, be by jurors summoned from a special jury list, and may revoke or alter such order.

(3) When the accused is charged at the same trial with several offences of which some are and some are not triable by jury, he shall be tried by jury for such of those offences as are triable by jury, and by the Court of Session, with the aid of the jurors as assessors, for such of them as are not triable by jury.

270. In every trial before a Court of Session the prosecution shall be conducted by a Public Prosecutor.

Trial before Court of Session to be conducted by Public Prosecutor.

B.—Commencement of Proceedings.

271. (1) When the Court is ready to commence the trial, the accused shall appear or be brought before it, and the charge shall be read out in Court and explained to him, and he shall be asked whether Commencement of trial.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 272-278.)

he is guilty of the offence charged, or claims to be tried.

Plea of guilty.

(2) If the accused pleads guilty, the plea shall be recorded, and he may be convicted thereon.

Refusal to plead or claim to be tried.

272. If the accused refuses to, or does not, plead, or if he claims to be tried, the Court shall proceed to choose jurors or assessors as hereinafter directed and to try the case:

Trial by same jury or assessors of several offenders in succession.

Provided that, subject to the right of objection hereinafter mentioned, the same jury may try, or the same assessors may aid in the trial of, as many accused persons successively as the Court thinks fit.

Entry on sustainable charges.

273. (1) In trials before the High Court, when it appears to the High Court, at any time before the commencement of the trial of the person charged, that any charge or any portion thereof is clearly unsustainable, the Judge may make on the charge an entry to that effect.

Effect of entry.

(2) Such entry shall have the effect of staying proceedings upon the charge or portion of the charge, as the case may be.

C.—Choosing a Jury.

Number of jury.

274. (1) In trials before the High Court the jury shall consist of nine persons.

(2) In trials by jury before the Court of Session the jury shall consist of such uneven number, not being less than three, or more than nine, as the Local Government, by order applicable to any particular district or to any particular class of offences in that district, may direct.

Jury for trial of persons not Europeans or Americans before Court of Session.

275. In a trial by jury before the Court of Session of a person not being an European or an American, a majority of the jury shall, if he so desires, consist of persons who are neither Europeans nor Americans.

Jurors to be chosen by lot.

276. The jurors shall be chosen by lot from the persons summoned to act as such, in such manner as the High Court may from time to time by rule direct:

Provided that—

Existing practice maintained;

first, pending the issue under this section of rules for any Court, the practice now prevailing in such Court in respect to the choosing of jurors shall be followed; persons not summoned when eligible;

secondly, in case of a deficiency of persons summoned, the number of jurors required may, with the leave of the Court, be chosen from such other persons as may be present; trials before special jurors.

thirdly, in the presidency-towns—

(a) if the accused person is charged with having committed an offence punishable with death, or

(b) if in any other case a Judge of the High Court so directs, the jurors shall be chosen from the special jury list hereinafter prescribed; and fourthly, in any district for which the Local Government has declared that the trial of certain offences may be by special jury, the jurors shall, in any case in which the Judge so directs, be chosen from the special jury list prescribed in section 325.

Names of jurors to be called.

277. (1) As each juror is chosen, his name shall be called aloud, and, upon his appearance, the accused shall be asked if he objects to be tried by such juror.

Objection to jurors.

(2) Objection may then be taken to such juror by the accused or by the prosecutor, and the grounds of objection shall be stated:

Objection without grounds stated.

Provided that, in the High Court, objections without grounds stated shall be allowed to the number of eight on behalf of the Crown and eight on behalf of the person or all the persons charged.

Grounds of objection.

278. Any objection taken to a juror on any of the following grounds, if made out to the satisfaction of the Court, shall be allowed-

(a) some presumed or actual partiality in the juror;

(b) some personal ground, such as alienage, deficiency in the qualification required by any law or rule having the force of law for the time being in force, or being under the age of twenty-one or above the age of sixty years;

(c) his having by habit or religious vows relinquished all care of worldly affairs;

(d) his holding any office in or under the Court;

(e) his executing any duties of police or being entrusted with police duties;

(f) his having been convicted of any offence which, in the opinion of the Court, renders him unfit to serve on the jury;

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 279-289.)

(g) his inability to understand the language in which the evidence is given, or when such evidence is interpreted the language in which it is interpreted;

(h) any other circumstance which, in the opinion of the Court, renders him improper as a juror.

Decision of objection.

279. (1) Every objection taken to a juror shall be decided by the Court, and such decision shall be recorded and be final.

Supply of place of juror against whom objection allowed.

(2) If the objection is allowed, the place of such juror shall be supplied by any other juror attending in obedience to a summons and chosen in manner provided by section 276, or if there is no such other juror present, then by any other person present in the Court whose name is on the list of jurors, or whom the Court considers a proper person to serve on the jury:

Provided that no objection to such juror or other person is taken under section 278 and allowed.

Foreman of jury.

280. (1) When the jurors have been chosen, they shall appoint one of their number to be foreman.

(2) The foreman shall preside in the debates of the jury, deliver the verdict of the jury, and ask any information from the Court that is required by the jury or any of the jurors.

(3) If a majority of the jury do not, within such time as the Judge thinks reasonable, agree in the appointment of a foreman, he shall be appointed by the Court.

Swearing of jurors.

281. When the foreman has been appointed, the jurors shall be sworn under the Indian Oaths Act, 1873.

X of 1873.

Procedure when juror ceases to attend, etc.

282. (1) If, in the course of a trial by jury, at any time before the return of the verdict, any juror, from any sufficient cause, is prevented from attending throughout the trial, or if any juror absents himself, and it is not practicable to enforce his attendance, or if it appears that any juror is unable to understand the language in which the evidence is given, or, when such evidence is interpreted, the language in which it is interpreted, a new juror shall be added, or the jury shall be discharged and a new jury chosen.

(2) In each of such cases the trial shall commence anew.

Discharge of jury in case of sickness of prisoner.

283. The Judge may also discharge the jury whenever the prisoner becomes incapable of remaining at the bar.

D.—Choosing Assessors.

Assessors how chosen.

284. When the trial is to be held with the aid of assessors, two or more shall be chosen, as the Judge thinks fit, from the persons summoned to act as such.

Procedure when assessor is unable to attend.

285. (1) If, in the course of a trial with the aid of assessors, at any time before the finding, any assessor is, from any sufficient cause, prevented from attending throughout the trial, or absents himself, and it is not practicable to enforce his attendance, the trial shall proceed with the aid of the other assessor or assessors.

(2) If all the assessors are prevented from attending, or absent themselves, the proceedings shall be stayed, and a new trial shall be held with the aid of fresh assessors.

E.—Trial to Close of Cases for Prosecution and Defence.

Opening case for prosecution.

286. (1) When the jurors or assessors have been chosen, the prosecutor shall open his case by reading from the Indian Penal Code or other law the description of the offence charged, and stating shortly by what evidence he expects to prove the guilt of the accused. XLV of 1860

Examination of witnesses.

(2) The prosecutor shall then examine his witnesses.

Examination of accused before Magistrate to be evidence.

287. The examination of the accused duly recorded by or before the committing Magistrate shall be tendered by the prosecutor and read as evidence.

Evidence given at preliminary inquiry admissible.

288. The evidence of a witness duly taken in the presence of the accused before the committing Magistrate may, in the discretion of the presiding Judge, if such witness is produced and examined, be treated as evidence in the case.

Procedure after examination of witnesses for prosecution.

289. (1) When the examination of the witnesses for the prosecution and the examination (if any) of the accused are concluded, the accused shall be asked whether he means to adduce evidence.

(2) If he says that he does not, the prosecutor may sum up his case; and, if the Court considers that there is no evidence that the accused committed the offence, it may then, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, record a finding, or, in a case tried by a jury, direct the jury to return a verdict, of not guilty.

(3) If the accused, or any one of several accused, says that he means to adduce evidence, and the Court considers that there is no evidence that the accused committed the offence, the Court may then, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, record a finding, or, in a case tried by a jury, direct the jury to return a verdict, of not guilty.

(4) If the accused, or any one of several accused, says that he means to adduce evidence, and the Court considers that there is evidence that he committed the offence, or if, on his saying that he does not mean to adduce evidence, the prosecutor sums up his case and the Court considers that there is evidence that the accused committed the offence, the Court shall call on the accused to enter on his defence.

Defence.

290. The accused or his pleader may then open his case, stating the facts or law on which he intends to rely, and making such comments as he thinks necessary on the evidence for the prosecution. He may then examine his witnesses (if any) and after their cross-examination and re-examination (if any) may sum up his case.

Right of accused as to examination and summoning of witnesses.

291. The accused shall be allowed to examine any witness not previously named by him, if such witness is in attendance; but he shall not, except as provided in sections 211 and 231, be entitled of right to have any witness summoned, other than the witnesses named in the list delivered to the Magistrate by whom he was committed for trial.

Prosecutor's right of reply.

292. If the accused, or any of the accused, adduces any evidence, the prosecutor shall be entitled to reply.

View by jury or assessors.

293. (1) Whenever the Court thinks that the jury or assessors should view the place in which the offence charged is alleged to have been committed, or any other place in which any other transaction material to the trial is alleged to have occurred, the Court shall make an order to that effect, and the jury or assessors shall be conducted in a body, under the care of an officer of the Court, to such place, which shall be shown to them by a person appointed by the Court

(2) Such officer shall not except with the permission of the Court, suffer any other person to speak to, or hold any communication with, any of the jury or assessors, and, unless the Court otherwise directs, they shall, when the view is finished, be immediately conducted back into Court.

When juror or assessor may be examined.

294. If a juror or assessor is personally acquainted with any relevant fact, it is his duty to inform the Judge that such is the case, whereupon he may be sworn, examined, cross-examined and re-examined in the same manner as any other witness.

Jury or assessors to attend at adjourned sitting.

295. If a trial is adjourned, the jury or assessors shall attend at the adjourned sitting, and at every subsequent sitting, until the conclusion of the trial.

Locking up jury.

296. The High Court may, from time to time, make rules as to keeping the jury together during a trial before such Court lasting for more than one day; and, subject to such rules, the presiding Judge may order whether and in what manner the jurors shall be kept together under the charge of an officer of the Court, or whether they shall be allowed to return to their respective homes.

F.—Conclusion of Trial in Cases tried by Jury.

Charge to jury.

297. In cases tried by jury, when the case for the defence and the prosecutor's reply (if any) are concluded, the Court shall proceed to charge the jury, summing up the evidence for the prosecution and defence, and laying down the law by which the jury are to be guided.

Duty of Judge.

298. (1) In such cases it is the duty of the Judge—

(a) to decide all questions of law arising in the course of the trial, and especially all questions as to the relevancy of facts which it is proposed to prove, and the admissibility of evidence or the propriety of questions asked by or on behalf of the parties; and, in his discretion, to prevent the production of inadmissible evidence, whether it is or is not objected to by the parties;

(b) to decide upon the meaning and construction of all documents given in evidence at the trial;

(c) to decide upon all matters of fact which it may be necessary to prove in order to enable evidence of particular matters to be given;

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 299-306.)

(d) to decide whether any question which arises is for himself or for the jury, and upon this point his decision shall bind the jurors.

(2) The Judge may, if he thinks proper, in the course of his summing up, express to the jury his opinion upon any question of fact, or upon any question of mixed law and fact, relevant to the proceeding.

Illustrations.

(a) It is proposed to prove a statement made by a person not being a witness in the case, on the ground that circumstances are proved which render evidence of such statement admissible.

It is for the Judge, and not for the jury, to decide whether the existence of those circumstances has been proved.

(b) It is proposed to give secondary evidence of a document the original of which is alleged to have been lost or destroyed.

It is the duty of the Judge to decide whether the original has been lost or destroyed.

Duty of jury.

299. It is the duty of the jury—

(a) to decide which view of the facts is true and then to return the verdict which under such view ought, according to the direction of the Judge, to be returned;

(b) to determine the meaning of all technical terms (other than terms of law) and words used in an unusual sense which it may be necessary to determine, whether such words occur in documents or not;

(c) to decide all questions which according to law are to be deemed questions of fact;

(d) to decide whether general indefinite expressions do or do not apply to particular cases, unless such expressions refer to legal procedure or unless their meaning is ascertained by law, in either of which cases it is the duty of the Judge to decide their meaning.

Illustrations.

(a) A is tried for the murder of B.

It is the duty of the Judge to explain to the jury the distinction between murder and culpable homicide, and to tell them under what views of the facts A ought to be convicted of murder, or of culpable homicide, or to be acquitted.

It is the duty of the jury to decide which view of the facts is true, and to return a verdict in accordance with the direction of the Judge, whether that direction is right or wrong, and whether they do or do not agree with it.

(b) The question is whether a person entertained a reasonable belief on a particular point,—whether work was done with reasonable skill or due diligence.

Each of these is a question for the jury

Retirement to consider.

300. In cases tried by jury, after the Judge has finished his charge, the jury may retire to consider their verdict.

Except with the leave of the Court, no person other than a juror shall speak to, or hold any communication with, any member of such jury.

Delivery of verdict.

301. When the jury have considered their verdict the foreman shall inform the Judge what is their verdict, or what is the verdict of a majority.

Procedure where jury differ.

302. If the jury are not unanimous, the Judge may require them to retire for further consideration. After such a period as the Judge considers reasonable, the jury may deliver their verdict, although they are not unanimous.

Verdict to be given on each charge.

Judge may question jury.

303. (1) Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, the jury shall return a verdict on all the charges on which the accused is tried, and the Judge may ask them such questions as are necessary to ascertain what their verdict is.

Questions and answers to be recorded.

(2) Such questions and the answers to them shall be recorded.

Amending verdict.

304. When by accident or mistake a wrong verdict is delivered, the jury may, before or immediately after it is recorded, amend the verdict, and it shall stand as ultimately amended.

Verdict in High Court when to prevail.

305. (1) When in a case tried before a High Court the jury are unanimous in their opinion, or when as many as six are of one opinion and the Judge agrees with them, the Judge shall give judgment in accordance with such opinion.

(2) When in any such case the jury are satisfied that they will not be unanimous, but six of them are of one opinion, the foreman shall so inform the Judge.

Discharge of jury in other cases.

(3) If the Judge disagrees with the majority, he shall at once discharge the jury.

(4) If there are not so many as six who agree in opinion, the Judge shall, after the lapse of such time as he thinks reasonable, discharge the jury.

Verdict in Court of Session when to prevail.

306. (1) When in a case tried before the Court of Session the Judge does not think it necessary to express disagreement with the verdict of the jurors or of a majority of the jurors, he shall give judgment accordingly.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 307-311.)

(2) If the accused is acquitted, the Judge shall record judgment of acquittal. If the accused is convicted, the Judge shall pass sentence on him according to law.

Procedure where Sessions Judge disagrees with verdict.

307. (1) If in any such case the Judge disagrees with the verdict of the jurors, or of a majority of the jurors, on all or any of the charges on which the accused has been tried, and is clearly of opinion that it is necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court, he shall submit the case accordingly, recording the grounds of his opinion, and, when the verdict is one of acquittal, stating the offence which he considers to have been committed.

(2) Whenever the Judge submits a case under this section, he shall not record judgment of acquittal or of conviction on any of the charges on which the accused has been tried, but he may either remand the accused to custody or admit him to bail.

(3) In dealing with the case so submitted the High Court may exercise any of the powers which it may exercise on an appeal, and subject thereto it shall, after considering the entire evidence and after giving due weight to the opinions of the Sessions Judge and the jury, acquit or convict the accused of any offence of which the jury could have convicted him upon the charge framed and placed before it; and, if it convicts him, may pass such sentence as might have been passed by the Court of Session.

G.—Re-trial of Accused after Discharge of Jury.

Re-trial of accused after discharge of jury.

308. Whenever the jury is discharged, the accused shall be detained in custody or on bail (as the case may be), and shall be tried by another jury, unless the Judge considers that he should not be re-tried, in which case the Judge shall make an entry to that effect on the charge, and such entry shall operate as an acquittal.

H.—Conclusion of Trial in Cases tried with Assessors.

Delivery of opinions of assessors.

309. (1) When, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, the case for the defence and the prosecutor's reply (if any) are concluded, the Court may sum up the evidence for the prosecution and defence, and shall then require each of the assessors to state his opinion orally, and shall record such opinion.

Judgment.

(2) The Judge shall then give judgment, but in doing so shall not be bound to conform to the opinions of the assessors.

(3) If the accused is convicted, the Judge shall pass sentence on him according to law.

I.—Procedure in Case of Previous Conviction.

Procedure in case of previous conviction.

310. In the case of a trial by jury or with the aid of assessors, where the accused is charged with an offence committed after a previous conviction for any offence, the procedure laid down in sections 271, 286, 305, 306 and 309 shall be modified as follows:—

(a) the part of the charge stating the previous conviction shall not be read out in Court, nor shall the accused be asked whether he has been previously convicted as alleged in the charge unless and until he has either pleaded guilty to, or been convicted of, the subsequent offence:

(b) if he pleads guilty to, or is convicted of, the subsequent offence, he shall then be asked whether he has been previously convicted as alleged in the charge:

(c) if he answers that he has been so previously convicted, the Judge may proceed to pass sentence on him accordingly; but, if he denies that he has been so previously convicted, or refuses to, or does not, answer such question, the jury, or the Court and the assessors (as the case may be), shall then hear evidence concerning such previous conviction, and in such case (where the trial is by jury) it shall not be necessary to swear the jurors again.

When evidence of previous conviction may be given.

311. Notwithstanding anything in the last preceding section, evidence of the previous conviction may be given at the trial for the subsequent offence, if the fact of the previous conviction is relevant under the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. [Act X of 1882, s. 310, last para.] I of 1872.

J.—List of Jurors for High Court, and summoning Jurors for that Court.

Number of special jurors.

312. The names of not more than four hundred persons shall at any one time be entered in the special jurors' list.

Lists of common and special jurors.

313. (1) The Clerk of the Crown shall, before the first day of April in each year, and subject to such rules as the High Court from time to time prescribes, prepare—

(a) a list of all persons liable to serve as common jurors; and

(b) a list of persons liable to serve as special jurors only.

(2) Regard shall be had, in the preparation of the latter list, to the property, character and education of the persons whose names are entered therein.

(3) No person shall be entitled to have his name entered in the special jurors' list merely because he may have been entered in the special jurors' list for a previous year.

(4) The Governor General in Council in the case of the High Court at Fort William in Bengal, and, in the case of other High Courts, the Local Government, may exempt any salaried officer of Government from serving as a juror.

Discretion of officer preparing lists.

(5) The Clerk of the Crown shall, subject to such rules as aforesaid, have full discretion to prepare the said lists as seems to him to be proper, and there shall be no appeal from, or review of, his decision.

Publication of lists, preliminary and revised.

314. (1) Preliminary lists of persons liable to serve as common jurors and as special jurors, respectively, signed by the Clerk of the Crown, shall be published once in the local official Gazette before the fifteenth day of April next after their preparation.

(2) Revised lists of persons liable to serve as common jurors and special jurors, respectively, signed as aforesaid, shall be published once in the local official Gazette before the first day of May next after their preparation.

(3) Copies of the said lists shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the court-house.

Number of jurors to be summoned in presidency-towns.

315. (1) Out of the persons named in the revised lists aforesaid, there shall be summoned for each sessions in each presidency-town at least twenty-seven of those who are liable to serve on special juries, and fifty-four of those who are liable to serve on common juries.

(2) No person shall be so summoned more than once in six months unless the number cannot be made up without him.

Supplementary summons.

(3) If, during the continuance of any sessions, it appears that the number of persons so summoned is not sufficient, such number as may be necessary of other persons liable to serve as aforesaid shall be summoned for such sessions.

Summoning jurors outside the presidency-towns.

316. Whenever a High Court has given notice of its intention to hold sittings at any place outside the presidency-towns for the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction, the Court of Session at such place shall, subject to any direction which may be given by the High Court, summon a sufficient number of jurors from its own list, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for summoning jurors to the Court of Session.

Military jurors.

317. (1) In addition to the persons so summoned as jurors, the said Court of Session shall, if it thinks needful, after communication with the commanding officer, cause to be summoned such number of commissioned and non-commissioned officers in Her Majesty's Army resident within ten miles of its place of sitting as the Court considers to be necessary to make up the juries required for the trial of persons charged with offences before the High Court as aforesaid.

(2) All officers so summoned shall be liable to serve on such juries notwithstanding anything contained in this Code; but no such officer shall be summoned whom his commanding officer desires to have excused on the ground of urgent military duty, or for any other special military reason.

Failure of jurors to attend.

318. Any person summoned under section 315, section 316 or section 317, who, without lawful excuse, fails to attend as required by the summons, or who, having attended, departs without having obtained the permission of the Judge, or fails to attend after an adjournment of the Court after being ordered to attend, shall be deemed guilty of a contempt and be liable, by order of the Judge, to such fine as he thinks fit; and, in default of payment of such fine, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months in the civil jail until the fine is paid:

Provided that the Court may in its discretion remit any fine or imprisonment so imposed.

K.—List of Jurors and Assessors for Court of Session, and summoning Jurors and Assessors for that Court.

Liability to serve as jurors or assessors.

319. All male persons between the ages of twenty-one and sixty shall, except as next hereinafter mentioned, be liable to serve as jurors or assessors at any trial held within the district in which they reside, or, if the Local Government, on consideration of local circumstances, has fixed any smaller area in this behalf, within the area so fixed Exemptions.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 320-325.)

320. The following persons are exempt from liability to serve as jurors or assessors, namely:—

(a) officers in civil employ superior in rank to a District Magistrate;

(b) salaried Judges;

(c) Commissioners and Collectors of Revenue or Customs;

(d) police-officers and persons engaged in the Preventive Service in the Customs Department;

(e) persons engaged in the collection of the revenue whom the Collector thinks fit to exempt on the ground of official duty;

(f) persons actually officiating as priests or ministers of their respective religions;

(g) persons in Her Majesty's Army, except when, by any law in force for the time being, they are specially made liable to serve as jurors or assessors;

(h) surgeons and others who openly and constantly practise the medical profession;

XVIII of 1879. (i) legal practitioners (as defined by the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879) in actual practice;

(j) persons employed in the Post-office and Telegraph Departments;

XIV of 1882. (k) persons exempted from personal appearance in Court under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, sections 640 and 641;

(l) other persons exempted by the Local Government from liability to serve as jurors or assessors.

List of jurors and assessors.

321. (1) The Sessions Judge, and the Collector of the district or such other officer as the Local Government appoints in this behalf, shall prepare and make out in alphabetical order a list of persons liable to serve as jurors or assessors and qualified in the judgment of the Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid to serve as such, and not likely to be successfully objected to under section 278, clauses (b) to (h), both inclusive.

(2) The list shall contain the name, place of abode and quality or business of every such person; and if the person is an European or an American, the list shall mention the race to which he belongs.

Publication of list.

322. Copies of such list shall be stuck up in the office of the Collector or other officer as aforesaid, and in the court-houses of the District Magistrate and of the District Court, and extracts therefrom in some conspicuous place in the town or towns in or near which the persons named in the extract reside.

Objections to list.

323. To every such copy or extract shall be subjoined a notice stating that objections to the list will be heard and determined by the Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid, at the sessions court-house, and at a time to be mentioned in the notice.

Revision of list.

324. (1) For the hearing of such objections the Sessions Judge shall sit with the Collector or other officer as aforesaid, and shall, at the time and place mentioned in the notice, revise the list and hear the objections (if any) of persons interested in the amendment thereof, and shall strike out the name of any person not suitable in their judgment to serve as a juror or as an assessor, or who may establish his right to any exemption from service given by section 320, and insert the name of any person omitted from the list whom they deem qualified for such service.

(2) In the event of a difference of opinion between the Sessions Judge and the Collector or other officer as aforesaid, the name of the proposed juror or assessor shall be omitted from the list.

(3) A copy of the revised list shall be signed by the Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid and sent to the Court of Session.

(4) Any order of the Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid in preparing and revising the list shall be final.

(5) Any exemption not claimed under this section shall be deemed to be waived until the list is next revised.

Annual revision of list.

(6) The list so prepared and revised shall be again revised once in every year. [Act X of 1882, s. 325.]

(7) The list so revised shall be deemed a new list, and shall be subject to all the rules hereinbefore contained as to the list originally prepared.

Preparation of list of special jurors.

325. In the case of any district for which the Local Government has declared that the trial of certain offences shall, if the Judge so direct, be by special jury, the Sessions Judge [Act X of 1882, s. 325A.]

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 326-333.)

and the Collector of such district or other officer as aforesaid shall prepare, in addition to the revised list hereinbefore prescribed, a special list containing the names of such jurors as are borne on the revised list and are, in the opinion of such Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid, by reason of their possessing superior qualifications in respect of property, character or education, fit persons to serve as special jurors: Provided always that the inclusion of the name of any person in such special list shall not involve the removal of his name from the revised list nor relieve him of his liability to serve as an ordinary juror in cases not tried by special jury.

District Magistrate to summon jurors and assessors.

326. (1) The Sessions Judge shall ordinarily, seven days at least before the day which he may from time to time fix for holding the sessions, send a letter to the District Magistrate requesting him to summon as many persons named in the said revised list or the said special list as seem to the Sessions Judge to be needed for trials by jury and trials with the aid of assessors at the said sessions, the number to be summoned not being less than double the number required for any such trial.

(2) The names of the persons to be summoned shall be drawn by lot in open Court, excluding those who have served within six months unless the number cannot be made up without them; and the names so drawn shall be specified in the said letter.

Power to summon another set of jurors or assessors.

327. The Court of Session may direct jurors or assessors to be summoned at other periods than the period specified in section 326, when the number of trials before the Court renders the attendance of one set of jurors or assessors for a whole session oppressive, or whenever for other reasons such direction is found to be necessary.

Form and contents of summons.

328. Every summons to a juror or assessor shall be in writing, and shall require his attendance as a juror or assessor, as the case may be, at a time and place to be therein specified.

When Government or Railway servant may be excused.

329. When any person summoned to serve as a juror or assessor is in the service of Government or of a Railway Company, the Court to serve in which he is so summoned may excuse his attendance if it appears on the representation of the head of the office in which he is employed, that he cannot serve as a juror or assessor, as the case may be, without inconvenience to the public.

Court may excuse attendance of juror or assessor.

330. (1) The Court of Session may, for reasonable cause, excuse any juror or assessor from attendance at any particular session.

Court may relieve special jurors from liability to serve again as jurors for twelve months.

(2) The Court of Session may, if it shall think fit, at the conclusion of any trial by special jury, direct that the jurors who have served on such jury shall not be summoned to serve again as jurors for a period of twelve months. [Act X of 1882, s. 330A.]

List of jurors and assessors attending.

331. (1) At each session the said Court shall cause to be made a list of the names of those who have attended as jurors and assessors at such session.

(2) Such list shall be kept with the list of the jurors and assessors as revised under section 324.

(3) A reference shall be made in the margin of the said revised list to each of the names which are mentioned in the list prepared under this section.

Penalty for non-attendance of juror or assessor.

332. (1) Any person summoned to attend as a juror or as an assessor who, without lawful excuse, fails to attend as required by the summons, or who, having attended, departs without having obtained the permission of the Court, or fails to attend after an adjournment of the Court after being ordered to attend, shall be liable by order of the Court of Session to a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees.

(2) Such fine shall be levied by the District Magistrate by attachment and sale of any moveable property belonging to such juror or assessor within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court making the order.

(3) For good cause shewn, the Court may remit or reduce any fine so imposed.

(4) In default of recovery of the fine by attachment and sale, such juror or assessor may, by order of the Court of Session, be imprisoned in the civil jail for the term of fifteen days, unless such fine is paid before the end of the said term.

L.—Special Provisions for High Courts.

Power of Advocate General to stay prosecution.

333. At any stage of any trial before a High Court under this Code before the return of the verdict, the Advocate General may, if he thinks fit, inform the Court

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session—Sections 334-336. Chapter XXIV.—General Provisions as to Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 333-339.)

on behalf of Her Majesty that he will not further prosecute the defendant upon the charge; and thereupon all proceedings on such charge against the defendant shall be stayed, and he shall be discharged of and from the same. But such discharge shall not amount to an acquittal unless the presiding Judge otherwise directs.

Time of holding sittings.

334. For the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction, every High Court shall hold sittings on such days and at such convenient intervals as the Chief Justice of such Court from time to time appoints.

Place of holding sittings.

335. (1) The High Court shall hold its sittings at the place at which it now holds them, or at such other place (if any) as the Governor General in Council in the case of the High Court at Fort William, or the Local Government in the case of the other High Courts, may direct.

(2) But it may, from time to time, in the case of the High Court at Fort William with the consent of the Governor General in Council, and in all other cases with the consent of the Local Government, hold sittings at such other places within the local limits of its appellate jurisdiction as the High Court appoints.

Notice of sittings.

(3) Such officer as the Chief Justice directs shall give notice beforehand in the local official Gazette of all sittings intended to be held for the exercise of the original criminal jurisdiction of the High Court.

Place of trial of European British subjects.

336. The High Court may direct that all European British subjects and persons liable to be tried by it under section 214 who have been committed for trial by it within certain specified districts or during certain specified periods of the year, shall be tried at the ordinary place of sitting of the Court, or direct that they shall be tried at a particular place named.

CHAPTER XXIV.

GENERAL PROVISIONS AS TO INQUIRIES AND TRIALS.

Tender of pardon to accomplice.

337. (1) In the case of any offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session or High Court, the District Magistrate, a Presidency Magistrate, any Magistrate of the first class inquiring into the offence, or, with the sanction of the District Magistrate, any other Magistrate, may, with the view of obtaining the evidence of any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in, or privy to, the offence under inquiry, tender a pardon to such person on condition of his making a full and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within his knowledge relative to such offence, and to every other person concerned, whether as principal or abettor, in the commission thereof.

(2) Every person accepting a tender under this section shall be examined as a witness in the case.

(3) Such person, if not on bail, shall be detained in custody until the termination of the trial by the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be.

(4) Every Magistrate, other than a Presidency Magistrate, who tenders a pardon under this section, shall record his reasons for so doing; and, when any Magistrate has made such tender and examined the person to whom it has been made, he shall not try the case himself, although the offence which the accused appears to have committed may be triable by such Magistrate.

Power to direct tender of pardon.

338. At any time after commitment, but before judgment is passed, the Court to which the commitment is made may, with the view of obtaining on the trial the evidence of any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in, or privy to, any such offence, tender, or order the committing Magistrate or the District Magistrate to tender, a pardon on the same condition to such person.

Commitment of person to whom pardon has been tendered.

339. (1) Where a pardon has been tendered under section 337 or section 338, and any person who has accepted such tender has, either by wilfully concealing anything essential or by giving false evidence, not complied with the condition on which the tender was made, he may be tried for the offence in respect of which the pardon was so tendered, or for any other offence of which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the same matter.

(2) The statement made by a person who has accepted a tender of pardon may be given in evidence against him when the pardon has been forfeited under this section.

(3) No prosecution for the offence of giving false evidence in respect of such statement shall be entertained without the sanction of the High Court.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.*

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIV.—General Provisions as to Inquiries and Trials—Sections 340-345.)

Right of accused to be defended.

340. Every person accused before any Criminal Court may of right be defended by a pleader.

Procedure where accused does not understand proceedings.

341. If the accused, though not insane, cannot be made to understand the proceedings, the Court may proceed with the inquiry or trial; and, in the case of a Court other than a High Court, if such inquiry results in a commitment, or if such trial results in a conviction, the proceedings shall be forwarded to the High Court with a report of the circumstances of the case, and the High Court shall pass thereon such order as it thinks fit.

Power to examine the accused.

342. (1) For the purpose of enabling the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him, the Court may, at any stage of any inquiry or trial, without previously warning the accused, put such questions to him as the Court considers necessary, and shall, for the purpose aforesaid, question him generally on the case after the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined, and before he is called on for his defence.

(2) The accused shall not render himself liable to punishment by refusing to answer such questions, or by giving false answers to them; but the Court and the jury (if any) may draw such inference from such refusal or answers as it thinks just.

(3) The answers given by the accused may be taken into consideration in such inquiry or trial, and put in evidence for or against him in any other inquiry into, or trial for, any other offence which such answers may tend to show he has committed.

(4) No oath shall be administered to the accused.

No influence to be used to induce disclosures.

343. Except as provided in sections 337 and 338, no influence, by means of any promise or threat or otherwise, shall be used to an accused person to induce him to disclose or withhold any matter within his knowledge.

Power to postpone or adjourn proceedings.

344. (1) If, from the absence of a witness, or any other reasonable cause, it becomes necessary or advisable to postpone the commencement of, or adjourn, any inquiry or trial, the Court may, if it thinks fit, by order in writing, stating the reasons therefor, from time to time, postpone or adjourn the same on such terms as it thinks fit, for such time as it considers reasonable, and may by a warrant remand the accused if in custody:

Remand.

Provided that no Magistrate shall remand an accused person to custody under this section for a term exceeding fifteen days at a time.

(2) Every order made under this section by a Court other than a High Court shall be in writing signed by the presiding Judge or Magistrate.

Reasonable cause for remand.

EXPLANATION.—If sufficient evidence has been obtained to raise a suspicion that the accused may have committed an offence, and it appears likely that further evidence may be obtained by a remand, this is a reasonable cause for a remand.

Compounding offences.

345. (1) The offences punishable under the sections of the Indian Penal Code described in the first two columns of the table next following may be compounded by the persons mentioned in the third column of that table:— XLV of 1860.

Offence.	Sections of Indian Penal Code applicable.	Person by whom offence may be compounded.
Uttering words, etc., with deliberate intent to wound the religious feelings of any person	298	The person whose religious feelings are intended to be wounded.
Causing hurt . .	323, 334	The person to whom the hurt is caused.
Wrongfully restraining or confining any person.	341, 342	The person restrained or confined.
Assault or use of criminal force.	352, 355, 358	The person assaulted or to whom criminal force is used.
Unlawful compulsory labour.	374	The person compelled to labour.
Mischief, when the only loss or damage caused is loss or damage to a private person.	426, 427	The person to whom the loss or damage is caused.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIV.—General Provisions as to Inquiries and Trials—Sections 345-348.)

Offence.	Sections of Indian Penal Code applicable.	Person by whom offence may be compounded.
Criminal trespass	447	The person in possession of the property trespassed upon.
House-trespass	448
Criminal breach of contract of service.	490, 491, 492	The person with whom the offender has contracted.
Adultery	497	The husband of the woman.
Enticing or taking away or detaining with a criminal intent a married woman.	498
Defamation	500	The person defamed.
Printing or engraving matter knowing it to be defamatory.	501
Sale of printed or engraved substance containing defamatory matter, knowing it to contain such matter.	502
Insult intended to provoke a breach of the peace.	504	The person insulted.
Criminal intimidation, except when the offence is punishable with imprisonment for seven years.	506	The person intimidated.

(2) The offences of causing hurt and grievous hurt, punishable under section 324, section 325, section 335, section 337, or section 338 of the Indian Penal Code, may, with the permission of the Court before which any prosecution for such offence is pending, be compounded by the person to whom the hurt has been caused. LV of 1860.

(3) When any offence is compoundable under this section, the abetment of such offence or an attempt to commit such offence (when such attempt is itself an offence) may be compounded in like manner.

(4) When the person who would otherwise be competent to compound an offence under this section is a minor, an idiot or a lunatic, any person competent to contract on his behalf may compound such offence.

(5) When the accused has been committed for trial or when he has been convicted and an appeal is pending, no composition for the offence shall be allowed without the leave of the Court to which he is committed, or, as the case may be, before which the appeal is to be heard.

(6) The composition of an offence under this section shall have the effect of an acquittal of the accused.

(7) No offence shall be compounded except as provided by this section.

Procedure of Provincial Magistrate in cases which he cannot dispose of.

346. (1) If, in the course of an inquiry or a trial before a Magistrate in any district outside the presidency-towns, the evidence appears to him to warrant a presumption that the case is one which should be tried or committed for trial by some other Magistrate in such district, he shall stay proceedings and submit the case, with a brief report explaining its nature, to any Magistrate to whom he is subordinate or to such other Magistrate, having jurisdiction, as the District Magistrate directs.

(2) The Magistrate to whom the case is submitted may, if so empowered, either try the case himself, or refer it to any Magistrate subordinate to him having jurisdiction, or commit the accused for trial.

Procedure when after commencement of inquiry or trial, Magistrate finds case should be committed.

347. (1) If in any inquiry before a Magistrate, or in any trial before a Magistrate before signing judgment, it appears to him at any stage of the proceedings that the case is one which ought to be tried by the Court of Session or High Court, and if he is empowered to commit for trial, he shall stop further proceedings and commit the accused under the provisions hereinbefore contained.

(2) If such Magistrate is not empowered to commit for trial, he shall proceed under section 346.

Trial of persons previously convicted of offences against coinage, stamp-law or property.

348. Whoever, having been convicted of an offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards, is again accused of any offence punishable under either of those chapters with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards, shall be committed to the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be, unless the Magistrate before whom the proceedings are pending is of opinion that he can himself pass an adequate sentence if the accused is convicted: XLV of 1860.

Provided that, if the District Magistrate has been invested with powers under section 30, the case may be transferred to him instead of being committed to the Court of Session.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIV.—General Provisions as to Inquiries and Trials—Sections 349-352. Chapter XXV.—Of the Mode of taking and recording Evidence in Inquiries and Trials—Sections 353-355.)

Procedure when Magistrate cannot pass sentence sufficiently severe.

349. (1) Whenever a Magistrate of the second or third class, having jurisdiction, is of opinion, after hearing the evidence for the prosecution and the accused, that the accused is guilty, and that he ought to receive a punishment different in kind from, or more severe than, that which such Magistrate is empowered to inflict, or that he ought to be required to execute a bond under section 106, he may record the opinion and submit his proceedings, and forward the accused, to the District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate to whom he is subordinate.

(2) The Magistrate to whom the proceedings are submitted may, if he thinks fit, examine the parties and recall and examine any witness who has already given evidence in the case, and may call for and take any further evidence, and shall pass such judgment, sentence or order in the case as he thinks fit, and as is according to law:

Provided that he shall not inflict a punishment more severe than he is empowered to inflict under sections 32 and 33.

Conviction or commitment on evidence partly recorded by one Magistrate and partly by another.

350. (1) Whenever any Magistrate, after having heard and recorded the whole or any part of the evidence in an inquiry or a trial, ceases to exercise jurisdiction therein, and is succeeded by another Magistrate who has and who exercises such jurisdiction, the Magistrate so succeeding may act on the evidence so recorded by his predecessor, or partly recorded by his predecessor and partly recorded by himself; or he may re-summon the witnesses and re-commence the inquiry or trial:

Provided as follows:—

(a) in any trial the accused may, when the second Magistrate commences his proceedings, demand that the witnesses or any of them be re-summoned and re-heard;

(b) the High Court or, in cases tried by Magistrates subordinate to the District Magistrate, the District Magistrate may, whether there be an appeal or not, set aside any conviction passed on evidence not wholly recorded by the Magistrate before whom the conviction was had, if such Court or District Magistrate is of opinion that the accused has been materially prejudiced thereby, and may order a new inquiry or trial.

(2) Nothing in this section applies to cases in which proceedings have been stayed under section 346.

Detention of offenders attending Court.

351. (1) Any person attending a Criminal Court, although not under arrest or upon a summons, may be detained by such Court for the purpose of inquiry into or trial of any offence of which such Court can take cognizance and which, from the evidence, may appear to have been committed, and may be proceeded against as though he had been arrested or summoned.

(2) When the detention takes place in the course of an inquiry under Chapter XVIII, or after a trial has been begun, the proceedings in respect of such person shall be commenced afresh and the witnesses re-heard.

Courts to be open.

352. The place in which any Criminal Court is held for the purpose of inquiring into or trying any offence shall be deemed an open Court, to which the public generally may have access, so far as the same can conveniently contain them:

Provided that the presiding Judge or Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, order at any stage of any inquiry into, or trial of, any particular case that the public generally or any particular person, shall not have access to, or be or remain in, the room or building used by the Court.

CHAPTER XXV.

OF THE MODE OF TAKING AND RECORDING EVIDENCE IN INQUIRIES AND TRIALS.

Evidence to be taken in presence of accused.

353. Except as otherwise expressly provided all evidence taken under Chapters XVIII, XX, XXI, XXII and XXIII shall be taken in the presence of the accused, or, when his personal attendance is dispensed with, in presence of his pleader.

Manner of recording evidence outside presidency-towns.

354. In inquiries and trials (other than summary trials) under this Code by or before a Magistrate (other than a Presidency Magistrate) or Sessions Judge, the evidence of the witnesses shall be recorded in the following manner.

Record in summons-cases and in trials of certain offences by first and second-class Magistrates.

355. (1) In summons-cases tried before a Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate, and in cases of the offences mentioned in sub-section (1) of section 260, clauses (b) to (m), both inclusive, when tried by a Magistrate of the first or second class, and in all proceedings under section 514 (if not in the course of a trial), the Magistrate shall make a memorandum of the substance of the evidence of each witness as the examination of the witness proceeds.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXV.—Of the Mode of taking and recording Evidence in Inquiries and Trials—Sections 356-361.)

(2) Such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Magistrate with his own hand, and shall form part of the record.

(3) If the Magistrate is prevented from making a memorandum as above required, he shall record the reason of his inability to do so, and shall cause such memorandum to be made in writing from his dictation in open Court, and shall sign the same; and such memorandum shall form part of the record.

Record in other cases outside presidency-towns.

356. (1) In all other trials before Courts of Session and Magistrates (other than Presidency Magistrates) and in all inquiries under Chapters XII and XVIII, the evidence of each witness shall be taken down in writing in the language of the Court, by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge, or in his presence and hearing and under his personal direction and superintendence, and shall be signed by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge.

Evidence given in English.

(2) When the evidence of such witness is given in English, the Magistrate or Sessions Judge may take it down in that language with his own hand, and, unless the accused is familiar with English, or the language of the Court is English, an authenticated translation of such evidence in the language of the Court shall form part of the record.

Memorandum when evidence not taken down by the Magistrate or Judge himself.

(3) In cases in which the evidence is not taken down in writing by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge, he shall, as the examination of each witness proceeds, make a memorandum of the substance of what such witness deposes; and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge with his own hand, and shall form part of the record.

(4) If the Magistrate or Sessions Judge is prevented from making a memorandum as above required, he shall record the reason of his inability to make it.

Language of record of evidence.

357. (1) The Local Government may direct that in any district or part of a district, or in proceedings before any Court of Session, or before any Magistrate or class of Magistrates, the evidence of each witness shall, in the cases referred to in section 356, be taken down by the Sessions Judge or Magistrate with his own hand and in his mother-tongue, unless he is prevented by any sufficient reason from taking down the evidence of any witness, in which case he shall record the reason of his inability to do so, and shall cause the evidence to be taken down in writing from his dictation in open Court.

(2) The evidence so taken down shall be signed by the Sessions Judge or Magistrate, and shall form part of the record:

Provided that the Local Government may direct the Sessions Judge or Magistrate to take down the evidence in the English language, or in the language of the Court, although such language is not his mother-tongue.

Option to Magistrate in cases under section 355.

358. In cases of the kind mentioned in section 355, the Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, take down the evidence of any witness in the manner provided in section 356, or, if within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Magistrate the Local Government has made the order referred to in section 357, in the manner provided in the same section.

Mode of recording evidence under section 356 or section 357.

359. (1) Evidence taken under section 356 or section 357 shall not ordinarily be taken down in the form of question and answer, but in the form of a narrative.

(2) The Magistrate or Sessions Judge may, in his discretion, take down, or cause to be taken down, any particular question and answer.

Procedure in regard to such evidence when completed.

360. (1) As the evidence of each witness taken under section 356 or section 357 is completed, it shall be read over to him in the presence of the accused, if in attendance, or of his pleader, if he appears by pleader, and shall, if necessary, be corrected.

(2) If the witness deny the correctness of any part of the evidence when the same is read over to him, the Magistrate or Sessions Judge may, instead of correcting the evidence, make a memorandum thereon of the objection made to it by the witness, and shall add such remarks as he thinks necessary.

(3) If the evidence be taken down in a language different from that in which it has been given, and the witness does not understand the language in which it is taken down, the evidence so taken down shall be interpreted to him in the language in which it was given, or in a language which he understands.

Interpretation of evidence to accused or his pleader.

361. (1) Whenever any evidence is given in a language not understood by the accused, and he is present in person, it shall be interpreted to him in open Court in a language understood by him.

(2) If he appears by pleader and the evidence is given in a language other than the language of the Court, and not understood by the pleader, it shall be interpreted to such pleader in that language.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXV.—Of the Mode of taking and recording Evidence in Inquiries and Trials—Sections 362-365. Chapter XXVI.—Of the Judgment—Section 366.)

(3) When documents are put in for the purpose of formal proof, it shall be in the discretion of the Court to interpret as much thereof as appears necessary.

Record of evidence in Presidency Magistrates' Courts.

362. (1) In every case in which a Presidency Magistrate imposes a fine exceeding two hundred rupees, or imprisonment for a term exceeding six months, he shall either take down the evidence of the witnesses with his own hand, or cause it to be taken down in writing from his dictation in open Court. All evidence so taken down shall be signed by the Magistrate and shall form part of the record.

(2) Evidence so taken down shall ordinarily be recorded in the form of a narrative, but the Magistrate may, in his discretion, take down, or cause to be taken down, any particular question or answer.

(3) Sentences passed under section 35 on the same occasion shall, for the purposes of this section, be considered as one sentence.

Remarks respecting demeanour of witness.

363. When a Sessions Judge or Magistrate has recorded the evidence of a witness he shall also record such remarks (if any) as he thinks material respecting the demeanour of such witness whilst under examination.

Examination of accused how recorded.

364. (1) Whenever the accused is examined by any Magistrate, or by any Court other than a High Court established by Royal Charter or the Chief Court of the Punjab, the whole of such examination, including every question put to him and every answer given by him, shall be recorded in full, in the language in which he is examined, or, if that is not practicable, in the language of the Court or English: and such record shall be shown or read to him, or, if he does not understand the language in which it is written, shall be interpreted to him in a language which he understands, and he shall be at liberty to explain or add to his answers.

(2) When the whole is made conformable to what he declares is the truth, the record shall be signed by the accused and the Magistrate or Judge of such Court, and such Magistrate or Judge shall certify under his own hand that the examination was taken in his presence and hearing, and that the record contains a full and true account of the statement made by the accused.

(3) In cases in which the examination of the accused is not recorded by the Magistrate or Judge himself he shall be bound, unless he is a Presidency Magistrate, as the examination proceeds, to make a memorandum thereof in the language of the Court, or in English, if he is sufficiently acquainted with the latter language; and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Magistrate or Judge with his own hand, and shall be annexed to the record. If the Magistrate or Judge is unable to make a memorandum as above required, he shall record the reason of such inability.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to apply to the examination of an accused person under section 263.

Record of evidence in High Court.

365. Every High Court established by Royal Charter and the Chief Court of the Punjab may, from time to time, by general rule, prescribe the manner in which evidence shall be taken down in cases coming before the Court, and the Judges of such Court shall take down the evidence or the substance thereof in accordance with the rule (if any) so prescribed.

CHAPTER XXVI.

OF THE JUDGMENT.

Mode of delivering judgment.

366. (1) The judgment in every trial in any Criminal Court of original jurisdiction shall be pronounced, or the substance of such judgment shall be explained,—

(a) in open Court either immediately after the termination of the trial or at some subsequent time of which notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders, and

(b) in the language of the Court, or in some other language which the accused or his pleader understands:

Provided that the whole judgment shall be read out by the presiding Judge, if he is requested so to do either by the prosecution or the defence.

(2) The accused shall, if in custody, be brought up, or, if not in custody, shall be required by the Court to attend, to hear judgment delivered, except where his personal attendance during the trial has been dispensed with and the sentence is one of fine only or he is acquitted, in either of which cases it may be delivered in the presence of his pleader.

(3) No judgment delivered by any Criminal Court shall be deemed to be invalid by reason only of the absence of any party or his pleader

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXVI.—Of the Judgment.—Sections 367-373.)

on the day or from the place notified for the delivery thereof, or of any omission to serve, or defect in serving, on the parties or their pleaders, or any of them, the notice of such day and place.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit in any way the extent of the provisions of section 537.

Language of judgment.

Contents of judgment.

367. (1) Every such judgment shall, except as otherwise expressly provided by this Code, be written by the presiding officer of the Court in the language of the Court, or in English; and shall contain the point or points for determination, the decision thereon and the reasons for the decision; and shall be dated and signed by the presiding officer in open Court as the time of pronouncing it.

XLV of 1860. (2) It shall specify the offence (if any) of which, and the section of the Indian Penal Code or other law under which the accused is convicted, and the punishment to which he is sentenced.

Judgment in alternative.

XLV of 1860 (3) When the conviction is under the Indian Penal Code, and it is doubtful under which of two sections, or under which of two parts of the same section, of that Code the offence falls, the Court shall distinctly express the same, and pass judgment in the alternative.

(4) If it be a judgment of acquittal, it shall state the offence of which the accused is acquitted and direct that he be set at liberty.

(5) If the accused is convicted of an offence punishable with death, and the Court sentences him to any punishment other than death, the Court shall in its judgment state the reason why sentence of death was not passed:

Provided that, in trials by jury, the Court need not write a judgment, but the Court of Session shall record the heads of the charge to the jury.

Sentence of death.

368. (1) When any person is sentenced to death, the sentence shall direct that he be hanged by the neck till he is dead.

Sentence of transportation.

(2) No sentence of transportation shall specify the place to which the person sentenced is to be transported.

Court not to alter judgment.

369. No Court, other than a High Court, when it has signed its judgment, shall alter or review the same, except as provided in sections 395 and 484 or to correct a clerical error.

Presidency Magistrate's judgment.

370. Instead of recording a judgment in manner hereinbefore provided, a Presidency Magistrate shall record the following particulars:—

(a) the serial number of the case;
(b) the date of the commission of the offence;
(c) the name of the complainant (if any);
(d) the name of the accused person, and (except in the case of an European British subject) his parentage and residence;
(e) the offence complained of or proved
(f) the plea of the accused and his examination (if any);
(g) the final order;
(h) the date of such order; and
(i) in all cases in which the Magistrate inflicts imprisonment, or fine exceeding two hundred rupees, or both, a brief statement of the reasons for the conviction.

Judgment to be explained and copy given to accused.

371. (1) On the application of the accused a copy of the judgment, or, when he so desires, a translation in his own language, if practicable, or in the language of the Court, shall be given to him without delay. Such copy shall, in any case other than a summons-case, be given free of cost.

(2) In trials by jury in a Court of Session, a copy of the heads of the charge to the jury shall, on the application of the accused, be given to him without delay and free of cost.

Case of person sentenced to death.

(3) When the accused is sentenced to death by a Sessions Judge, such Judge shall further inform him of the period within which, if he wishes to appeal, his appeal should be preferred.

Judgment when to be translated.

372. The original judgment shall be filed with the record of proceedings, and, where the original is recorded in a different language from that of the Court, and the accused so requires, a translation thereof into the language of the Court shall be added to such record.

Court of Session to send copy of finding and sentence to District Magistrate.

373. In cases tried by the Court of Session, the Court shall forward a copy of its finding and sentence (if any) to the District Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the trial was held.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXVII.—Of the Submission of Sentences for Confirmation—Sections 374-380. Chapter XXVIII.—Of Execution—Sections 381-383.)

CHAPTER XXVII.

OF THE SUBMISSION OF SENTENCES FOR CONFIRMATION.

Sentence of death to be submitted by Court of Session.

374. When the Court of Session passes sentence of death, the proceedings shall be submitted to the High Court and the sentence shall not be executed unless it is confirmed by the High Court.

Power to direct further inquiry to be made or additional evidence to be taken.

375. (1) If when such proceedings are submitted the High Court thinks that a further inquiry should be made into, or additional evidence taken upon, any point bearing upon the guilt or innocence of the convicted person, it may make such inquiry or take such evidence itself, or direct it to be made or taken by the Court of Session.

(2) Such inquiry shall not be made nor shall such evidence be taken in the presence of jurors or assessors, and, unless the High Court otherwise directs, the presence of the convicted person may be dispensed with when the same is made or taken.

(3) When the inquiry and the evidence (if any) are not made and taken by the High Court, the result of such inquiry and the evidence shall be certified to such Court.

Power of High Court to confirm sentence or annul conviction.

376. In any case submitted under section 374, whether tried with the aid of assessors or by jury, the High Court—

(a) may confirm the sentence, or pass any other sentence warranted by law, or

(b) may annul the conviction, and convict the accused of any offence of which the Sessions Court might have convicted him, or order a new trial on the same or an amended charge, or

(c) may acquit the accused person :

Provided that no order of confirmation shall be made under this section until the period allowed for preferring an appeal has expired, or, if an appeal is presented within such period, until such appeal is disposed of.

Confirmation or new sentence to be signed by two Judges.

377. In every case so submitted, the confirmation of the sentence, or any new sentence or order passed by the High Court, shall, when such Court consists of two or more Judges, be made, passed and signed by at least two of them.

Procedure in case of difference of opinion.

378. When any such case is heard before a Bench of Judges and such Judges are equally divided in opinion, the case, with their opinions thereon, shall be laid before another Judge, and such Judge, after such hearing as he thinks fit, shall deliver his opinion, and the judgment or order shall follow such opinion.

Procedure in cases submitted to High Court for confirmation.

379. In cases submitted by the Court of Session to the High Court for the confirmation of a sentence of death, the proper officer of the High Court shall, without delay, after the order of confirmation or other order has been made by the High Court, send a copy of the order, under the seal of the High Court and attested with his official signature, to the Court of Session.

Procedure in cases submitted by Magistrate not empowered to act under section 562.

380. Where proceedings are submitted to a Magistrate of the first class or a Subdivisional Magistrate as provided by section 562, such Magistrate may thereupon pass such sentence or make such order as he might have passed or made if the case had originally been heard by him, and if he thinks further inquiry or additional evidence on any point to be necessary, he may make such inquiry or take such evidence himself or direct such inquiry or evidence to be made or taken

CHAPTER XXVIII.

OF EXECUTION.

Execution of order passed under section 376.

381. When a sentence of death passed by a Court of Session is submitted to the High Court for confirmation, such Court of Session shall, on receiving the order of confirmation or other order of the High Court thereon, cause such order to be carried into effect by issuing a warrant or taking such other steps as may be necessary.

Postponement of capital sentence on pregnant woman.

382. If a woman sentenced to death be found to be pregnant, the High Court shall order the execution of the sentence to be postponed, and may, if it thinks fit, commute the sentence to transportation for life.

Execution of sentences of transportation or imprisonment in other cases.

383. Where the accused is sentenced to transportation or imprisonment in cases other than those provided for by section 381, the Court passing the sentence shall forthwith forward a warrant

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXVIII.—Of Execution.—Sections 384-393.)

to the jail in which he is or is to be confined, and, unless the accused is already confined in such jail, shall forward him to such jail, with the warrant.

Direction of warrant for execution.

384. Every warrant for the execution of a sentence of imprisonment shall be directed to the officer in charge of the jail or other place in which the prisoner is, or is to be, confined.

Warrant with whom to be lodged.

385. When the prisoner is to be confined in a jail, the warrant shall be lodged with the jailor.

Warrant for levy of fine.

386. Whenever an offender is sentenced to pay a fine, the Court passing the sentence may, in its discretion, issue a warrant for the levy of the amount by distress and sale of any moveable property belonging to the offender, although the sentence directs that, in default of payment of the fine, the offender shall be imprisoned.

Effect of such warrant.

387. Such warrant may be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Court, and it shall authorise the distress and sale of any such property without such limits, when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such property is found.

Suspension of execution of sentence of imprisonment.

388. (1) When an offender has been sentenced to fine only, and to imprisonment in default of payment of the fine, and the Court issues a warrant under section 386, it may suspend the execution of the sentence of imprisonment and may release the offender on his executing a bond, with or without sureties, as the Court thinks fit, conditioned for his appearance before such Court on the day appointed for the return to such warrant, such day not being more than fifteen days from the time of executing the bond; and in the event of the fine not having been realized the Court may direct the sentence of imprisonment to be carried into execution at once.

(2) In any case in which an order for the payment of money has been made, on non-recovery of which imprisonment may be awarded, and the money is not paid forthwith, the Court may require the person ordered to make such payment to enter into a bond as prescribed in sub-section (1), and in default of his so doing may at once pass sentence of imprisonment as if the money had not been recovered.

Who may issue warrant.

389. Every warrant for the execution of any sentence may be issued either by the Judge or Magistrate who passed the sentence or by his successor in office.

Execution of sentence of whipping only.

390. When the accused is sentenced to whipping only, the sentence shall be executed at such place and time as the Court may direct.

Execution of sentence of whipping, in addition to imprisonment.

391. (1) When the accused is sentenced to whipping in addition to imprisonment in a case which is subject to appeal, the whipping shall not be inflicted until fifteen days from the date of the sentence, or, if an appeal be made within that time, until the sentence is confirmed by the Appellate Court; but the whipping shall be inflicted as soon as practicable after the expiry of the fifteen days, or, in case of an appeal, as soon as practicable after the receipt of the order of the Appellate Court confirming the sentence.

(2) The whipping shall be inflicted in the presence of the officer in charge of the jail, unless the Judge or Magistrate orders it to be inflicted in his own presence.

(3) No accused person shall be sentenced to whipping in addition to imprisonment when the term of imprisonment to which he is sentenced is less than three months.

Mode of inflicting punishment.

392. (1) In the case of a person of or over sixteen years of age, whipping shall be inflicted with a light ratan not less than half an inch in diameter, in such mode, and on such part of the person, as the Local Government directs; and, in the case of a person under sixteen years of age, it shall be inflicted in such mode, and on such part of the person, and with such instrument as the Local Government directs.

Limit of number of stripes.

(2) In no case shall such punishment exceed thirty stripes.

Not to be executed by instalments.

Exemptions.

393. No sentence of whipping shall be executed by instalments: and none of the following persons shall be punishable with whipping (namely):—

(a) females;

(b) males sentenced to death, or to transportation, or to penal servitude, or to imprisonment for more than five years;

(c) males whom the Court considers to be more than forty-five years of age.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXVIII.—Of Execution.—Sections 394-399.)

Whipping not to be inflicted if offender not in fit state of health.

394. (1) The punishment of whipping shall not be inflicted unless a medical officer, if present, certifies, or, if there is not a medical officer present, unless it appears to the Magistrate or officer present, that the offender is in a fit state of health to undergo such punishment.

Stay of execution.

(2) If, during the execution of a sentence of whipping, a medical officer certifies, or it appears to the Magistrate or officer present, that the offender is not in a fit state of health to undergo the remainder of the sentence, the whipping shall be finally stopped.

Procedure if punishment cannot be inflicted under section 394.

395. (1) In any case in which, under section 394, a sentence of whipping is, wholly or partially, prevented from being executed, the offender shall be kept in custody till the Court which passed the sentence can revise it; and the said Court may, at its discretion, either remit such sentence, or sentence the offender in lieu of whipping, or in lieu of so much of the sentence of whipping as was not executed, to imprisonment for any term not exceeding twelve months, which may be in addition to any other punishment to which he may have been sentenced for the same offence.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise any Court to inflict imprisonment for a term exceeding that to which the accused is liable by law, or that which the said Court is competent to inflict.

Execution of sentences on escaped convicts.

396. (1) When sentence is passed under this Code on an escaped convict, such sentence, if of death, fine or whipping, shall, subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained, take effect immediately, and if of imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, shall take effect according to the following rules, that is to say:—

(2) If the new sentence is severer in its kind than the sentence which such convict was undergoing when he escaped, the new sentence shall take effect immediately.

(3) When the new sentence is not severer in its kind than the sentence the convict was undergoing when he escaped, the new sentence shall take effect after he has suffered imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, as the case may be, for a further period equal to that which, at the time of his escape, remained unexpired of his former sentence.

EXPLANATION.—For the purposes of this section—

(a) a sentence of transportation or penal servitude shall be deemed severer than a sentence of imprisonment;

(b) a sentence of imprisonment with solitary confinement shall be deemed severer than a sentence of the same description of imprisonment without solitary confinement; and

(c) a sentence of rigorous imprisonment shall be deemed severer than a sentence of simple imprisonment with or without solitary confinement.

Sentence on offender already sentenced for another offence.

397. When a person already undergoing a sentence of imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation is sentenced to imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, such imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation shall commence at the expiration of the imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation to which he has been previously sentenced:

Provided that if he is undergoing a sentence of imprisonment, and the sentence on such subsequent conviction be one of transportation, the Court may, in its discretion, direct that the latter sentence shall commence immediately, or at the expiration of the imprisonment to which he has been previously sentenced.

Saving as to sections 396 and 397.

398. (1) Nothing in section 396 or section 397 shall be held to excuse any person from any part of the punishment to which he is liable upon his former or subsequent conviction.

(2) When an award of imprisonment in default of payment of a fine is annexed to a substantive sentence of imprisonment, or to a sentence of transportation or penal servitude for an offence punishable with imprisonment, and the person undergoing the sentence is after its execution to undergo a further substantive sentence, or further substantive sentences, of imprisonment, transportation or penal servitude, effect shall not be given to the award of imprisonment in default of payment of the fine, until the person has undergone the further sentence or sentences.

Confinement of youthful offenders in reformatories.

399. (1) When any person under the age of fifteen years is sentenced by any Criminal Court to imprisonment for any offence, the Court may direct that such person, instead of being imprisoned in a criminal jail, shall be confined in any reformatory established by the Local Government as a fit place for confinement, in which there are means of suitable discipline and of training in some branch of useful industry or which is kept by a person [cf. s. 10, Act VIII of 1897.]

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXVIII.—Of Execution.—Section 400. Chapter XXIX.—Of Suspensions, Remissions and Commutations of Sentences.—Sections 401-402. Chapter XXX.—Of previous Acquittals or Convictions.—Section 403.)

willing to obey such rules as the Local Government prescribes with regard to the discipline and training of persons confined therein.

(2) All persons confined under this section shall be subject to the rules so prescribed.

III of 1897. (3) This section shall not apply to any place in which the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897, is for the time being in force.

400. When a sentence has been fully executed, the officer executing it shall return the warrant to the Court from which it issued, with an endorsement under his hand certifying the manner in which the sentence has been executed.

Return of warrant on execution of sentence.

CHAPTER XXIX.

OF SUSPENSIONS, REMISSIONS AND COMMUTATIONS OF SENTENCES.

401. (1) When any person has been sentenced to punishment for an offence, the Governor General in Council, or the Local Government, may at any time, without conditions or upon any conditions which the person sentenced accepts, suspend the execution of his sentence or remit the whole or any part of the punishment to which he has been sentenced.

Power to suspend or remit sentences.

(2) Whenever an application is made to the Governor General in Council or the Local Government for the suspension or remission of a sentence, the Governor General in Council or the Local Government, as the case may be, may require the presiding Judge of the Court before or by which the conviction was had or confirmed to state his opinion as to whether the application should be granted or refused, together with his reasons for such opinion.

(3) If any condition on which a sentence has been suspended or remitted is, in the opinion of the Governor General in Council or of the Local Government, as the case may be, not fulfilled, the Governor General in Council or the Local Government may cancel the suspension or remission, and thereupon the person in whose favour the sentence has been suspended or remitted may, if at large, be arrested by any police-officer without warrant and remanded to undergo the unexpired portion of the sentence.

(4) The condition on which a sentence is suspended or remitted under this section may be one to be fulfilled by the person in whose favour the sentence is suspended or remitted, or one independent of his will.

(5) Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to interfere with the right of Her Majesty to grant pardons, reprieves, respites or remissions of punishment.

(6) The Governor General in Council and the Local Government may by general rules or special orders give directions as to the suspension of sentences, and the conditions on which petitions should be presented and dealt with.

402. The Governor General in Council, or the Local Government, may, without the consent of the person sentenced, commute any one of the following sentences for any other mentioned after it:—

Power to commute punishment.

death, transportation, penal servitude, rigorous imprisonment for a term not exceeding that to which he might have been sentenced, simple imprisonment for a like term, fine.

CHAPTER XXX.

OF PREVIOUS ACQUITTALS OR CONVICTIONS.

403. (1) A person who has once been tried by a Court of competent jurisdiction for an offence and convicted or acquitted of such offence shall, while such conviction or acquittal remains in force, not be liable to be tried again for the same offence, nor on the same facts for any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him might have been made under section 236, or for which he might have been convicted under section 237.

Person once convicted or acquitted not to be tried for same offence.

(2) A person acquitted or convicted of any offence may be afterwards tried for any distinct offence for which a separate charge might have been made against him on the former trial under section 235, sub-section (1).

(3) A person convicted of any offence constituted by any act causing consequences which, together with such act, constituted a different offence from that of which he was convicted, may be afterwards tried for such last-mentioned offence, if the consequences had not happened, or were not known to the Court to have happened, at the time when he was convicted.

(4) A person acquitted or convicted of any offence constituted by any acts may, notwithstanding such acquittal or conviction, be subsequently charged with, and tried for, any other offence constituted by the same acts which he may have committed, if the Court by which he was first tried was not competent to try the offence with which he is subsequently charged.

(5) Nothing in this section shall affect the provisions of section 26 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, or of section 188 of this Code. X of 1897.

EXPLANATION.—The dismissal of a complaint, the stopping of proceedings under section 249, the discharge of the accused or any entry made upon a charge under section 273, is not an acquittal for the purposes of this section.

Illustrations.

(a) A is tried upon a charge of theft as a servant and acquitted. He cannot afterwards, while the acquittal remains in force, be charged with theft as a servant, or, upon the same facts, with theft simply, or with criminal breach of trust.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VII.—Of Appeal, Reference and Revision. Chapter XXXI.—Of Appeals.—Sections 404-413.)

(b) A is tried upon a charge of murder and acquitted. There is no charge of robbery; but it appears from the facts that A committed robbery at the time when the murder was committed; he may afterwards be charged with, and tried for, robbery.

(c) A is tried for causing grievous hurt and convicted. The person injured afterwards dies. A may be tried again for culpable homicide.

(d) A is charged before the Court of Session and convicted of the culpable homicide of B A may not afterwards be tried on the same facts for the murder of B.

(e) A is charged by a Magistrate of the first class with, and convicted by him of, voluntarily causing hurt to B. A may not afterwards be tried for voluntarily causing grievous hurt to B on the same facts, unless the case comes within paragraph 3 of the section.

(f) A is charged by a Magistrate of the second class with, and convicted by him of, theft of property from the person of B. A may be subsequently charged with, and tried for, robbery on the same facts.

(g) A, B and C are charged by a Magistrate of the first class with, and convicted by him of, robbing D. A, B and C may afterwards be charged with, and tried for, dacoity on the same facts.

PART VII.

OF APPEAL, REFERENCE AND REVISION.

CHAPTER XXXI.

OF APPEALS.

Unless otherwise provided, no appeal to lie.

404. No appeal shall lie from any judgment or order of a Criminal Court except as provided for by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force.

Appeal from order rejecting application for restoration of attached property.

405. Any person whose application under section 89 for the delivery of property or the proceeds of the sale thereof has been rejected by any Court may appeal to the Court to which appeals ordinarily lie from the sentences of the former Court.

Appeal from order requiring security for good behaviour.

406. Any person ordered by a Magistrate, other than the District Magistrate or a Presidency Magistrate, to give security for good behaviour under section 118 may appeal to the District Magistrate.

Appeal from sentence of Magistrate of the second or third class.

407. (1) Any person convicted on a trial held by any Magistrate of the second or third class, or any person sentenced under section 349 by a Sub-divisional Magistrate of the second class, may appeal to the District Magistrate.

Transfer of appeals to first class Magistrate.

(2) The District Magistrate may direct that any appeal under this section, or any class of such appeals, shall be heard by any Magistrate of the first class subordinate to him and empowered by the Local Government to hear such appeals, and thereupon such appeal or class of appeals may be presented to such subordinate Magistrate, or, if already presented to the District Magistrate, may be transferred to such subordinate Magistrate. The District Magistrate may withdraw from such Magistrate any appeal or class of appeals so presented or transferred.

Appeal from sentence of Assistant Sessions Judge or Magistrate of the first class.

408. Any person convicted on a trial held by an Assistant Sessions Judge, a District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class, or any person sentenced under section 349 by a Magistrate of the first class, may appeal to the Court of Session:

Provided as follows:—

(a) any European British subject so convicted may, at his option, appeal either to the High Court or the Court of Session.

(b) when in any case an Assistant Sessions Judge or a Magistrate specially empowered under section 30 passes any sentence of imprisonment for a term exceeding four years, or any sentence of transportation, the appeal shall lie to the High Court;

(c) when any person is convicted by a District Magistrate of an offence under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, the appeal shall lie to the High Court. XLV of 186[0]

Appeals to Court of Session how heard.

409. An appeal to the Court of Session or Sessions Judge shall be heard by the Sessions Judge or by an Additional Sessions Judge.

Appeal from sentence of Court of Session.

410. Any person convicted on a trial held by a Sessions Judge, or an Additional Sessions Judge, may appeal to the High Court.

Appeal from sentence of Presidency Magistrate.

411. Any person convicted on a trial held by a Presidency Magistrate may appeal to the High Court if the Magistrate has sentenced him to imprisonment for a term exceeding three months or to fine exceeding two hundred rupees.

No appeal in certain cases when accused pleads guilty.

412. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, where an accused person has pleaded guilty and has been convicted by a Court of Session or any Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class on such plea, there shall be no appeal except as to the extent or legality of the sentence.

No appeal in petty cases.

413. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, there shall be no appeal by a convicted

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VII.—Of Appeal, Reference and Revision. Chapter XXXI.—Of Appeals.—Sections 414-423.)

person in cases in which a Court of Session or the District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class passes a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding one month only, or of fine not exceeding fifty rupees only, or of whipping only.

EXPLANATION.—There is no appeal from a sentence of imprisonment passed by such Court or Magistrate in default of payment of fine when no substantive sentence of imprisonment has also been passed.

No appeal from certain summary convictions.

414. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, there shall be no appeal by a convicted person in any case tried summarily in which a Magistrate empowered to act under section 260 passes a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding three months only, or of fine not exceeding two hundred rupees only, or of whipping only.

Proviso to sections 413 and 414.

415. An appeal may be brought against any sentence referred to in section 413 or section 414 by which any two or more of the punishments therein mentioned are combined, but no sentence which would not otherwise be liable to appeal shall be appealable merely on the ground that the person convicted is ordered to find security to keep the peace.

EXPLANATION.—A sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine is not a sentence by which two or more punishments are combined within the meaning of this section.

Saving of sentences on European British subjects.

416. Nothing in sections 413 and 414 applies to appeals from sentences passed under Chapter XXXIII on European British subjects.

Appeal on behalf of Government in case of acquittal.

417. The Local Government may direct the Public Prosecutor to present an appeal to the High Court from an original or appellate order of acquittal passed by any Court other than a High Court.

Appeal on what matters admissible.

418. An appeal may lie on a matter of fact as well as a matter of law, except where the trial was by jury, in which case the appeal shall lie on a matter of law only.

EXPLANATION.—The alleged severity of a sentence shall for the purposes of this section be deemed to be a matter of law.

Petition of appeal.

419. Every appeal shall be made in the form of a petition in writing presented by the appellant or his pleader, and every such petition shall (unless the Court to which it is presented otherwise directs) be accompanied by a copy of the judgment or order appealed against, and, in cases tried by a jury, a copy of the heads of the charge recorded under section 367.

Procedure when appellant in jail.

420. If the appellant is in jail, he may present his petition of appeal and the copies accompanying the same to the officer in charge of the jail, who shall thereupon forward such petition and copies to the proper Appellate Court.

Summary dismissal of appeal.

421. (1) On receiving the petition and copy under section 419 or section 420, the Appellate Court shall peruse the same, and, if it considers that there is no sufficient ground for interfering, it may dismiss the appeal summarily:

Provided that no appeal presented under section 419 shall be dismissed unless the appellant or his pleader has had a reasonable opportunity of being heard in support of the same.

(2) Before dismissing an appeal under this section, the Court may call for the record of the case, but shall not be bound to do so.

Notice of appeal.

422. If the Appellate Court does not dismiss the appeal summarily, it shall cause notice to be given to the appellant or his pleader, and to such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf, of the time and place at which such appeal will be heard, and shall, on the application of such officer, furnish him with a copy of the grounds of appeal; and, in cases of appeals under section 417, the Appellate Court shall cause a like notice to be given to the accused.

Powers of Appellate Court in disposing of appeal.

423. (1) The Appellate Court shall then send for the record of the case, if such record is not already in Court. After perusing such record, and hearing the appellant or his pleader, if he appears, and the Public Prosecutor, if he appears, and, in case of an appeal under section 417, the accused if he appears, the Court may, if it considers there is no sufficient ground for interfering, dismiss the appeal, or may—

(a) in an appeal from an order of acquittal, reverse such order and direct that further inquiry be made, or that the accused be retried or committed for trial, as the case may be, or find him guilty and pass sentence on him according to law;

(b) in an appeal from a conviction, (1) reverse the finding and sentence, and acquit or discharge the accused, or order him to be retried by a Court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to such Appellate Court or committed for trial, or

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VII.—Of Appeal, Reference and Revision. Chapter XXXI.—Of Appeals.—Sections 424-431. Chapter XXXII.—Of Reference and Revision.—Section 432.)

(2) alter the finding, maintaining the sentence, or, with or without altering the finding, reduce the sentence, or,

(3) with or without such reduction and with or without altering the finding, alter the nature of the sentence but (subject to the provisions of section 106, sub-section (3)) not so as to enhance the same;

(c) in an appeal from any other order, alter or reverse such order;

(d) make any amendment or any consequential or incidental order that may be just or proper.

(2) Nothing herein contained shall authorise the Court to alter or reverse the verdict of a jury, unless it is of opinion that such verdict is erroneous owing to a misdirection by the Judge, or to a misunderstanding on the part of the jury of the law as laid down by him.

Judgments of subordinate Appellate Courts.

424. The rules contained in Chapter XXVI as to the judgment of a Criminal Court of original jurisdiction shall apply, so far as may be practicable, to the judgment of any Appellate Court other than a High Court:

Provided that, unless the Appellate Court otherwise directs, the accused shall not be brought up, or required to attend, to hear judgment delivered.

Order by High Court on appeal to be certified to lower Court.

425. (1) Whenever a case is decided on appeal by the High Court under this chapter, it shall certify its judgment or order to the Court by which the finding, sentence or order appealed against was recorded or passed. If the finding, sentence or order was recorded or passed by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate, the certificate shall be sent through the District Magistrate.

(2) The Court to which the High Court certifies its judgment or order shall thereupon make such orders as are conformable to the judgment or order of the High Court; and, if necessary, the record shall be amended in accordance therewith.

Suspension of sentence pending appeal. Release of appellant on bail.

426. (1) Pending any appeal by a convicted person, the Appellate Court may, for reasons to be recorded by it in writing, order that the execution of the sentence or order appealed against be suspended and, also, if he is in confinement, that he be released on bail or on his own bond.

(2) The power conferred by this section on an Appellate Court may be exercised also by the High Court in the case of any appeal by a convicted person to a Court subordinate thereto.

(3) When the appellant is ultimately sentenced to imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, the time during which he is so released shall be excluded in computing the term for which he is so sentenced.

Arrest of accused in appeal from acquittal.

427. When an appeal is presented under section 417, the High Court may issue a warrant directing that the accused be arrested and brought before it or any subordinate Court, and the Court before which he is brought may commit him to prison pending the disposal of the appeal, or admit him to bail.

Appellate Court may take further evidence or direct it to be taken.

428. (1) In dealing with any appeal under this chapter, the Appellate Court, if it thinks additional evidence to be necessary, shall record its reasons, and may either take such evidence itself, or direct it to be taken by a Magistrate, or, when the Appellate Court is a High Court, by a Court of Session or a Magistrate.

(2) When the additional evidence is taken by the Court of Session or the Magistrate, it or he shall certify such evidence to the Appellate Court, and such Court shall thereupon proceed to dispose of the appeal.

(3) Unless the Appellate Court otherwise directs, the accused or his pleader shall be present when the additional evidence is taken; but such evidence shall not be taken in the presence of jurors or assessors.

(4) The taking of evidence under this section shall be subject to the provisions of Chapter XXV as if it were an inquiry.

Procedure where Judges of Court of Appeal are equally divided.

429. When the Judges composing the Court of Appeal are equally divided in opinion, the case, with their opinions thereon, shall be laid before another Judge of the same Court, and such Judge, after such hearing (if any) as he thinks fit, shall deliver his opinion, and the judgment or order shall follow such opinion.

Finality of orders on appeal.

430. Judgments and orders passed by an Appellate Court upon appeal shall be final, except in the cases provided for in section 417 and Chapter XXXII.

Abatement of appeals.

431. Every appeal under section 417 shall finally abate on the death of the accused, and every other appeal under this chapter (except an appeal from a sentence of fine) shall finally abate on the death of the appellant.

CHAPTER XXXII.

OF REFERENCE AND REVISION.

Reference by Presidency Magistrate to High Court.

432. A Presidency Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, refer for the opinion of the High Court any question of law which

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VII.—Of Appeal, Reference and Revision. Chapter XXXII.—Of Reference and Revision.—Sections 433-439.)

arises in the hearing of any case pending before him, or may give judgment in any such case subject to the decision of the High Court on such reference and, pending such decision, may either commit the accused to jail, or release him on bail to appear for judgment when called upon.

Disposal of case according to decision of High Court.

433. (1) When a question has been so referred, the High Court shall pass such order thereon as it thinks fit, and shall cause a copy of such order to be sent to the Magistrate by whom the reference was made, who shall dispose of the case conformably to the said order.

Direction as to costs.

(2) The High Court may direct by whom the costs of such reference shall be paid.

Power to reserve questions arising in original jurisdiction of High Court.

434. (1) When any person has, in a trial before a Judge of a High Court consisting of more Judges than one and acting in the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction, been convicted of an offence, the Judge, if he thinks fit, may reserve and refer for the decision of a Court consisting of two or more Judges of such Court any question of law which has arisen in the course of the trial of such person, and the determination of which would affect the event of the trial.

Procedure when question reserved.

(2) If the Judge reserves any such question, the person convicted shall, pending the decision thereon, be remanded to jail, or, if the Judge thinks fit, be admitted to bail; and the High Court shall have power to review the case, or such part of it as may be necessary, and finally determine such question, and thereupon to alter the sentence passed by the Court of original jurisdiction, and to pass such judgment or order as the High Court thinks fit.

Power to call for records of inferior Courts.

435. (1) The High Court or any Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, or any Sub-divisional Magistrate empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, may call for and examine the record of any proceeding before any inferior Criminal Court situate within the local limits of its or his jurisdiction for the purpose of satisfying itself or himself as to the correctness, legality or propriety of any finding, sentence or order recorded or passed, and as to the regularity of any proceedings of such inferior Court.

(2) If any Sub-divisional Magistrate acting under sub-section (1) considers that any such finding, sentence or order is illegal or improper, or that any such proceedings are irregular, he shall forward the record, with such remarks thereon as he thinks fit, to the District Magistrate.

(3) Orders made under sections 143 and 144 and proceedings under Chapter XII and section 176 are not proceedings within the meaning of this section.

(4) If an application under this section has been made either to the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, no further application shall be entertained by the other of them.

Power to order commitment.

436. When, on examining the record of any case under section 435 or otherwise, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate considers that such case is triable exclusively by the Court of Session, and that an accused person has been improperly discharged by the inferior Court, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate may cause him to be arrested, and may thereupon, instead of directing a fresh inquiry, order him to be committed for trial upon the matter of which he has been, in the opinion of the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, improperly discharged:

Provided as follows:—

(a) that the accused has had an opportunity of showing cause to such Judge or Magistrate why the commitment should not be made;

(b) that, if such Judge or Magistrate thinks that the evidence shows that some other offence has been committed by the accused, such Judge or Magistrate may direct the inferior Court to inquire into such offence.

Power to order inquiry.

437. On examining any record under section 435 or otherwise, the High Court or the Sessions Judge may direct the District Magistrate by himself or by any of the Magistrates subordinate to him to make, and the District Magistrate may himself make, or direct any subordinate Magistrate to make, further inquiry into any complaint which has been dismissed under section 203 or sub-section (3) of section 204, or into the case of any accused person who has been discharged.

Report to High Court.

438. (1) The Sessions Judge or District Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, on examining under section 435 or otherwise the record of any proceeding, report for the orders of the High Court the result of such examination, and, when such report contains a recommendation that a sentence be reversed or altered, may order that the execution of such sentence be suspended, and, if the accused is in confinement, that he be released on bail or on his own bond.

(2) An Additional Sessions Judge shall have and may exercise all the powers of a Sessions Judge under this Chapter in respect of any case which may be transferred to him by the Sessions Judge.

High Court's powers of revision.

439. (1) In the case of any proceeding the record of which has been called for by itself or

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VII.—Of Appeal, Reference and Revision. Chapter XXXII.—Of Reference and Revision.—Sections 440-442. Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXIII.—Criminal Proceedings against European and Americans.—Sections 443-446.)

which has been reported for orders, or which otherwise comes to its knowledge, the High Court may, in its discretion, exercise any of the powers conferred on a Court of Appeal by sections 195, 423, 426, 427 and 428, or on a Court by section 338, and may enhance the sentence; and, when the Judges composing the Court of Revision are equally divided in opinion, the case shall be disposed of in manner provided by section 429.

(2) No order under this section shall be made to the prejudice of the accused unless he has had an opportunity of being heard either personally or by pleader in his own defence.

(3) Where the sentence dealt with under this section has been passed by a Magistrate acting otherwise than under section 34, the Court shall not inflict a greater punishment for the offence which, in the opinion of such Court, the accused has committed, than might have been inflicted for such offence by a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class.

(4) Nothing in this section applies to an entry made under section 273, or shall be deemed to authorise a High Court to convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction.

(5) Where under this Code an appeal lies and no appeal is brought, no proceedings by way of revision shall be entertained at the instance of the party who could have appealed.

(6) Subject to any express provision in this Code, every order of an inferior Court under this Code shall be open to revision by the High Court.

Optional with Court to hear parties.

440. No party has any right to be heard either personally or by pleader before any Court when exercising its powers of revision:

Provided that the Court may, if it thinks fit, when exercising such powers, hear any party either personally or by pleader, and that nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect section 439, sub-section (2).

Statement by Presidency Magistrate of grounds of his decision to be considered by High Court.

441. When the record of any proceeding of any Presidency Magistrate is called for by the High Court under section 435, the Magistrate may submit with the record a statement setting forth the grounds of his decision or order and any facts which he thinks material to the issue; and the Court shall consider such statement before over-ruling or setting aside the said decision or order.

High Court's order to be certified to lower Court or Magistrate.

442. When a case is revised under this chapter by the High Court, it shall, in manner hereinbefore provided by section 425, certify its decision or order to the Court by which the finding, sentence or order revised was recorded or passed, and the Court or Magistrate to which the decision or order is so certified shall thereupon make such orders as are conformable to the decision so certified; and, if necessary, the record shall be amended in accordance therewith.

PART VIII.

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS AGAINST EUROPEANS AND AMERICANS.

Magistrates who may inquire into and try charges against European British subjects.

443. No Magistrate, unless he is a Justice of the Peace, and (except in the case of a District Magistrate or Presidency Magistrate) unless he is a Magistrate of the first class and an European British subject, shall inquire into or try any charge against an European British subject.

Sessions Judge to be an European British subject.

Assistant Sessions Judge to have held office for three years and to be specially empowered.

444. No Judge presiding in a Court of Session, except the Sessions Judge, shall exercise jurisdiction over an European British subject unless he himself is an European British subject; and if he is an Assistant Sessions Judge, unless he has held the office of Assistant Sessions Judge for at least three years, and has been specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government.

Cognizance of offence committed by European British subject.

445. Nothing in section 443 or section 444 shall prevent any Magistrate from taking cognizance of an offence committed by any European British subject in any case in which he could take cognizance of a like offence if committed by another person:

Provided that, if he issues any process for the purpose of compelling the appearance of an European British subject accused of an offence, such process shall be made returnable before a Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into or try the case.

Sentences which may be passed by provincial Magistrates.

446. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 32 or section 34, no Magistrate other than a District Magistrate or Presidency Magistrate shall pass any sentence on an European British subject other than imprisonment for a term which may extend to three months, or fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or both, and a District Magistrate shall not pass any such sentence other than imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or fine which may extend to two thousand rupees, or both.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXIII.—Criminal Proceedings against Europeans and Americans.—Sections 447-451.)

When commitment is to be to Court of Session and when to High Court.

447. (1) When an European British subject is accused of an offence before a Magistrate, and such offence cannot, in the opinion of such Magistrate, be adequately punished by him, and is not punishable with death or with transportation for life, such Magistrate shall, if he thinks that the accused ought to be committed, commit him to the Court of Session, or, in the case of a Presidency Magistrate, to the High Court.

(2) When the offence which appears to have been committed is punishable with death or with transportation for life, the commitment shall be to the High Court.

Trial of offences of which one is, and the others are not, punishable with death or transportation for life

448. Where any person committed to the High Court under section 447 is charged with several offences of which one is punishable with death or transportation for life and the others with a less punishment, and the High Court considers that he should not be tried for the offence punishable with death or transportation, the High Court may nevertheless try him for the other offences.

Sentences which may be passed by Court of Session.

449. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 31, no Court of Session shall pass on any European British subject any sentence other than a sentence of imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or fine, or both.

Procedure when Sessions Judge finds his powers inadequate.

(2) If, at any time after the commitment and before signing judgment the presiding Judge thinks that the offence which appears to be proved cannot be adequately punished by such a sentence, he shall record his opinion to that effect and transfer the case to the High Court. Such Judge may either himself bind over, or direct the committing Magistrate to bind over, the complainant and witnesses to appear before the High Court.

[Act X of 1882, s. 451.]

Jury or assessors before High Court or Court of Session.

450. (1) In trials of European British subjects before a High Court or Court of Session, if, before the first juror is called and accepted, or the first assessor is appointed, as the case may be, any such subject requires to be tried by a mixed jury, the trial shall be by a jury of which not less than half the number shall be Europeans or Americans or both Europeans and Americans.

(2) When any such trial before a Court of Session would in the ordinary course be with the aid of assessors, the European British subject accused, or, where there are several European British subjects accused, all of them jointly, may, instead of claiming to be tried by a mixed jury under sub-section (1), require that not less than half the number of the assessors shall be Europeans or Americans or both Europeans and Americans.

Right of European British subject to claim jury before District Magistrate.

451. (1) In trials of European British subjects before a District Magistrate for any offence, any such subject may, in a summons-case before he is heard in his defence under section 244, or in a warrant-case before he enters on his defence under section 256, claim that the trial shall be by a jury composed in manner prescribed by section 450. [Act X of 1882, s. 451A.]

(2) If a claim is made under sub-section (1) in a summons-case at the time when the Magistrate proceeds under section 244 to hear the accused, or in a warrant-case at the time when the Magistrate calls upon the accused under section 256 to enter upon the defence, the Magistrate shall forthwith issue the necessary orders for the trial by a jury as aforesaid.

(3) If such a claim is made at an earlier stage of the proceedings, the Magistrate shall issue such orders whenever it appears to him from the evidence recorded that there will be a sufficient case to go before a jury.

(4) In every such case the Magistrate shall notwithstanding anything contained in section 242, before issuing any orders as aforesaid, frame a formal charge.

(5) The provisions of sections 211, 216, 217, 219 and 220 shall, so far as may be, apply for the purpose of securing the attendance of the complainant, the accused and the witnesses at every trial to be held under this section.

(6) The provisions of this Code relating to the procedure in a trial by jury before a Court of Session shall, as nearly as may be, apply to every trial under this section as if the District Magistrate were a Sessions Judge and the accused had been committed to his Court for trial.

(7) All Courts may construe any of the provisions referred to in sub-section (5) or sub-section (6), in so far as they are made applicable by those sub-sections, with such verbal alterations not affecting the substance as may be necessary or proper to adapt the same to the matter before them.

(8) Nothing in this section shall affect the power of the Magistrate to commit an accused person for trial under section 347 or section 447.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXIII.—Criminal Proceedings against Europeans and Americans.—Sections 452-457.)

[Act X of 1882, s. 451B.]

(9) If an accused person claims to be tried by jury under this section and in the opinion of the District Magistrate there is reason to believe that a jury composed in manner prescribed by section 450 cannot be constituted for the trial before himself, or cannot be so constituted without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which under the circumstances of the case would be unreasonable, he may, instead of issuing orders for the trial before himself under this section, transfer the case for trial to such other District Magistrate or to such Sessions Judge as the High Court may, from time to time, by rules made by it in this behalf and approved by the Local Government, or by special order, direct.

Transfer to another Court in certain cases.

(10) When a case is transferred under this section to a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, he shall with all convenient speed try it with the same powers (including the power of commitment) and according to the same procedure as if he were a District Magistrate acting under this section.

452. In any case in which an European British subject is accused jointly with a person not being an European British subject, and such European British subject is committed for trial before a High Court or Court of Session, such subject and person may be tried together, and the procedure on the trial shall be the same as it would have been had the European British subject been tried separately :

Trial of European British subject and Native jointly accused.

Provided that, if the European British subject requires under section 450 to be tried by a mixed jury, or by a mixed set of assessors, and the person not being an European British subject requires that he shall be tried separately, the latter person shall be tried separately in accordance with the provisions of Chapter XXIII.

When Native may claim separate trial.

453. (1) When any person claims to be dealt with as an European British subject, he shall state the grounds of such claim to the Magistrate before whom he is brought for the purposes of the inquiry or trial; and such Magistrate shall inquire into the truth of such statement, and allow the person making it a reasonable time within which to prove that it is true, and shall then decide whether he is or is not an European British subject, and shall deal with him accordingly. If any such person is convicted by such Magistrate and appeals from such conviction, the burden of proving that the Magistrate's said decision was wrong shall lie upon him.

Procedure on claim of person to be dealt with as European British subject.

(2) When any such person is committed by the Magistrate for trial before the Court of Session, and such person before such Court claims to be dealt with as an European British subject, such Court shall, after such further enquiry, if any, as it thinks fit, decide whether he is or is not an European British subject, and shall deal with him accordingly. If he is convicted by such Court and appeals from such conviction, the burden of proving that the Court's said decision was wrong shall lie upon him.

(3) When the Court before which any person is tried decides that he is not an European British subject, such decision shall form a ground of appeal from the sentence or order passed in such trial.

454. (1) If an European British subject does not claim to be dealt with as such by the Magistrate before whom he is tried or by whom he is committed, or if, when such claim has been made before, and disallowed by, the committing Magistrate, it is not again made before the Court to which such subject is committed, he shall be held to have relinquished his right to be dealt with as such European British subject and shall not assert it in any subsequent stage of the same case.

Failure to plead status a waiver.

(2) Unless the Magistrate has reason to believe that any person brought before him is not an European British subject, the Magistrate shall ask such person whether he is such a subject or not.

455. Where a person who is not an European British subject is dealt with as such under this chapter, and does not object, the inquiry, commitment, trial or sentence (as the case may be) shall not, by reason of such dealing, be invalid.

Trial under this chapter of person not an European British subject.

456. When any European British subject is unlawfully detained in custody by any person, such European British subject or any person on his behalf may apply to the High Court which would have jurisdiction over such European British subject in respect of any offence committed by him at the place where he is detained or to which he would be entitled to appeal from any conviction for any such offence, for an order directing the person detaining him to bring him before the High Court to abide such further order as it may pass.

Right of European British subject unlawfully detained to apply for order to be brought before High Court.

457. The High Court, if it thinks fit, may, before issuing such order, inquire, on affidavit or otherwise, into the grounds on which it is applied for, and grant or refuse such application ; or Procedure on such application.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXIII.—Criminal Proceedings against Europeans and Americans.—Sections 458-463. Chapter XXXIV.—Lunatics.—Section 464.)

it may issue the order in the first instance, and, when the person applying for it is brought before it, it may make such further order in the case as it thinks fit, after such inquiry (if any) as it thinks necessary.

Territories through-out which High Court may issue such orders.

458. The High Court may issue such orders throughout the territories within the local limits of its appellate criminal jurisdiction, and such other territories as the Governor General in Council may direct.

Application of Acts conferring jurisdiction on Magistrates or Courts of Session.

459. (1) Unless there is something repugnant in the context, all enactments heretofore or hereafter made by the Governor General in Council, which confer on Magistrates or on the Court of Session jurisdiction over offences, shall be deemed to apply to European British subjects, although such persons be not expressly referred to therein.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise any Court to exceed the limits prescribed by this chapter as to the amount of punishment which it may inflict on an European British subject, or to confer jurisdiction on any Magistrate or any Judge presiding in a Court of Session, not being a Justice of the Peace.

Jury for trial of Europeans or Americans.

460. In every case triable by jury or with the aid of assessors, in which an European (not being an European British subject) or an American is the accused person, or one of the accused persons, not less than half the number of jurors or assessors shall, if practicable and if such European or American so claims, be Europeans or Americans.

Jury when European or American charged jointly with one of another race.

461. Whenever an European or American is charged before the Court of Session jointly with a person not an European or American and in compliance with a claim made under section 460 is tried by a jury, or with the aid of a set of assessors, of which at least one-half consists of Europeans and Americans, the latter person shall, if he so claims, be tried separately.

Summoning and empanelling jurors under section 450, 451 or 460.

462. (1) When a trial is to be held before the Court of Session in which the accused person, or one of the accused persons, is entitled to be tried by a jury constituted under the provisions of section 450 or section 460, or before the Court of a District Magistrate or Sessions Judge proceeding under section 451, the Court shall, three days at least before the day fixed for holding such trial, cause to be summoned, in the manner hereinbefore prescribed, as many European and American jurors as are required for the trial.

(2) The Court shall also, at the same time, in like manner, cause to be summoned the same number of other persons named in the revised list, unless such number of such other persons has been already summoned for trials by jury at that session.

(3) From the whole number of persons returned the jurors who are to constitute the jury shall be chosen by lot in the manner prescribed in section 276, until a jury containing the proper number of Europeans or Americans, or a number approaching thereto as nearly as practicable, has been obtained:

Provided that, in any case in which the proper number of Europeans and Americans cannot otherwise be obtained, the Court may, in its discretion, for the purpose of constituting the jury, summon any person excluded from the list on the ground of his being exempted under section 320.

Conduct of criminal proceedings against European British subjects, etc.

463. Criminal proceedings against European British subjects, Europeans not being European British subjects, and Americans, before the Court of Session and High Court, shall, except as otherwise expressly provided, be conducted according to the provisions of this Code.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

LUNATICS.

Procedure in case of accused being lunatic.

464. (1) When a Magistrate holding an inquiry or a trial has reason to believe that the accused is of unsound mind and consequently incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate shall inquire into the fact of such unsoundness, and shall cause such person to be examined by the Civil Surgeon of the district or such other medical officer as the Local Government directs, and thereupon shall examine such Surgeon or other officer as a witness, and shall reduce the examination to writing.

(2) If such Magistrate is of opinion that the accused is of unsound mind and consequently incapable of making his defence, he shall postpone further proceedings in the case.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXIV.—Lunatics.—Sections 465-471.)

Procedure in case of person committed before Court of Session or High Court being lunatic.

465. (1) If any person committed for trial before a Court of Session or a High Court appears to the Court at his trial to be of unsound mind and consequently incapable of making his defence, the jury, or the Court with the aid of assessors, shall, in the first instance, try the fact of such unsoundness and incapacity, and, if satisfied of the fact, shall pass judgment accordingly, and thereupon the trial shall be postponed.

(2) The trial of the fact of the unsoundness of mind and incapacity of the accused shall be deemed to be part of his trial before the Court.

Release of lunatic pending investigation or trial.

466. (1) Whenever an accused person is found to be of unsound mind and incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, if the case is one in which bail may be taken, may release him on sufficient security being given that he shall be properly taken care of and shall be prevented from doing injury to himself or to any other person, and for his appearance when required before the Magistrate or Court or such officer as the Magistrate or Court appoints in this behalf.

Custody of lunatic.

(2) If the case is one in which bail may not be taken or if sufficient security is not given, the Magistrate or Court shall report the case to the Local Government, remanding the accused to custody pending orders, and the Local Government may order the accused to be confined in a lunatic asylum, jail or other suitable place of safe custody, and the Magistrate or Court shall give effect to such order.

Resumption of inquiry or trial.

467. (1) Whenever an inquiry or a trial is postponed under section 464 or section 465, the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, may at any time resume the inquiry or trial, and require the accused to appear or be brought before such Magistrate or Court.

(2) When the accused has been released under section 466, and the sureties for his appearance produce him to the officer whom the Magistrate or Court appoints in this behalf, the certificate of such officer that the accused is capable of making his defence shall be receivable in evidence.

Procedure on accused appearing before Magistrate or Court.

468. (1) If, when the accused appears or is again brought before the Magistrate or the Court, as the case may be, the Magistrate or Court considers him capable of making his defence, the inquiry or trial shall proceed.

(2) If the Magistrate or Court considers the accused person to be still incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate or Court shall again act according to the provisions of section 464 or section 465, as the case may be.

When accused appears to have been insane.

469. When the accused appears to be of sound mind at the time of inquiry or trial, and the Magistrate is satisfied from the evidence given before him that there is reason to believe that the accused committed an act which, if he had been of sound mind, would have been an offence, and that he was at the time when the act was committed, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that it was wrong or contrary to law, the Magistrate shall proceed with the case, and, if the accused ought to be committed to the Court of Session or High Court, send him for trial before the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be.

Judgment of acquittal on ground of lunacy.

470. Whenever any person is acquitted upon the ground that, at the time at which he is alleged to have committed an offence, he was, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing the nature of the act alleged as constituting the offence, or that it was wrong or contrary to law, the finding shall state specifically whether he committed the act or not.

Person acquitted on such ground to be kept in safe custody.

471. (1) Whenever such judgment states that the accused person committed the act alleged, the Magistrate or Court before whom or which the trial has been held shall, if such act would, but for the incapacity found, have constituted an offence, order such person to be kept in safe custody in such place and manner as the Magistrate or Court thinks fit, and shall report the case for the orders of the Local Government.

(2) The Local Government may order such person to be confined in a lunatic asylum, jail or other suitable place of safe custody.

Power of Governor General in Council, to order criminal lunatics confined by order of Local Government to be removed from one province to another.

[Act X of 1882, s. 475A.]

(3) The Governor General in Council may by general or special order direct that any person whom the Local Government has ordered under this chapter to be confined in a lunatic asylum, jail or other place of safe custody shall be removed from the place where he is confined to any lunatic asylum, jail or other place of safe custody in British India.

Power of Local Government to relieve Inspector General of certain functions.

[Act X of 1882, s. 475B.]

(4) The Local Government may empower the officer in charge of the jail in which a person is confined under the provisions of section 466 or this section to discharge all or any of the functions of the Inspector General of Prisons under section 472, section 473 or section 474.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXIV.—Lunatics.—Sections 472-475.) Chapter XXXV.—Proceedings in case of certain Offences affecting the Administration of Justice.—Sections 476-478.)

472. When any person is confined under the provisions of section 466 or section 471, the Inspector General of Prisons, if such person is confined in a jail, or the visitors of the lunatic asylum, or any two of them, if he is confined in a lunatic asylum, may visit him in order to ascertain his state of mind; and he shall be visited once at least in every six months by such Inspector General or by two of such visitors as aforesaid; and such Inspector General or visitors shall make a special report to the Local Government as to the state of mind of such person.

Lunatic prisoners to be visited by Inspector General.

473. If such person is confined under the provisions of section 466, and such Inspector General or visitors shall certify that, in his or their opinion, such person is capable of making his defence, he shall be taken before the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, at such time as the Magistrate or Court appoints, and the Magistrate or Court shall deal with such person under the provisions of section 468; and the certificate of such Inspector General or visitors as aforesaid shall be receivable as evidence.

Procedure where lunatic prisoner is reported capable of making his defence.

474. (1) If such person is confined under the provisions of section 466 or section 471, and such Inspector General or visitors shall certify that, in his or their judgment, he may be discharged without danger of his doing injury to himself or to any other person, the Local Government may thereupon order him to be discharged, or to be detained in custody, or to be transferred to a public lunatic asylum if he has not been already sent to such an asylum; and, in case it orders him to be transferred to an asylum, may appoint a Commission, consisting of a judicial and two medical officers.

Procedure where lunatic confined under section 466 or 471 is declared fit to be discharged.

(2) Such Commission shall make formal inquiry into the state of mind of such person, taking such evidence as is necessary, and shall report to the Local Government, which may order his discharge or detention as it thinks fit.

475. (1) Whenever any relative or friend of any person confined under the provisions of section 466 or section 471 desires that he shall be delivered over to his care and custody, the Local Government, upon the application of such relative or friend, and on his giving security to the satisfaction of such Government that the person delivered shall be properly taken care of and shall be prevented from doing injury to himself or to any other person, may order such person to be delivered to such relative or friend.

Delivery of lunatic to care of relative.

(2) Whenever such person is so delivered, it shall be upon condition that he shall be produced for the inspection of such officer and at such times as the Local Government directs.

(3) The provisions of sections 472 and 474 shall, mutatis mutandis, apply to persons delivered under the provisions of this section; and the certificate of the inspecting officer appointed under this section shall be receivable as evidence.

CHAPTER XXXV.

PROCEEDINGS IN CASE OF CERTAIN OFFENCES AFFECTING THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.

476. (1) When any Civil, Criminal or Revenue Court is of opinion that there is ground for inquiring into any offence referred to in section 195, and committed before it or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding, such Court, after making any preliminary inquiry that may be necessary, may send the case for inquiry or trial to the nearest Magistrate of the first class, and may send the accused in custody, or take sufficient security for his appearance, before such Magistrate; and may bind over any person to appear and give evidence on such inquiry or trial.

Procedure in cases mentioned in section 195.

(2) Such Magistrate shall thereupon proceed according to law, and as if upon complaint made and recorded under section 200, and may, if he is authorised under section 192 to transfer cases, transfer the inquiry or trial to some other competent Magistrate.

477. (1) Subject to the provisions of section 444, a Court of Session may charge a person for any offence referred to in section 195 and committed before it, or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding, and may commit, or admit to bail and try, such person upon its own charge.

Power of Court of Session as to such offences committed before itself.

(2) Such Court may direct the Magistrate to cause the attendance of any witnesses for the purposes of the trial.

478. (1) When any such offence is committed before any Civil or Revenue Court, or brought under the notice of any Civil or Revenue Court in the course of a judicial proceeding, and the case is triable exclusively by the High Court or Court of Session, or such Civil or Revenue Court thinks that it ought to be tried by the High Court or Court of Session, such Civil or Revenue Court may, instead of sending the case under section 476 to a Magistrate for inquiry, itself complete the inquiry, and commit or hold to bail the accused person to take his trial before the High Court or Court of Session, as the case may be.

Power of Civil and Revenue Courts to complete inquiry and commit to High Court or Court of Session.

(2) For the purposes of an inquiry under this section the Civil or Revenue Court may, subject to the provisions of section 443, exercise all the powers of a Magistrate; and its proceedings in such inquiry shall be conducted as nearly as may be in accordance with the provisions of Chapter XVIII, and shall be deemed to have been held by a Magistrate.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXV.—Proceedings in case of certain Offences affecting the Administration of Justice.—Sections 479-486.)

Procedure of Civil or Revenue Court in such cases.

479. When any such commitment is made by a Civil or Revenue Court, the Court shall send the charge with the order of commitment and the record of the case to the Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or other Magistrate authorised to commit for trial, and such Magistrate shall bring the case before the High Court or Court of Session, as the case may be, together with the witnesses for the prosecution and defence.

Procedure in certain cases of contempt.

480. (1) When any such offence as is described in section 175, section 178, section 179, section 180 or section 228 of the Indian Penal Code is committed in the view or presence of any Civil, Criminal or Revenue Court, the Court may cause the offender, whether he is an European British subject or not, to be detained in custody; and at any time before the rising of the Court on the same day may, if it thinks fit, take cognizance of the offence and sentence the offender to fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, and, in default of payment, to simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, unless such fine be sooner paid. XLV of 1860.

(2) Nothing in section 443 or section 444 shall be deemed to apply to proceedings under this section.

Record in such cases.

481. (1) In every such case the Court shall record the facts constituting the offence, with the statement (if any) made by the offender, as well as the finding and sentence.

(2) If the offence is under section 228 of the Indian Penal Code, the record must show the nature and stage of the judicial proceeding in which the Court interrupted or insulted was sitting, and the nature of the interruption or insult. XLV of 1860.

Procedure where Court considers that case should not be dealt with under section 480.

482. (1) If the Court in any case considers that a person accused of any of the offences referred to in section 480 and committed in its view or presence should be imprisoned otherwise than in default of payment of fine, or that a fine exceeding two hundred rupees should be imposed upon him, or such Court is for any other reason of opinion that the case should not be disposed of under section 480, such Court, after recording the facts constituting the offence and the statement of the accused as hereinbefore provided, may forward the case to a Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the same, and may require security to be given for the appearance of such accused person before such Magistrate, or, if sufficient security is not given, shall forward such person in custody to such Magistrate.

(2) The Magistrate to whom any case is forwarded under this section shall proceed to hear the complaint against the accused person in manner hereinbefore provided.

When Registrar or Sub-Registrar to be deemed a Civil Court within sections 480 and 482.

483. When the Local Government so directs, any Registrar or any Sub-Registrar appointed under the Indian Registration Act, 1877, shall be deemed to be a Civil Court within the meaning of sections 480 and 482. III of 1877.

Discharge of offender on submission or apology.

484. When any Court has under section 480 adjudged an offender to punishment for refusing or omitting to do anything which he was lawfully required to do, or for any intentional insult or interruption, the Court may, in its discretion, discharge the offender or remit the punishment on his submission to the order or requisition of such Court, or on apology being made to its satisfaction.

Imprisonment or committal of person refusing to answer or produce document.

485. If any witness or person called to produce a document or thing before a Criminal Court refuses to answer such questions as are put to him or to produce any document or thing in his possession or power which the Court requires him to produce, and does not offer any reasonable excuse for such refusal, such Court may, for reasons to be recorded in writing, sentence him to simple imprisonment, or by warrant under the hand of the presiding Magistrate or Judge commit him to the custody of an officer of the Court, for any term not exceeding seven days, unless in the meantime such person consents to be examined and to answer, or to produce the document or thing. In the event of his persisting in his refusal, he may be dealt with according to the provisions of section 480 or section 482, and, in the case of a Court established by Royal Charter, shall be deemed guilty of a contempt.

Appeals from convictions in contempt-cases.

486. (1) Any person sentenced by any Court under section 480 or section 485 may, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, appeal to the Court to which decrees or orders made in such Court are ordinarily appealable.

(2) The provisions of Chapter XXXI shall, so far as they are applicable, apply to appeals under

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXV.—Proceedings in case of certain Offences affecting the Administration of Justice.—Section 487. Chapter XXXVI.—Of the Maintenance of Wives and Children.—Sections 488-490.)

this section, and the Appellate Court may alter or reverse the finding, or reduce or reverse the sentence appealed against.

(3) An appeal from such conviction by a Court of Small Causes in a presidency-town shall lie to the High Court, and an appeal from such conviction by any other Court of Small Causes shall lie to the Court of Session for the sessions division within which such Court is situate.

(4) An appeal from such conviction by any officer as Registrar or Sub-Registrar appointed as aforesaid may, when such officer is also Judge of a Civil Court, be made to the Court to which it would, under the preceding portion of this section, be made if such conviction were a decree by such officer in his capacity as such Judge, and in other cases may be made to the District Judge, or, in the presidency-towns, to the High Court.

Certain Judges and Magistrates not to try offences referred to in section 195 when committed before themselves.

487. (1) Except as provided in sections 477, 480 and 485, no Judge of a Criminal Court or Magistrate, other than a Judge of a High Court and the Recorder of Rangoon, shall try any person for any offence referred to in section 195, when such offence is committed before himself or in contempt of his authority, or is brought under his notice as such Judge or Magistrate in the course of a judicial proceeding.

(2) Nothing in section 476 or section 482 shall prevent a Magistrate empowered to commit to the Court of Session or High Court from himself committing any case to such Court.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

OF THE MAINTENANCE OF WIVES AND CHILDREN.

Order for maintenance of wives and children.

488. (1) If any person having sufficient means neglects or refuses to maintain his wife or his legitimate or illegitimate child unable to maintain itself, the District Magistrate, a Presidency Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class may, upon proof of such neglect or refusal, order such person to make a monthly allowance for the maintenance of his wife or such child, at such monthly rate, not exceeding fifty rupees in the whole, as such Magistrate thinks fit, and to pay the same to such person as the Magistrate from time to time directs.

(2) Such allowance shall be payable from the date of the order, or if so ordered from the date of the application for maintenance.

Enforcement of order.

(3) If any person so ordered wilfully neglects to comply with the order, any such Magistrate may, for every breach of the order, issue a warrant for levying the amount due in manner hereinbefore provided for levying fines, and may sentence such person, for the whole or any part of each month's allowance remaining unpaid after the execution of the warrant, to imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month or until payment if sooner made:

Provided that, if such person offers to maintain his wife on condition of her living with him, and she refuses to live with him, such Magistrate may consider any grounds of refusal stated by her, and may make an order under this section notwithstanding such offer, if he is satisfied that there is just ground for so doing.

(4) No wife shall be entitled to receive an allowance from her husband under this section if she is living in adultery, or if, without any sufficient reason, she refuses to live with her husband, or if they are living separately by mutual consent.

(5) On proof that any wife in whose favour an order has been made under this section is living in adultery, or that without sufficient reason she refuses to live with her husband, or that they are living separately by mutual consent, the Magistrate shall cancel the order.

(6) All evidence under this chapter shall be taken in the presence of the husband or father, as the case may be, or, when his personal attendance is dispensed with, in the presence of his pleader, and shall be recorded in the manner prescribed in the case of summons-cases:

Provided that if the Magistrate is satisfied that he is wilfully avoiding service, or wilfully neglects to attend the Court, the Magistrate may proceed to hear and determine the case ex parte. Any order so made may be set aside for good cause shewn, on application made within three months from the date thereof.

(7) The accused may tender himself as a witness, and in such case shall be examined as such.

(8) The Court in dealing with applications under this section shall have power to make such order as to costs as may be just.

(9) The accused may be proceeded against in any district where he resides or is, or where he last resided with his wife, or, as the case may be, the mother of the illegitimate child.

Alteration in allowance.

489. On proof of a change in the circumstances of any person receiving under section 488 a monthly allowance, or ordered under the same section to pay a monthly allowance to his wife or child, the Magistrate may make such alteration in the allowance as he thinks fit: Provided that if he increases the allowance the monthly rate of fifty rupees in the whole be not exceeded.

Enforcement of order of maintenance.

490. A copy of the order of maintenance shall be given without payment to the person in whose favour it is made, or to his guardian, if any, or to the person to whom the allowance is to be paid; and such order may be enforced by any Magistrate in any place where the person against whom it is made may be, on such Magistrate being satisfied as to the identity of the parties and the non-payment of the allowance due.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

DIRECTIONS OF THE NATURE OF A HABEAS CORPUS.

Power to issue directions of the nature of a habeas corpus.

491. (1) Any of the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras and Bombay may, whenever it thinks fit, direct—

(a) that a person within the limits of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction be brought up before the Court to be dealt with according to law;

(b) that a person illegally or improperly detained in public or private custody within such limits be set at liberty;

(c) that a prisoner detained in any jail situate within such limits be brought before the Court to be there examined as a witness in any matter pending or to be inquired into in such Court;

(d) that a prisoner detained as aforesaid be brought before a Court martial or any Commissioners acting under the authority of any commission from the Governor General in Council for trial or to be examined touching any matter pending before such Court-martial or Commissioners respectively;

(e) that a prisoner within such limits be removed from one custody to another for the purpose of trial; and

(f) that the body of a defendant within such limits be brought in on the Sheriff's return of cepi corpus to a writ of attachment.

(2) Each of the said High Courts may, from time to time, frame rules to regulate the procedure in cases under this section.

(3) Nothing in this section applies to persons detained under the Bengal State Prisoners Regulation, 1818, Madras Regulation II of 1819, or Bombay Regulation XXV of 1827, or the State Prisoners Act, 1850, or the State Prisoners Act, 1858.

PART IX.

SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

OF THE PUBLIC PROSECUTOR.

Power to appoint Public Prosecutors.

492. (1) The Governor General in Council or the Local Government may appoint, generally, or in any case, or for any specified class of cases, in any local area, one or more officers to be called Public Prosecutors.

(2) In any case committed for trial to the Court of Session, the District Magistrate, or, subject to the control of the District Magistrate, the Subdivisional Magistrate, may, in the absence of the Public Prosecutor, or where no Public Prosecutor has been appointed, appoint any other person, not being an officer of police below the rank of Assistant District Superintendent, to be Public Prosecutor for the purpose of such case.

Public Prosecutor may plead in all Courts in cases under his charge. Pleaders privately instructed to be under his direction.

493. The Public Prosecutor may appear and plead without any written authority before any Court in which any case of which he has charge is under inquiry, trial or appeal; and, if any private person instructs a pleader to prosecute in any Court any person in any such case, the Public Prosecutor shall conduct the prosecution, and the pleader so instructed shall act therein under his directions.

Effect of withdrawal from prosecution.

494. Any Public Prosecutor appointed by the Governor General in Council or the Local Government may, with the consent of the Court, in cases tried by jury before the return of the verdict, and in other cases before the judgment is pronounced, withdraw from the prosecution of any person; and, upon such withdrawal,—

(a) if it is made before a charge has been framed, the accused shall be discharged;

(b) if it is made after a charge has been framed, or when under this Code no charge is required, he shall be acquitted.

Permission to conduct prosecution.

495. (1) Any Magistrate inquiring into or trying any case may permit the prosecution to be conducted by any person other than an officer of police below a rank to be prescribed by the Local Government in this behalf with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, but no person, other than the

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XXXIX.—Of Bail.—Sections 496-502.)

Advocate General, Standing Counsel, Government Solicitor, Public Prosecutor or other officer generally or specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf shall be entitled to do so without such permission.

(2) And such officer shall have the like power of withdrawing from the prosecution as is provided by section 494, and the provisions of that section shall apply to any withdrawal by such officer.

(3) Any person conducting the prosecution may do so personally or by a pleader.

(4) An officer of police shall not be permitted to conduct the prosecution if he has taken any part in the investigation into the offence with respect to which the accused is being prosecuted.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

OF BAIL.

In what cases bail to be taken.

496. When any person other than a person accused of a non-bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a police-station, or appears or is brought before a Court, and is prepared at any time while in the custody of such officer or at any stage of the proceedings before such Court to give bail, such person shall be released on bail:

Provided that such officer or Court, if he or it thinks fit, may, instead of taking bail from such person, discharge him on his executing a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided.

When bail may be taken in case of non-bailable offence.

497. (1) When any person accused of any non-bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a police-station, or appears or is brought before a Court, he may be released on bail, but he shall not be so released if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of the offence of which he is accused.

(2) If it appears to such officer or Court at any stage of the investigation, inquiry or trial, as the case may be, that there are not reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has committed such offence, but that there are sufficient grounds for further inquiry into his guilt, the accused shall, pending such inquiry, be released on bail, or, at the discretion of such officer or Court, on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided.

(3) Any Court may, at any subsequent stage of any proceeding under this Code, cause any person who has been released under this section to be arrested, and may commit him to custody.

Power to direct admission to bail or reduction of bail.

498. The amount of every bond executed under this chapter shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case, and shall not be excessive; and the High Court or Court of Session may, in any case, whether there be an appeal on conviction or not, direct that any person be admitted to bail, or that the bail required by a police-officer or Magistrate be reduced.

Bond of accused and sureties.

499. (1) Before any person is released on bail or released on his own bond, a bond for such sum of money as the police-officer or Court, as the case may be, thinks sufficient shall be executed by such person, and, when he is released on bail, by one or more sufficient sureties conditioned that such person shall attend at the time and place mentioned in the bond, and shall continue so to attend until otherwise directed by the police-officer or Court, as the case may be.

(2) If the case so require, the bond shall also bind the person released on bail to appear when called upon at the High Court, Court of Session or other Court to answer the charge.

Discharge from custody.

500. (1) As soon as the bond has been executed the person for whose appearance it has been executed shall be released; and when he is in jail the Court admitting him to bail shall issue an order of release to the officer in charge of the jail, and such officer on receipt of the order shall release him.

(2) Nothing in this section, section 496 or section 497 shall be deemed to require the release of any person liable to be detained for some matter other than that in respect of which the bond was executed.

Power to order sufficient bail when that first taken is insufficient.

501. If, through mistake, fraud or otherwise, insufficient sureties have been accepted, or if they afterwards become insufficient, the Court may issue a warrant of arrest directing that the person released on bail be brought before it and may order him to find sufficient sureties, and on his failing so to do may commit him to jail.

Discharge of sureties.

502. (1) All or any sureties for the attendance and appearance of a person released on bail may at any time apply to a Magistrate to discharge the bond either wholly or so far as relates to the applicants.

(2) On such application being made the Magistrate shall issue his warrant of arrest directing that the person so released be brought before him.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XL.—Of Commissions for the Examination of Witnesses.—Sections 503-508. Chapter XLI.—Special Rules of Evidence.—Section 509.)

(3) On the appearance of such person pursuant to the warrant, or on his voluntary surrender, the Magistrate shall direct the bond to be discharged either wholly or so far as relates to the applicants, and shall call upon such person to find other sufficient sureties, and, if he fails to do so, may commit him to custody.

CHAPTER XL.

OF COMMISSIONS FOR THE EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

When attendance of witness may be dispensed with.

503. (1) Whenever, in the course of an inquiry, a trial or any other proceeding under this Code, it appears to a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Court of Session or the High Court that the examination of a witness is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, such Magistrate or Court may dispense with such attendance and may issue a commission to any District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such witness resides, to take the evidence of such witness.

Issue of commission, and procedure thereunder.

(2) When the witness resides in the territories of any Prince or Chief in India in which there is an officer representing the British Indian Government, the commission may be issued to such officer.

(3) The Magistrate or officer to whom the commission is issued, or, if he is the District Magistrate, he or such Magistrate of the first class as he appoints in this behalf, shall proceed to the place where the witness is or shall summon the witness before him, and shall take down his evidence in the same manner, and may for this purpose exercise the same powers, as in trials of warrant-cases under this Code.

(4) Where the commission is issued to such officer as is mentioned in sub-section (2), he may delegate his powers and duties under the commission to any officer subordinate to him whose powers are not less than those of a Magistrate of the first class in British India.

Commission in case of witness being within Presidency-town.

504. (1) If the witness is within the local limits of the jurisdiction of any Presidency Magistrate, the Magistrate or Court issuing the commission may direct the same to the said Presidency Magistrate, who thereupon may compel the attendance of, and examine, such witness as if he were a witness in a case pending before himself.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the power of the High Court to issue commissions under the Slave Trade Act, 1876, section 3. 39 & 40 Vict., c. 46.

Parties may examine witnesses.

505. The parties to any proceeding under this Code in which a commission is issued may respectively forward any interrogatories in writing which the Magistrate or Court directing the commission may think relevant to the issue, and the Magistrate or officer to whom the commission is directed shall examine the witness upon such interrogatories.

(2) Any such party may appear before such Magistrate or officer by pleader, or, if not in custody, in person, and may examine, cross-examine and re-examine (as the case may be) the said witness.

Power of provincial Subordinate Magistrate to apply for issue of commission.

506. Whenever, in the course of an inquiry or a trial or any other proceeding under this Code before any Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate, it appears that a commission ought to be issued for the examination of a witness whose evidence is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, such Magistrate shall apply to the District Magistrate, stating the reasons for the application; and the District Magistrate may either issue a commission in the manner hereinbefore provided or reject the application.

Return of commission.

507. (1) After any commission issued under section 503 or section 506 has been duly executed, it shall be returned, together with the deposition of the witness examined thereunder, to the Court out of which it issued; and the commission, the return thereto and the deposition shall be open at all reasonable times to inspection of the parties, and may, subject to all just exceptions, be read in evidence in the case by either party, and shall form part of the record.

(2) Any deposition so taken, if it satisfies the conditions prescribed by section 33 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, may also be received in evidence at any subsequent stage of the case before another Court. I of 1872.

Adjournment of inquiry or trial.

508. In every case in which a commission is issued under section 503 or section 506, the inquiry, trial or other proceeding may be adjourned for a specified time reasonably sufficient for the execution and return of the commission.

CHAPTER XLI.

SPECIAL RULES OF EVIDENCE.

Deposition of medical witness.

509. (1) The deposition of a Civil Surgeon or other medical witness, taken and attested by a Magistrate in the presence of the accused, or taken on commission under Chapter XL, may be given in evidence in any

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XLI.—Special Rules of Evidence.—Sections 510-512. Chapter XLII.—Provisions as to Bonds.—Sections 513-516.)

inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, although the deponent is not called as a witness.

(2) The Court may, if it thinks fit, summon and examine such deponent as to the subject-matter of his deposition.

Power to summon medical witness.

Report of Chemical Examiner.

510. Any document purporting to be a report under the hand of any Chemical Examiner or Assistant Chemical Examiner to Government, upon any matter or thing duly submitted to him for examination or analysis and report in the course of any proceeding under this Code, may be used as evidence in any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code.

Previous conviction or acquittal how proved.

511. In any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, a previous conviction or acquittal may be proved, in addition to any other mode provided by any law for the time being in force,—

(a) by an extract certified under the hand of the officer having the custody of the records of the Court in which such conviction or acquittal was had to be a copy of the sentence or order; or

(b) in case of a conviction, either by a certificate signed by the officer in charge of the jail in which the punishment or any part thereof was inflicted, or by production of the warrant of commitment under which the punishment was suffered; together with, in each of such cases, evidence as to the identity of the accused person with the person so convicted or acquitted.

Record of evidence in absence of accused.

512. (1) If it be proved that an accused person has absconded, and that there is no immediate prospect of arresting him, the Court competent to try or commit for trial such person for the offence complained of may, in his absence, examine the witnesses (if any) produced on behalf of the prosecution, and record their depositions. Any such deposition may, on the arrest of such person, be given in evidence against him on the inquiry into or trial for the offence with which he is charged, if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence or his attendance cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable.

Record of evidence when offender unknown.

(2) If it appears that an offence punishable with death or transportation has been committed by some person or persons unknown, the High Court may direct that any Magistrate of the first class shall hold an inquiry and examine any witnesses who can give evidence concerning the offence. Any depositions so taken may be given in evidence against any person who is subsequently accused of the offence if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence or beyond the limits of British India.

CHAPTER XLII.

PROVISIONS AS TO BONDS.

Deposit instead of recognisance.

513. When any person is required by any Court or officer to execute a bond, with or without sureties, such Court or officer may, except in the case of a bond for good behaviour, permit him to deposit a sum of money or Government promissory notes to such amount as the Court or officer may fix, in lieu of executing such bond.

Procedure on forfeiture of bond.

514. (1) Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court by which a bond under this Code has been taken, or of the Court of a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, or, when the bond is for appearance before a Court, to the satisfaction of such Court, that such bond has been forfeited, the Court shall record the grounds of such proof, and may call upon any person bound by such bond to pay the penalty thereof, or to show cause why it should not be paid.

(2) If sufficient cause is not shown and the penalty is not paid, the Court may proceed to recover the same by issuing a warrant for the attachment and sale of the moveable property belonging to such person or his estate if he be dead.

(3) Such warrant may be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it; and it shall authorise the distress and sale of any moveable property belonging to such person without such limits, when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such property is found.

(4) If such penalty be not paid and cannot be recovered by such attachment and sale, the person so bound shall be liable, by order of the Court which issued the warrant, to imprisonment in the civil jail for a term which may extend to six months.

(5) The Court may, at its discretion, remit any portion of the penalty mentioned and enforce payment in part only.

(6) Where a surety to a bond dies before the bond is forfeited his estate shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the bond, but the party who gave the bond may be required to find a new surety.

Appeal from, and revision of, orders under section 514.

515. All orders passed under section 514 by any Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate shall be appealable to the District Magistrate, or, if not so appealed, may be revised by him.

Power to direct levy of amount due on certain recognizances.

516. The High Court or Court of Session may direct any Magistrate to levy the amount due on a bond to appear and attend at such High Court or Court of Session.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XLIII.—Of the Disposal of Property.—Sections 517-523.)

CHAPTER XLIII.

OF THE DISPOSAL OF PROPERTY.

Order for disposal of property regarding which offence committed.

517. (1) When an inquiry or a trial in any Criminal Court is concluded, the Court may make such order as it thinks fit for the disposal of any property or document produced before it or in its custody or regarding which any offence appears to have been committed, or which has been used for the commission of any offence.

(2) When a High Court or a Court of Session makes such order and cannot through its own officers conveniently deliver the property to the person entitled thereto, such Court may direct that the order be carried into effect by the District Magistrate.

(3) When an order is made under this section in a case in which an appeal lies, such order shall not (except when the property is live-stock or is subject to speedy and natural decay) be carried out until the period allowed for presenting such appeal has passed, or, when such appeal is presented within such period, until such appeal has been disposed of.

EXPLANATION.—In this section the term "property" includes, in the case of property regarding which an offence appears to have been committed, not only such property as has been originally in the possession or under the control of any party, but also any property into or for which the same may have been converted or exchanged, and anything acquired by such conversion or exchange, whether immediately or otherwise.

Order may take form of reference to District or Subdivisional Magistrate.

518. In lieu of itself passing an order under section 517, the Court may direct the property to be delivered to the District Magistrate or to a Subdivisional Magistrate, who shall in such cases deal with it as if it had been seized by the police and the seizure had been reported to him in the manner hereinafter mentioned.

Payment to innocent purchaser of money found on accused.

519. When any person is convicted of any offence which includes, or amounts to, theft or receiving stolen property, and it is proved that any other person has bought the stolen property from him without knowing, or having reason to believe, that the same was stolen, and that any money has on his arrest been taken out of the possession of the convicted person, the Court may, on the application of such purchaser and on the restitution of the stolen property to the person entitled to the possession thereof, order that out of such money a sum not exceeding the price paid by such purchaser be delivered to him.

Stay of order under section 517, 518 or 519.

520. Any Court of appeal, confirmation, reference or revision may direct any order under section 517, section 518 or section 519, passed by a Court subordinate thereto, to be stayed pending consideration by the former Court, and may modify, alter or annul such order and make any further orders that may be just.

Destruction of libellous and other matter.

521. (1) On a conviction under the Indian Penal Code, section 292, section 293, section 501 or section 502, the Court may order the destruction of all the copies of the thing in respect of which conviction was had, and which are in the custody of the Court or remain in the possession or power of the person convicted. XLV of 1860.

(2) The Court may, in like manner, on a conviction under the Indian Penal Code, section 272, section 273, section 274 or section 275, order the food, drink, drug or medical preparation in respect of which the conviction was had to be destroyed. XLV of 1860.

Power to restore possession of immoveable property.

522. (1) Whenever a person is convicted of an offence attended by criminal force, and it appears to the Court that by such force any person has been dispossessed of any immoveable property, the Court may, if it thinks fit, order such person to be restored to the possession of the same.

(2) No such order shall prejudice any right or interest to or in such immoveable property which any person may be able to establish in a civil suit.

Procedure by police upon seizure of property taken under section 51 or stolen.

523. (1) The seizure by any police-officer of property taken under section 51, or alleged or suspected to have been stolen, or found under circumstances which create suspicion of the commission of any offence, shall be forthwith reported to a Magistrate, who shall make such order as he thinks fit respecting the disposal of such property or the delivery of such property to the person entitled to the possession thereof, or, if such person cannot be ascertained, respecting the custody and production of such property.

Procedure where owner of property seized unknown.

(2) If the person so entitled is known, the Magistrate may order the property to be delivered to him on such conditions (if any) as the Magistrate thinks fit. If such person is unknown, the Magistrate may detain it and shall, in such case, issue a proclamation specifying the articles of which such property

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XLIII.—Of the Disposal of Property. —Sections 524-525. Chapter XLIV.—Of the Transfer of Criminal Cases.— Sections 526-527.)

consists, and requiring any person who may have a claim thereto to appear before him and establish his claim within six months from the date of such proclamation.

Procedure where no claimant appears within six months.

524. (1) If no person within such period establishes his claim to such property, and if the person in whose possession such property was found is unable to show that it was legally acquired by him, such property shall be at the disposal of the Government, and may be sold under the orders of the Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, or of a Magistrate of the first class empowered by the Local Government in this behalf

(2) In the case of every order passed under this section, an appeal shall lie to the Court to which appeals against sentences of the Court passing such order would lie.

Power to sell perishable property.

525. If the person entitled to the possession of such property is unknown or absent, and the property is subject to speedy and natural decay, or the Magistrate to whom its seizure is reported is of opinion that its sale would be for the benefit of the owner, the Magistrate may at any time direct it to be sold; and the provisions of sections 523 and 524 shall, as nearly as may be practicable, apply to the nett proceeds of such sale.

CHAPTER XLIV.

OF THE TRANSFER OF CRIMINAL CASES.

High Court may transfer case or itself try it.

526. (1) Whenever it is made to appear to the High Court—

(a) that a fair and impartial enquiry or trial cannot be had in any Criminal Court subordinate thereto, or

(b) that some question of law of unusual difficulty is likely to arise, or

(c) that a view of the place in or near which any offence has been committed may be required for the satisfactory inquiry into or trial of the same, or

(d) that an order under this section will tend to the general convenience of the parties or witnesses, or

(e) that such an order is expedient for the ends of justice, or is required by any provision of this Code,

it may order—

(i) that any offence be inquired into or tried by any Court not empowered under sections 177 to 184 (both inclusive), but in other respects competent to inquire into or try such offence;

(ii) that any particular criminal case or appeal, or class of such cases or appeals, be transferred from a Criminal Court subordinate to its authority to any other such Criminal Cour of equal or superior jurisdiction;

(iii) that any particular criminal case or appeal be transferred to and tried before itself; or

(iv) that an accused person be committed for trial to itself or to a Court of Session.

(2) When the High Court withdraws for trial before itself any case from any Court other than the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, it shall, except as provided in section 267, observe in such trial the same procedure which that Court would have observed if the case had not been so withdrawn.

(3) The High Court may act either on the report of the Lower Court, or on the application of a party interested, or on its own initiative.

(4) Every application for the exercise of the power conferred by this section shall be made by motion which shall, except when the applicant is the Advocate General, be supported by affidavit or affirmation.

(5) When an accused person makes an application under this section, the High Court may direct him to execute a bond, with or without sureties, conditioned that he will, if convicted, pay the costs of the prosecutor.

Notice to Public Prosecutor of application under this section.

(6) Every accused person making any such application shall give to the Public Prosecutor notice in writing of the application, together with a copy of the grounds on which it is made; and no order shall be made on the merits of the application unless at least twenty-four hours have elapsed between the giving of such notice and the hearing of the application.

(7) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect any order made under section 197.

Adjournment on application under this section.

(8) If, in any criminal case or appeal, before the commencement of the hearing, the Public Prosecutor, the complainant or the accused notifies to the Court before which the case or appeal is pending his intention to make an application under this section in respect of the case, the Court shall (unless it is of opinion that the application is made for the purpose of delay or otherwise prejudicing the course of justice) exercise the powers of postponement or adjournment given by section 344 in such a manner as will afford a reasonable time for the application being made and an order being obtained thereon, before the accused is called on for his defence, or, in the case of an appeal, before the hearing of the appeal. [Act X of 1882 525A.]

Power of Governor General in Council to transfer criminal cases and appeals.

527. (1) The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct the transfer of any particular criminal case or appeal

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

[Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XLIV.—Of the Transfer of Criminal Cases.—Section 528. Chapter XLV.—Of Irregular Proceedings.—Sections 529-531.)

from one High Court to another High Court, or from any Criminal Court subordinate to one High Court to any other Criminal Court of equal or superior jurisdiction subordinate to another High Court, whenever it appears to him that such transfer will promote the ends of justice, or tend to the general convenience of parties or witnesses.

The Court to which such case or appeal is transferred shall deal with the same as if it had been originally instituted in, or presented to, such Court.

District or Subdivisional Magistrate may withdraw or refer cases.

528. (1) Any Chief Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate may withdraw any case from, or recall any case which he has made over to, any Magistrate subordinate to him, and may inquire into or try such case himself, or refer it for inquiry or trial to any other such Magistrate competent to inquire into or try the same.

Power to authorise District Magistrate to withdraw classes of cases.

(2) The Local Government may authorise the District Magistrate to withdraw from any Magistrate subordinate to him either such classes of cases as he thinks proper, or particular classes of cases.

(3) A Magistrate making an order under this section shall record in writing his reasons for making the same.

(4) The head of a village under Madras Regulation IV of 1821 is a Magistrate for the purposes of this section.

CHAPTER XLV.

OF IRREGULAR PROCEEDINGS.

Irregularities which do not vitiate proceedings.

529. If any Magistrate not empowered by law to do any of the following things, namely:—

(a) to issue a search-warrant under section 98;

(b) to order, under section 155, the police to investigate an offence;

(c) to hold an inquest under section 176;

(d) to issue process, under section 186, for the apprehension of a person within the local limits of his jurisdiction who has committed an offence outside such limits;

(e) to take cognizance of an offence under section 190, sub-section (1), clause (a) or clause (b);

(f) to transfer a case under section 192;

(g) to tender a pardon under section 337 or section 338;

(h) to sell property under section 524 or section 525; or

(i) to withdraw a case and try it himself under section 528; erroneously in good faith does that thing, his proceedings shall not be set aside merely on the ground of his not being so empowered.

Irregularities which vitiate proceedings.

530. If any Magistrate, not being empowered by law in this behalf, does any of the following things, namely:—

(a) attaches and sells property under section 88;

(b) issues a search-warrant for a letter, parcel or other thing in the Post-office, or a telegram in the Telegraph Department;

(c) demands security to keep the peace;

(d) demands security for good behaviour;

(e) discharges a person lawfully bound to be of good behaviour;

(f) cancels a bond to keep the peace;

(g) makes an order under section 133, as to a local nuisance;

(h) prohibits, under section 143, the repetition or continuance of a public nuisance;

(i) issues an order under section 144.

(j) makes an order under Chapter XII;

(k) takes cognizance, under section 190, sub-section (1), clause (c), of an offence;

(l) passes a sentence, under section 349, on proceedings recorded by another Magistrate;

(m) calls, under section 435, for proceedings;

(n) makes an order for maintenance;

(o) revises, under section 515, an order passed under section 514;

(p) tries an offender;

(q) tries an offender summarily; or

(r) decides an appeal;

his proceedings shall be void.

Proceedings in wrong place.

531. No finding, sentence or order of any Criminal Court shall be set aside merely on the ground that the inquiry, trial or other proceeding in the course of which it was arrived at or passed took place in a wrong sessions division, district, subdivision or other local area, unless it appears that such error has in fact occasioned a failure of justice.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XLV.—Of Irregular Proceedings. —Sections 532-538. Chapter XLVI.—Miscellaneous.—Sections 539 40).

When irregular commitments may be validated.

532. (1) If any Magistrate or other authority purporting to exercise powers duly conferred, which were not so conferred, commits an accused person for trial before a Court of Session or High Court, the Court to which the commitment is made may, after perusal of the proceedings, accept the commitment if it considers that the accused has not been injured thereby, unless, during the inquiry and before the order of commitment, objection was made on behalf either of the accused or of the prosecution to the jurisdiction of such Magistrate or other authority.

(2) If such Court considers that the accused was injured, or if such objection was so made, it shall quash the commitment and direct a fresh inquiry by a competent Magistrate.

Non-compliance with provisions of section 164 or 364.

533. (1) If any Court before which a confession or other statement of an accused person recorded or purporting to be recorded under section 164 or section 364 is tendered or has been received in evidence, finds that any of the provisions of either of such sections have not been complied with by the Magistrate recording the statement, it shall take evidence that such person duly made the statement recorded; and, notwithstanding anything contained in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 91, such statement shall be admitted if the error has not injured the accused as to his defence on the merits.

(2) The provisions of this section apply to Courts of Appeal, Reference and Revision.

Omission to ask question prescribed by section 454 (2).

534. An omission to ask any person whether he is an European British subject, in a case to which the second clause of section 454 applies, shall not affect the validity of any proceeding.

Effect of omission to prepare charge.

535. (1) No finding or sentence pronounced or passed shall be deemed invalid merely on the ground that no charge was framed unless, in the opinion of the Court of appeal or revision, a failure of justice has in fact been occasioned thereby.

(2) If the Court of appeal or revision thinks that a failure of justice has been occasioned by an omission to frame a charge, it shall order that a charge shall be framed, and that the trial be re-commenced from the point immediately after the framing of the charge.

Trial by jury of offence triable with assessors.

536. (1) If an offence triable with the aid of assessors is tried by a jury, the trial shall not on that ground only be invalid.

Trial with assessors of offence triable by jury.

(2) If an offence triable by a jury is tried with the aid of assessors, the trial shall not on that ground only be invalid, unless the objection is taken before the Court records its finding.

Finding or sentence when reversible by reason of error or omission in charge or other proceedings.

537. Subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained, no finding, sentence or order passed by a Court of competent jurisdiction shall be reversed or altered under Chapter XXVII or on appeal or revision on account—

(a) of any error, omission or irregularity in the complaint, summons, warrant, charge, proclamation, order, judgment or other proceedings before or during trial or in any inquiry or other proceedings under this Code, or

(b) of the want of or any irregularity in any sanction required by section 195, or any irregularity in proceedings taken under section 476, or

(c) of the omission to revise any list of jurors or assessors in accordance with section 324, or

(d) of any misdirection in any charge to a jury unless such error, omission, irregularity, want or misdirection has in fact occasioned a failure of justice.

Explanation.—In determining whether any error, omission or irregularity in any proceeding under this Code has occasioned a failure of justice, the Court shall have regard to the fact whether the objection could and should have been raised at an earlier stage in the proceedings.

Illustration.

A Magistrate being required by law to sign a document signs it by initials only. This is purely an irregularity, and does not affect the validity of the proceeding.

Distress not illegal nor distrainer a trespasser for defect or want of form in proceedings.

538. No distress made under this Code shall be deemed unlawful, nor shall any person making the same be deemed a trespasser, on account of any defect or want of form in the summons, conviction, writ of distress or other proceedings relating thereto.

CHAPTER XLVI.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Courts and persons before whom affidavits may be sworn.

539. Affidavits and affirmations to be used before any High Court or any officer of such Court may be sworn and affirmed before such Court or the Clerk of the Crown, or any Commissioner or other person appointed by such Court for that purpose, or any Judge, or any Commissioner for taking affidavits in any Court of Record in British India, or any Commissioner to administer oaths in England or Ireland, or any Magistrate authorised to take affidavits or affirmations in Scotland.

Power to summon material witness, or examine person present.

540. Any Court may, at any stage of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, summon any person as a witness, or examine any person in attendance, though not summoned as a witness, or recall and re-examine any person already examined; and the Court shall summon and examine or recall and re-examine any such person if his evidence appears to it essential to the just decision of the case.

Power to appoint place of imprisonment.

541. (1) Unless when otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force, the Local Government may direct in what place any person liable to be imprisoned or committed to custody under this Code shall be confined.

[Act X of 1882, s. 541 A.]

Removal to criminal jail of accused or convicted persons who are in confinement in civil jail, and their return to the civil jail.

(2) If any person liable to be imprisoned or committed to custody under this Code is in confinement in a civil jail, the Court or Magistrate ordering the imprisonment or committal may direct that the person be removed to a criminal jail.

(3) When a person is removed to a criminal jail under sub-section (1), he shall, on being released therefrom, be sent back to the civil jail, unless either—

(a) three years have elapsed since he was removed to the criminal jail, in which case he shall be deemed to have been discharged from the civil jail under section 342 of the Code of Civil Procedure; or

XIV of 1882.

(b) the Court which ordered his imprisonment in the civil jail has certified to the officer in charge of the criminal jail that he is entitled to be discharged under section 341 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

XIV of 1882.

Power of Presidency Magistrate to order prisoner in jail to be brought up for examination.

542. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Prisoners' Testimony Act, 1869, any Presidency Magistrate desirous of examining, as a witness or an accused person, in any case pending before him, any person confined in any jail within the local limits of his jurisdiction, may issue an order to the officer in charge of the said jail requiring him to bring such prisoner in proper custody, at a time to be therein named, to the Magistrate for examination.

XV of 1869.

(2) The officer so in charge, on receipt of such order, shall act in accordance therewith, and shall provide for the safe custody of the prisoner during his absence from the jail for the purpose aforesaid.

Interpreter to be bound to interpret truthfully.

543. When the services of an interpreter are required by any Criminal Court for the interpretation of any evidence or statement, he shall be bound to state the true interpretation of such evidence or statement.

Expenses of complainants and witnesses.

544. Subject to any rules made by the Local Government with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, any Criminal Court may, if it thinks fit, order payment, on the part of Government, of the reasonable expenses of any complainant or witness attending for the purposes of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding before such Court under this Code.

Power of Court to pay expenses or compensation out of fine.

545. (1) Whenever under any law in force for the time being a Criminal Court imposes a fine or confirms in appeal, revision or otherwise a sentence of fine, or a sentence of which fine forms a part, the Court may, when passing judgment, order the whole or any part of the fine recovered to be applied—

(a) in defraying expenses properly incurred in the prosecution;

(b) in compensation for the injury caused by the offence committed, where substantial compensation is, in the opinion of the Court, recoverable by civil suit.

(2) If the fine is imposed in a case which is subject to appeal, no such payment shall be made before the period allowed for presenting the appeal has elapsed, or, if an appeal be presented, before the decision of the appeal.

Payments to be taken into account in subsequent suit.

546. At the time of awarding compensation in any subsequent civil suit relating to the same matter, the Court shall take into account any sum paid or recovered as compensation under section 545.

Moneys ordered to be paid recoverable as fines.

547. Any money (other than a fine) payable by virtue of any order made under this Code shall be recoverable as if it were a fine.

Copies of proceedings.

548. If any person affected by a judgment or order passed by a Criminal Court desires to have a copy of the Judge's charge to the jury or of any order or deposition or other part of the record, he shall, on applying for such copy, be furnished therewith:

Provided that he pay for the same, unless the Court, for some special reason, thinks fit to furnish it free of cost.

Delivery to military authorities of persons liable to be tried by Court-martial.

549. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules, consistent with this Code and the Army Act or any similar law for the time being in force, as to the cases in which persons subject to military law shall be tried by a Court to which this Code applies or by Court-martial; and when any person is brought before a Magistrate and charged with an offence for which he is liable, under the Army Act, section 41, to be tried by a Court-martial, such Magistrate shall have regard to such rules, and shall in proper cases deliver him, together with a statement of the offence of which he is accused, to the commanding officer of the regiment, corps or detachment to which he belongs, or to the commanding officer of the nearest military station, for the purpose of being tried by Court-martial.

44 & 45 Vict., c. 58.

44 & 45 Vict., c. 58.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XLVI.—Miscellaneous.—Sections 550-556.)

(2) Every Magistrate shall, on receiving a written application for that purpose by the commanding officer of any body of troops stationed or employed at any such place, use his utmost endeavours to apprehend and secure any person accused of such offence.

Apprehension of such persons.

550. Any police-officer may seize any property which may be alleged or suspected to have been stolen, or which may be found under circumstances which create suspicion of the commission of any offence. Such police-officer, if subordinate to the officer in charge of a police-station, shall forthwith report the seizure to that officer.

Powers to police to seize property suspected to be stolen.

551. Police-officers superior in rank to an officer in charge of a police-station may exercise the same powers, throughout the local area to which they are appointed, as may be exercised by such officer within the limits of his station.

Powers of superior officers of police.

552. Upon complaint made to a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate on oath of the abduction or unlawful detention of a woman, or of a female child under the age of fourteen years, for any unlawful purpose, he may make an order for the immediate restoration of such woman to her liberty, or of such female child to her husband, parent, guardian or other person having the lawful charge of such child, and may compel compliance with such order, using such force as may be necessary.

Power to compel restoration of abducted females.

553. (1) Whenever any person causes a police-officer to arrest another person in a presidency-town, if it appears to the Magistrate by whom the case is heard that there was no sufficient ground for causing such arrest, the Magistrate may award such compensation, not exceeding fifty rupees, to be paid by the person so causing the arrest to the person so arrested, for his loss of time and expenses in the matter, as the Magistrate thinks fit.

Compensation to persons groundlessly given in charge in presidency-town.

(2) In such cases, if more persons than one are arrested, the Magistrate may, in like manner, award to each of them such compensation, not exceeding fifty rupees, as such Magistrate thinks fit.

(3) All compensation awarded under this section may be recovered as if it were a fine, and, if it cannot be so recovered, the person by whom it is payable shall be sentenced to simple imprisonment for such term not exceeding thirty days as the Magistrate directs, unless such sum is sooner paid.

554. (1) With the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, the High Court at Fort William, and, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, any other High Court established by Royal Charter, may, from time to time, make rules for the inspection of the records of subordinate Courts.

Power of chartered High Courts to make rules for inspection of records of subordinate Courts.

(2) Every High Court not established by Royal Charter may, from time to time, and with the previous sanction of the Local Government,—

Power of other High Courts to make rules for other purposes.

(a) make rules for keeping all books, entries and accounts to be kept in all Criminal Courts subordinate to it, and for the preparation and transmission of any returns or statements to be prepared and submitted by such Courts;

(b) frame forms for every proceeding in the said Courts for which it thinks that a form should be provided;

(c) make rules for regulating its own practice and proceedings and the practice and proceedings of all Criminal Courts subordinate to it; and

(d) make rules for regulating the execution of warrants issued under this Code for the levy of fines:

Provided that the rules and forms made and framed under this section shall not be inconsistent with this Code or any other law in force for the time being.

(3) All rules made under this section shall be published in the local official Gazette.

555. Subject to the power conferred by section 553, and by section 15 of the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, the forms set forth in the fifth schedule, with such variation as the circumstances of each case require, may be used for the respective purposes therein mentioned, and if used shall be sufficient.

Forms.

24 & 25 Vict., c. 104.

556. No Judge or Magistrate shall, except with the permission of the Court to which an appeal lies from his Court, try or commit for trial any case to or in which he is a party, or personally interested, and no Judge or Magistrate shall hear an appeal from any judgment or order passed or made by himself.

Case in which Judge or Magistrate is personally interested.

EXPLANATION.—A Judge or Magistrate shall not be deemed to be a party or personally interested, within the meaning of this section, to or in any case, by reason only that he is a Municipal Commissioner or otherwise concerned therein in a public capacity, or by reason only that he has viewed the place in which an offence is alleged to have been committed, or any other place in which any other transaction material to an inquiry or trial is alleged to have occurred.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

Illustration.

A, as Collector, upon consideration of information furnished to him, directs the prosecution of B, for a breach of the Excise Laws. A is disqualified from trying this case as a Magistrate.

Practising pleader not to sit as Magistrate in certain places.

557. No pleader shall sit as a Magistrate in any presidency-town or district within the local limits of which he is engaged in practising or carrying on his profession.

Power to decide language of Courts.

558. The Local Government may determine what, for the purposes of this Code, shall be deemed to be the language of each Court within the territories administered by such Government, other than the High Courts established by Royal Charter.

Powers of Governor General in Council and Local Government exerciseable from time to time.

559. All powers conferred by this Code on the Governor General in Council or on the Local Government may be exercised from time to time as occasion requires.

Officers concerned in sales not to purchase or bid for property.

560. A public servant having any duty to perform in connection with the sale of any property under this Code shall not purchase or bid for the property.

Special provisions with respect to offence of rape by a husband. [Act X of 1891, s. 561.]

561. (1) Notwithstanding anything in this Code, no Magistrate except a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate shall—

(a) take cognizance of the offence of rape where the sexual intercourse was by a man with his wife, or

(b) commit the man for trial for the offence:

(2) And, notwithstanding anything in this Code, if a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate deems it necessary to direct an investigation by a police-officer with respect to such an offence as is referred to in sub-section (1), no police-officer of a rank below that of police-inspector shall be employed either to make, or to take part in, the investigation.

First Offenders.

Power to Court to release upon probation of good conduct instead of sentencing to punishment.

562. In any case in which a person is convicted of theft, theft in a building, dishonest misappropriation, cheating, or any other offence under the Indian Penal Code XLV of 1860. punishable with not more than two years' imprisonment before any Court, and no previous conviction is proved against him, if it appears to the Court before whom he is so convicted that, regard being had to the youth, character and antecedents of the offender, to the trivial nature of the offence, and to any extenuating circumstances under which the offence was committed, it is expedient that the offender be released on probation of good conduct, the Court may, instead of sentencing him at once to any punishment, direct that he be released on his entering into a bond with or without sureties, and during such period (not exceeding one year) as the Court may direct, to appear and receive sentence when called upon, and in the meantime to keep the peace and be of good behaviour:

Provided that where any first offender is convicted by a Magistrate of the third class, or a Magistrate of the second class not specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, and the Magistrate is of opinion that the powers conferred by this section should be exercised, he shall record his opinion to that effect and submit the proceedings to a Magistrate of the first class or Sub-divisional Magistrate, forwarding the accused to or taking bail for his appearance before such Magistrate, who shall dispose of the case in manner provided by section 380.

Provision in case of offender failing to observe conditions of his recognizances.

563. (1) If a Court having power to deal with the offender in respect of his original offence is satisfied that the offender has failed to observe any of the conditions of his recognizance, it may issue a warrant for his apprehension.

(2) An offender, when apprehended on any such warrant, shall be brought forthwith before the Court issuing the warrant, and such Court may either remand him in custody until the case is heard or admit him to bail with a sufficient surety conditioned on his appearing for sentence.

Conditions as to abode of the offender.

564. (1) The Court, before directing the release of an offender under section 562, shall be satisfied that the offender or his surety (if any) has a fixed place of abode or regular occupation in the place for which the Court acts or in which the offender is likely to live during the period named for the observance of the conditions.

(2) Nothing in this section or in sections 562 and 563 shall affect the provisions of section 31 of the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897. VIII of 1897.

Habitual Offenders.

Order for notifying address of habitual offender.

565. (1) When any person having been convicted of any offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards is again convicted of any offence punishable under either of those Chapters with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards by a High Court, Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Subdivisional Magistrate, or any Magistrate of the first class specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, such Court or Magistrate may, if it or he shall think fit, at the time of passing sentence of transportation or imprisonment on such person, also order that his residence and any change of residence after release be notified as hereinafter provided for a term not exceeding five years from the date of the expiration of such sentence. XLV of 1860.

(2) If such conviction be set aside on appeal or otherwise, such order shall become void.

(3) The Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may make rules to carry out the provisions of this section relating to the notification of residence by released convicts.

(4) Any person refusing or neglecting to comply with any rule so made shall be punishable as if he had committed an offence under section 176 of the Indian Penal Code.

Additional Act modifying the International Copyright Convention of 9th September 1886.

Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Empress of India; His Majesty the German Emperor, King of Prussia, in the name of the German Empire; His Majesty the King of the Belgians; Her Majesty the Queen-Regent of Spain, in the name of His Majesty the King of Spain; the President of the French Republic; His Majesty the King of Italy; His Royal Highness the Grand Duke of Luxemburg; His Most Serene Highness the Prince of Monaco; His Highness the Prince of Montenegro; the Federal Council of the Swiss Confederation; His Highness the Bey of Tunis; being equally animated by the desire to protect in a more effective and more uniform manner the rights of the authors over their literary and artistic works, have resolved to conclude an Additional Act to the Convention, signed at Berne on the 9th September 1886, respecting the establishment of an International Union for the protection of such works, and have named as their Plenipotentiaries, that is to say:

Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Empress of India; Mr. Henry Howard, Minister Plenipotentiary in Her Britannic Majesty's Embassy at Paris; Sir Henry G. Bergne, Head of the Commercial and Sanitary Department of the Foreign Office;

His Majesty the German Emperor, King of Prussia, His Excellency M. Paul Reichardt, Privy Councillor, Director in the Department of Foreign Affairs; His Excellency Professor Dr. Otto Dambach, Privy Councillor; Dr. Franz Hermann Dungs, Privy Councillor, Referee to the Department of Justice; M. Felix von Müller, Councillor of the German Embassy at Paris;

His Majesty the King of the Belgians, Barron Auguste d'Anethan, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of His Majesty the King of the Belgians to the French Republic; M. Jules de Borchgrave, Secretary of the Chamber of Representatives; Chevalier Edouard Descamps, Member of the Royal Academy of Belgium, Senator;

Her Majesty the Queen-Regent of Spain, in the name of His Catholic Majesty the King of Spain, the Marquis de Novallas, First Secretary of the Spanish Embassy at Paris;

The President of the French Republic, M. Charles de Saulce de Freycinet, Member of the French Academy, Senator; M. Henri Marcel; Minister Plenipotentiary, Assistant in the Commercial Department in the Ministry for Foreign Affairs; M. Charles Lyon-Caen, Member of the Institute, Professor of the Faculty of Law of Paris; M Eugène Pouillet,

President of the Order of the Barristers; M. Louis Renault, Professor of the Faculty of Law of Paris, Legal Adviser of the Ministry for Foreign Affairs;

His Majesty the King of Italy, Commandeur Luigi Roux, Doctor of Laws, ex-Deputy; Chevalier Georges Polacco, First Secretary of the Italian Embassy at Paris;

His Royal Highness the Grand Duke of Luxemburg, M. Henri Vannerus, Chargé d'Affaires of Luxemburg at Paris;

His Most Serene Highness the Prince of Monaco, M. Hector de Rolland, Councillor of State, Advocate-General of the Superior Court of Monaco; M. Louis Mayer, Head of the Cabinet of His Most Serene Highness the Prince of Monaco;

His Highness the Prince of Montenegro, M. Henri Marcel, Minister Plenipotentiary, Assistant in the Commercial Department of the French Ministry for Foreign Affairs;

The Federal Council of the Swiss Confederation, M. Charles Edouard Lardy, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Swiss Confederation to the French Republic;

His Highness the Bey of Tunis, M. Louis Renault, Professor of the Faculty of Law of Paris;

Who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following Articles :—

ARTICLE I.

The International Convention of the 9th September 1886 is modified as follows:—

1. Article II.—The first paragraph of Article II shall run as follows :—

"Authors belonging to any one of the countries of the Union, or their lawful representatives, shall enjoy in the other countries for their works, whether unpublished, or published for the first time in one of those countries, the rights which the respective laws do now or shall hereafter grant to nationals."

A fifth paragraph is added in these terms :—

"Posthumous works are included among those to be protected."

2. Article III.—Article III shall run as follows :—

"Authors not belonging to one of the countries of the Union, who shall have published or caused to be published for the first time their literary or artistic works in a country which is a party to the Union, shall enjoy, in respect of such works, the protection accorded by the Berne Convention, and by the present Additional Act."

3. Article V.—The first paragraph of Article V shall run as follows :—

"Authors belonging to any one of the countries of the Union, or their lawful representatives, shall enjoy in the other countries the exclusive right of making or authorizing the translation of their works during the entire period of their right over the original work. Nevertheless, the exclusive right of translation shall cease to exist if the author shall not have availed himself of it, during a period of ten years from the date of the first publication of the original work, by publishing or causing to be published in one of the countries of the Union, a translation in the language for which protection is to be claimed.

4. Article VII.—Article VII shall run as follows :—

"Serial stories, including tales, published in the newspapers or periodicals of one of the countries of the Union, may not be reproduced, in original or translation, in the other countries, without the sanction of the authors or of their lawful representatives.

"This stipulation shall apply equally to other articles in newspapers or periodicals, when the authors or editors shall have expressly declared in the newspaper or periodical itself in which they shall have been published that the right of reproduction is prohibited. In the case of periodicals it shall suffice if such prohibition be indicated in general terms at the beginning of each number.

"In the absence of prohibition, such articles may be reproduced on condition that the source is acknowledged.

"In any case, the prohibition shall not apply to articles on political questions, to the news of the day, or to miscellaneous information."

5. Article XII.—Article XII shall run as follows :—

"Pirated works may be seized by the competent authorities of the countries of the Union where the original work is entitled to legal protection.

"The seizure shall take place conformably to the domestic law of each State."

6. Article XX. The second paragraph of Article XX shall run as follows :—

"Such denunciation shall be made to the Government of the Swiss Confederation. It shall only be effective as regards the country making it, the Convention remaining in full force and effect for the other countries of the Union."

ARTICLE II.

The Final Protocol annexed to the Convention of the 9th September 1896, is modified as follows :—

1. No. 1.—This clause shall run as follows :—

"As regards Article IV, it is agreed as follows:

"(A.) In countries of the Union where protection is accorded not only to architectural plans, but also to the architectural works themselves, these works shall be admitted to the benefits of the Berne Convention and of the present Additional Act.

"(B.) Photographic works and works produced by an analogous process shall be admitted to the benefits of these engagements in so far as the laws of each State may permit, and to the extent of the protection accorded by such laws to similar national works.

"It is understood that an authorized photograph of a work of art shall enjoy legal protection in all the countries of the Union, as contemplated by the Berne Convention and by the present Additional Act, for the same period as the principal right of reproduction of the work itself subsists, and within the limits of private arrangements between those who have legal rights."

2. No. 4. This clause shall run as follows:—

"The common agreement contemplated in Article XIV of the Convention is established as follows:—

"The application of the Berne Convention and of the present Additional Act to works which have not fallen into the public domain within the country of origin at the time when these engagements come into force, shall operate according to such stipulations on this head as may be contained in special Conventions either actually existing or to be concluded hereafter.

"In the absence of such stipulations between any of the countries of the Union, the respective countries shall regulate, each for itself, by its domestic legislation, the manner in which the principle contained in Article XIV is to be applied.

"The stipulations of Article XIV of the Berne Convention and of the present clause of the Final Protocol shall apply equally to the exclusive right of translation, in so far as such right is established by the present Additional Act.

"The temporary stipulations noted above shall be applicable to countries which may hereafter accede to the Union."

ARTICLE III.

The countries of the Union which are not parties to the present Additional Act, shall at any time be allowed to accede thereto on their request to that effect. This stipulation shall apply equally to countries which may hereafter accede to the Convention of the 9th September 1886. It will suffice for this purpose that such accession should be notified in writing to the Swiss Federal Council, who shall in turn communicate it to the other Governments.

ARTICLE IV.

The present Additional Act shall have the same force and duration as the Convention of the 9th September 1886.

It shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Paris, in the manner adopted in the case of that Convention, as soon as possible, and within the space of one year to the latest.

It shall come into force as regards those countries which shall have ratified it three months after such exchange of ratifications.

In witness whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the same, and have affixed thereto the seal of their arms.

Procès verbal recording Deposit of Ratifications.

Circumstances having prevented action being taken within the period of delay originally fixed for the exchange of the ratifications of the Additional Act of the 4th May 1896, modifying Articles II, III, V, VII, XII, and XX of the Convention of the 9th September 1886, and clauses 1 and 4 of the Final Protocol annexed thereto, as well as of the Declaration interpreting certain stipulations of the Convention of Berne of the 9th September 1886, and of the Additional Act signed at Paris on the 4th May, 1896, it has been unanimously agreed that that period should be prolonged until this day.

In consequence whereof, the undersigned have met together in order to deposit the instruments in question.

Germany, Belgium, Spain, France, Italy, Luxemburg, Monaco, Montenegro, Switzerland, and Tunis have ratified both engagements.

Great Britain has ratified the Additional Act alone, on behalf of the United Kingdom, as well as of all the British Colonies and Possessions.

Norway has only ratified the interpretative Declaration.

The respective ratifications having been produced and found to be in good and due form, have been handed to the French Minister for Foreign Affairs, in order that they may be deposited in the archives of the Ministry, such deposit to be held equivalent to an exchange of ratifications.

In faith of which the undersigned have prepared the present Record of deposit, to which they have affixed their seals.

DISMISSALS AND REMOVALS.

No. 216.—Second Class Assistant Surgeon Francis Joseph Salts, Indian Subordinate Medical Department, Bengal, is dismissed the service.

FIELD OPERATIONS.

BUNER.

No. 217.—The Right Hon'ble the Governor General of India in Council directs the publication of the subjoined communication from the Adjutant General in India, submitting, under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief in India, a despatch from Major-General Sir Bindon Blood, K.C.B., describing the operations of the Buner Field Force, recently under his command.

2. His Excellency in Council concurs in the opinion expressed by the Commander-in-Chief regarding the skill with which the operations of the Buner Field Force were conducted by Major-General Blood, and the discipline and good conduct displayed by the troops throughout these short but successful operations.

From MAJOR-GENERAL G. DEC. MORTON, C.B., Adjutant General in India, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department,—(No. 669-F, dated Fort William, the 14th February 1898).

I have the honour, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief, to submit, for the information of the Government of India, the accompanying despatch from Major-General Sir B. Blood, K.C.B., describing the operations of the Buner Field Force, recently under his command.

2. The object with which these operations were undertaken was to coerce into submission the tribes of Buner and Chamla, who had failed to comply with the punitive terms imposed upon them by Government for their complicity in the recent disturbances in Swat. It will be seen from the despatch that this object was effected within twelve days from the commencement of operations, both the Bunerwals and Chamlawals having fully submitted to, and complied with the terms of, Government during that period.

3. The celerity with which this successful result has been attained is undoubtedly due to the skilful dispositions made by the Commander of the Force and to the enterprise, judgment, and vigour with which the operations were carried out, particularly in the attack and capture of the Tanga Pass.

4. His Excellency now commends to the notice of Government the services of Major-General Sir B. Blood and of the brigadiers and others mentioned in the despatch.

5. The discipline and conduct of the troops, British and Native, have been all that could be desired, and reflect the greatest credit on all ranks.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR BINDON BLOOD, K.C.B., Commanding the Buner Field Force, to the Adjutant General in India,—(No. 1, dated Ambela Pass, the 19th January 1898).

I have the honour to submit the following account of the operations lately carried out by the Buner Field Force under my command.

2. It having been determined that the period of grace given to the Bunerwals, to enable them to comply with the terms offered them by Government, expired on the 6th January 1898, and that they were to be attacked next day, the force under my command was disposed as under on the evening of the 6th January, namely —

(a) At Sanghao, about 21 miles north of Mardan.

The 1st Brigade under Brigadier-General W. H. Meiklejohn, C.B., C.M.G., consisting of—1st Battalion, Royal West Kent Regiment.

2nd Battalion, Highland Light Infantry.
16th Bengal Infantry.
20th Punjab Infantry.

The 2nd Brigade under Brigadier-General P. D. Jeffreys, C.B., consisting of—1st Battalion The Buffs.

21st Punjab Infantry
3rd Bombay Light Infantry (5 companies).

The Artillery under Colonel W. Aitken, C.B., consisting of—

The 10th Field Battery.
No. 7 Mountain Battery, Royal Artillery.
No 8 (Bengal) Mountain Battery.

The Sappers and Miners under Lieutenant-Colonel W Peacocke, C.M.G., Royal Engineers, as under—

No. 5 Company, Queen's Own Madras Sappers and Miners.
No. 4 Company, Bengal Sappers and Miners

One squadron, 10th Bengal Lancers, under Captain W. Stewart.

(b) At Pirsai, close to the pass of that name, about five miles across the hills to the east of Sanghao, under Lieutenant-Colonel H. N McRae, 31st Punjab Infantry—

The Guides Infantry.
The 31st Punjab Infantry.
A section, 4th Company, Bengal Sappers and Miners.

At Rustam, under Lieutenant-Colonel R. B. Adams, V.C., Queen's Own Corps of Guides, who was also in superior command of the force at Pirsai—

Two squadrons, Guides Cavalry.
Three squadrons, 10th Bengal Lancers.

(c) On the line of communications, under Colonel V. A. Schalch, Commandant of the line—

At Katlung, 12 miles north of Mardan.
One company, 3rd Bombay Light Infantry.
At Mardan—
Two companies, 3rd Bombay Light Infantry

3. In accordance with the orders I had received on the subject I made all arrangements for the Sanghao force to attack the Tanga Pass, whose mouth is one mile north of Sanghao, on the morning of the 7th; for the Pirsai detachment to force the pass of that name early on the same morning: and for the cavalry from Rustam to cross this pass when opened, and to work thence towards the line of the enemy's retreat from the Tanga Pass.

4. I had recommended that the main attack should be made on the Tanga Pass, because it is tactically the most convenient of the Buner passes for the purpose. The hills connected with it are in plan somewhat like the letter D the straight part being a steep and narrow-topped ridge, about eight or nine hundred yards long, running from north-west to south-east, while the curved part is a spur starting in a south-westerly direction from the south-east end of the straight ridge, and terminating, after curving round, under the north-west end thereof, with a remarkable ravine or tangi, which forms the first part of the pass and gives it its name. The space inside the D is a sort of basin which the road traverses after it leaves the ravine before mentioned, ultimately finding its way over the south-east end of the ridge from the corresponding end of the basin. High cliffs stand between the south-east end of the ridge and the upper end of the spur forming the curved part of the D, while the north-west end of the ridge is dominated by a lofty peak from which spurs run down towards Sanghao and Buner, respectively. Beyond this peak the main ridge of the mountains continues to the north-west towards the Morah, Shahkot, and Malakand Passes, the last named pass being some twenty-five miles off in a straight line.

5. The height of the top of the pass, and generally of the narrow-topped ridge which it traverses, over the site of our camp at Sanghao, is upwards of 1,800 feet, while the climb to the top of the ridge from the basin below it is about 1,400 feet. The spur opposite the pass is perhaps at its highest part a hundred feet or so lower than the top of the pass, and at its lower end, where I placed the mountain artillery on the 7th, it is some three hundred feet lower still. The top of the high peak at the north-west end of the pass-ridge is about a thousand feet above it, while the cliffs at its south-east end are surmounted by jagged rocks at even a greater elevation.

6. The ground on the Buner side of the pass is most unfavourable to troops retiring from it before a successful attack, as there is practically no cover whatever in the valley below the pass or on the spurs of the hills on either side for a distance from it considerably exceeding outside rifle range. It will be seen further on how this circumstance affected the tactics of the Bunerwals on the 7th January.

7. When I reconnoitred the Tanga Pass on the afternoon of the 6th January, I observed about 1,000 men with thirty standards distributed along the top of the ridge. There were also many sangas on the commanding points, and the men made the usual noisy demonstrations of hostility by shouting, beating tom-toms and letting off their guns. In the early part of the night a few ineffectual shots were fired into camp, but there being a bright moon the firers were easily driven away with some loss.

8. At about 8-30 A.M. on the 7th the artillery under Colonel Aitken, C.B., moved off under cover of the 1st Battalion of the Buffs, five companies of the 3rd Bombay Light Infantry, and a squadron of the 10th Bengal Lancers, the whole under the command of Brigadier-General P. D. Jeffreys, C.B. The 10th Field Battery under Major C. A. Anderson commenced the action at 9 A.M., by opening fire from a knoll close to the mouth of the ravine which forms the entrance to the pass. No. 8 (Bengal) Mountain Battery, under Captain A. H. C. Birch, R.A., and No. 7 Mountain Battery under Major M. F. Fegan, R.A., followed suit before 10 A.M. from a shoulder of the spur facing the pass-ridge to the right of the field battery. The 3rd Bombay Light Infantry (five companies) under Lieutenant-Colonel F. G. T. Welch, and the squadron of the 10th Bengal Lancers, under Captain W. Stewart, formed the immediate escort of the guns, while the Buffs under Lieutenant-Colonel A. E. Ommanney climbed to the top of the spur on their right, and commenced firing volleys at the enemy on the opposite ridge at ranges of 1,400 to 1,600 yards.

9. Simultaneously with the advance of the artillery, the sappers under Major M. C. Barton, R.E., proceeded to the mouth of the pass to work on the road, and the 20th Punjab Infantry under Lieutenant-Colonel J. B. Woon commenced climbing the spur which rises half a mile north-west of Sanghao and leads to the high peak at the north-west end of the pass-ridge. Lieutenant-Colonel Woon's orders were to assault this peak when the frontal attack (which I am about to describe) was well advanced, and if his assault succeeded, to descend on the enemy's right flank and rear.

10. As soon as the troops concerned in these arrangements were clear, Brigadier-General Meiklejohn, C.B., C.M.G., to whom I had entrusted the duty of carrying out the frontal attack, commenced his march with the force detailed in the margin through the ravine in front of the 10th Field Battery. This movement took some time, as the road had been badly broken down by the enemy during the night, and while it was going on the artillery and the Buffs and the 3rd Bombay Light Infantry kept up a steady and well-directed fire on the pass-ridge, which prevented the enemy from showing otherwise than by ones and twos, and altogether demoralised them. Ultimately, about noon, Lieutenant-Colonel Woon was approaching his objective, while Brigadier-General Meiklejohn was also ready, I directed the last-named officer to deliver the frontal attack, which was carried out in fine style by the infantry under his command,—the Royal West Kent and 16th Bengal Infantry, preceded by a detachment of the 4th Company, Bengal Sappers, under Lieutenant D. M. Griffith, R.E., moving by the pass-road, the 21st Punjab Infantry on their left up two very difficult spurs, and the Highland Light Infantry up a third spur still further to the left. At about 1-30 P.M. Lieutenant-Colonel Woon had driven the enemy from the north-western peak with the loss of two standards and some fifteen killed, and at about 2 P.M. Brigadier-General Meiklejohn's battalions crowned the pass-ridge within a few minutes of each other. Before this, however, the enemy, finding that they could not impede our frontal attack without exposing themselves to a murderous fire from the artillery and infantry on the spur in their front, and that Lieutenant-Colonel Woon was pressing and outflanking their right, did not wait for our men to close with them, but retired precipitately down the valley on Kingargali and the hills beyond it, suffering some loss from the fire directed upon them by the infantry after they had crowned the ridge. The Royal West Kent were sent on at once to Kingargali, and were followed soon afterwards by Brigadier-General Meiklejohn with the Highland Light Infantry and the 20th Punjab Infantry. The 21st Punjab Infantry rejoined their own brigade at Sanghao in the afternoon, and the 16th Bengal Infantry remained for the night on the top of the pass, where the 4th Company, Bengal

1st Battalion, Royal West Kent Regiment, under Major C. W. H. Evans.
2nd Battalion, Highland Light Infantry, under Lieutenant-Colonel R. D. B. Rutherford.
16th Bengal Infantry under Lieutenant-Colonel A. Montanaro.
21st Punjab Infantry under Lieutenant-Colonel W. C. Faithfull, (lent from the 2nd Brigade for the day).

Sappers, under Lieutenant H. R. Stockley, R.E., and the 5th Company, Queen's Own Sappers, under Captain E. P. Johnson, R.E., also spent the night after working on the road until dark.

11. The road over the pass turned out, as I expected, quite impracticable for mules; but as I had provided coolie transport in view of this contingency, the troops in advance underwent no unusual hardships in the interval that elapsed before the pass was regularly opened for mule transport, which was done most successfully on the 10th January, after nearly three days' excellent and energetic work by the Royal Engineers and Sappers under the orders of Lieutenant-Colonel W. Peacocke, C.M.G., the Commanding Royal Engineer of the Force.

12. Only one casualty occurred on our side in this action; the causes of this fortunate result being that the accurate fire of our artillery, and of our infantry at long range, made it impossible for the enemy to bring an effective fire to bear on our advancing troops, or even to roll down stones on them to any great extent; and that the unfavourable nature of the ground in the rear of the enemy's position rendered it imperative for them, as soon as it appeared clear that they would have ultimately to retire, to do so in good time, before it was possible for them to try conclusions with the sword.

13. The endurance of our infantry, and the careful and judicious leading of their officers, were conspicuous throughout the day. The signalling arrangements, under Captain E. V. O. Hewett, Royal West Kent Regiment, were perfectly carried out and were of the greatest value, as they enabled me to time the various movements with an accuracy which would not have been otherwise possible, and which was of course one of the causes of our easy success. I have already alluded to the fire of the artillery, under Colonel W. Aitken, C.B., which left nothing to be desired in regard to accuracy and sound management.

14. The strength of the enemy present was about 2,000 men, and considerable reinforcements were on the way to help them, but retired without taking any part in the action. It is now reported that the long range volleys fired by the Buffs had a most demoralising effect, as the bullets arrived before the sound of the discharges, whose smoke also could not be seen; so that the volleys could not be "dodged." The enemy's casualties, as reported up to date, included about 50 killed.

15. While the operations described above were in progress, the force under Lieutenant Colonel Adams, V.C., at Rustam and Pirsai [see paragraph 2 (b) ante] was not idle. On the 6th January the cavalry* reconnoitred the Pirsai, Malandri, and Ambela Passes, finding some 40 men on the first named, and 800 to 1,000 on each of the others. On the afternoon of the same day the infantry† of the force under Lieutenant-Colonel H. N. McRae marched from Rustam to Pirsai village, where they bivouacked for the night; and at 7-30 next morning advanced against the pass, which they took with slight opposition. At 11 A.M., the cavalry commenced to cross the pass, which was found exceedingly difficult for horses, especially on the north side, where a great deal of ice and hoar frost was met with, ultimately Lieutenant-Colonel Adams, V.C., reconnoitred in person with infantry towards Bampokha as far as Kuai, and then returned for the night to Chorbanda, below the pass. Next day, the 8th, he opened communication with Brigadier-General Meiklejohn at Kingargali, and reconnoitred to Tursak, and towards the south-east, finding a gathering of the enemy on the hills near Tursak. On the evening of this day Lieutenant-Colonel Adams and the cavalry joined the 1st Brigade under Brigadier-General Meiklejohn at Kingargali. Lieutenant-Colonel McRae also joined General Meiklejohn on the 10th with his infantry and sappers, after three days' very hard work in getting his baggage over the pass.

* Two squadrons, Guides Cavalry, under Captain F. G. H. Davies.
Three squadrons, 10th Bengal Lancers, under Major F. A. Blyth.

† The Guides Infantry under Major F. Campbell.
The 31st Punjab Infantry under Major A. Wallace.
A section of the 4th Company, Bengal Sappers, under Lieutenant J. M. C. Colvin, R.E.

16. The movement thus successfully carried out by Lieutenant-Colonel Adams, V.C., was of very great value, as the sudden appearance of five squadrons and two battalions in the middle of the Buner country, in addition to the brigade which came over the Tanga Pass, helped most effectually to prevent the enemy from being encouraged to make fresh resistance, as they might have been otherwise in consequence of the delay which necessarily took place before I could bring supplies enough over that pass to enable me to advance.

17. On the 9th January, as I found it hopeless to make the Tanga Pass fit for camels in any reasonable time, and as water was very scarce at Sanghao, I moved Brigadier-General Jeffreys from that place to Katlang with the portion of his brigade which was at Sanghao, it being equipped with camel transport; and I directed him to proceed by easy marches to the Ambela Pass, where I intended to join him later. The 10th Field Battery accompanied Brigadier-General Jeffreys.

18. The first move in force from Kingargali was made by Brigadier-General Meiklejohn into the Bazargai valley on the 10th January, with a small column consisting of two battalions, one battery, two squadrons and a detachment of Sappers.

19. On the 11th, I received a report that preparations were being made by the enemy to offer resistance near Tursak to my further advance. I had arranged to organise my first brigade under Brigadier-General Meiklejohn as a brigade of all arms‡ and to march with it through Buner to Chamla, dealing with the various sections of the tribes during the movements; and on hearing of the intended resistance I made preparations to add a battalion and three squadrons temporarily to this brigade, if necessary; while at the same time I directed Brigadier-General Jeffreys, who was still at Katlang, to march at once on the Ambela Pass and to make himself felt there as soon as possible.

‡ Four battalions, Two batteries, Two squadrons, One company Sappers.

20. However, the intended opposition fell through, as the Bunerwals came to the conclusion that the risk of defeat, and of the destruction of their property which would have followed it, was too great; and I accordingly sent the extra battalion and three squadrons to join General Jeffreys viâ Sanghao and Katlang, as I did not consider it advisable to take them on with me.

21. On the 12th January, I moved the force at Kingargali (except half a battalion left to garrison the post) to Tursak, where Brigadier-General Meiklejohn joined me with his column from the Bazargai valley on the same day. On the 13th, Brigadier-General Meiklejohn marched with a small column of all arms to Bai, near the famous shrine of the "Pir Baba," which was visited by the Mahomedan officers and soldiers of the column; and on the 14th he moved to Hilai. On the same day I completed the provisioning of the 1st Brigade up to the 24th January, and having dropped communication with Sanghao, I marched the troops at Tursak on the 15th to Dagar, sending Brigadier-General Meiklejohn with his column from Hilai to Rega, to destroy the house and property of Mulla Saidulla, the "Mad Fakir." On the 16th, Brigadier-General Meiklejohn moved to Barkilli, close to the Boner Pass, where I joined him, and the force at Dagar marched under Lieutenant-Colonel Adams, V.C., to Bajkatta.

22. I had now reached the south-eastern border of Buner, and all the Bunerwal sections had paid up their fines and made submission as I passed through or near their several districts.

23. Meanwhile Brigadier-General Jeffreys, on receiving my telegram of the 11th directing him to push on towards the Ambela Pass, marched to Rustam the same day, and thence to Surkabi, at the mouth of the pass, on the following day. Some slight show of opposition was made to him at first, which resulted in the loss to the enemy of three killed and two wounded, but by the evening of the 16th he had fully occupied the pass, while Major E. Blunt, R.E., under his orders, had opened a road fit for camels down to its foot on the Chamla side. General Jeffreys received 900 mules from Peshawar on the 16th, and in accordance with my instructions prepared to march his brigade into Chamla on the 17th.

24. On the 15th Colonel V. A. Schalch, the Commandant of Communications, evacuated Sanghao and the line thence to Mardan, and on the following day he had opened the line from Mardan to Surkhabi, forming the advanced depôt at Rustam.

25. On the 17th I moved from Barkilli to Ambela in Chamla with Brigadier-General Meiklejohn's force, leaving Lieutenant-Colonel Adams' force at Bajkatta for one more day, in order that the survey of that neighbourhood might be completed. At Ambela I met Brigadier-General Jeffreys, who occupied Kogah and Nawagai with his brigade, and proceeded to reconnoitre the lower end of the Chamla Valley with the 10th Bengal Lancers under Major F. A. Blyth.

26. The Chamlawals had paid up all fines by the afternoon of the 18th, and consequently on that and the following day I moved the whole of my force over the Ambela Pass into British territory; so that the Buner expedition was concluded on the twelfth day after its commencement on the 7th January.

27. The discipline and conduct of the troops throughout the expedition were all that could be desired. The 1st and 2nd Brigades were most ably and efficiently commanded by Brigadier-General W. H. Meiklejohn, C.B., C.M.G., and Brigadier-General P. D. Jeffreys, C.B., respectively; and I have the honour accordingly to recommend these officers strongly to the favourable consideration of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

28. It will be understood from the smoothness and rapidity with which the operations of the force were carried out, that the staff duties of all kinds—divisional, brigade, line of communications, and at the base—were performed in a very perfect manner by the officers concerned, each in his own sphere. The names of the principal staff officers who thus contributed so largely to the success of the expedition, are as under, and I have the honour to recommend them all to the favourable consideration of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief:—

Divisional Staff.

Major H. H. Burney, Gordon Highlanders, Assistant Adjutant General.

Lieutenant-Colonel A. Masters, 2nd Central India Horse, Assistant Quartermaster General.

Captain H. E. Stanton, D.S.O., R.A., Deputy Assistant Quartermaster General, Intelligence Branch.

Captain E. V. O. Hewett, Royal West Kent Regiment, Superintendent, Army Signalling.

Surgeon-Colonel J. C. G. Carmichael, Indian Medical Service, Principal Medical Officer.

Brevet-Colonel W. Aitken, C.B., R.A., Commanding Royal Artillery.

Lieutenant-Colonel W. Peacocke, C.M.G., R.E., Commanding Royal Engineer.

Major E. Blunt, R.E., Field Engineer.

Major M. C. Barton, R.E., Field Engineer.

Captain C. L. Robertson, R.E., Survey Officer.

Captain L. G. Watkins, R.A., Ordnance Officer.

Major H. Wharry, D.S.O., Staff Corps, Chief Commissariat Officer.

Captain A. R. Burlton, Staff Corps, Commissariat Officer.

Captain C. G. R. Thackwell, Staff Corps, Divisional Transport Officer.

Veterinary-Captain H. T. W. Mann, Army Veterinary Department, Senior Veterinary Officer.

1st Brigade Staff.

Major E. A. P. Hobday, R.A., Deputy Assistant Adjutant General.
Captain G. F. H. Dillon, 40th Pathans, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster General.
Captain C. H. Beville, Staff Corps, Brigade Commissariat Officer.
Captain J. M. Camilleri, 13th Bengal Infantry, Brigade Transport Officer.

2nd Brigade Staff.

Captain A. B. Dunsterville, East Surrey Regiment, Deputy Assistant Adjutant General.
Major C. H. Powell, 2-1 Gurkhas. Deputy Assistant Quartermaster General.
Captain G. A. Hawkins, Staff Corps, Brigade Commissariat Officer.
Captain D. Baker, 2nd Bombay Grenadiers, Brigade Transport Officer.

Line of Communications.

Colonel V. A. Schalch, 11th Bengal Infantry Commandant.
Major L. Herbert, Central India Horse, Staff Officer.
Captain C. E. Belli-Bivar, 7th Bombay Lancers, Road Commandant.
Lieutenant W. Robertson, R.E., Telegraph Officer.
Mr. H. C. Sheridan, Senior Postal Superintendent, Post Office.

Base.

Colonel E. H. Bingham, 13th Bengal Infantry, Base Commandant.
Major A. Cadell, 38th Dogras, Staff Officer.
Captain S. W. Lincoln, Staff Corps, Base Commissariat Officer.
Lieutenant C G. Lewes, Essex Regiment, Transport Officer.

29. I have also the honour to recommend to His Excellency's favourable consideration the under-named officers who commanded the battalions and other units of my force in a thoroughly satisfactory manner, viz.:

Lieutenant-Colonel A. E. Ommanney, Commanding the 1st Battalion, the Buffs.
Major C. W. H. Evans, Commanding the 1st Battalion, Royal West Kent Regiment.
Lieutenant-Colonel R. D. B. Rutherford, Commanding the 2nd Battalion, Highland Light Infantry.
Major F. Campbell, Commanding the Guides Infantry.
Lieutenant-Colonel A. Montanaro, Commanding the 16th Bengal Infantry.
Lieutenant-Colonel J. B. Woon, Commanding the 20th Punjab Infantry.
Lieutenant-Colonel W. C. Faithfull, Commanding the 21st Punjab Infantry.
Lieutenant-Colonel H. N. McRae, Commanding the 31st Punjab Infantry.
Lieutenant-Colonel F. G. T. Welch, Commanding the 3rd Bombay Light Infantry.
Major C. A. Anderson, Commanding 10th Field Battery, R.A.
Major M. F. Fegen, Commanding No. 7 Mountain Battery, R.A
Captain A. H. C. Birch, Commanding No. 8 (Bengal) Mountain Battery.
Lieutenant-Colonel R. B. Adams, V.C., Commanding Guides Cavalry.
Major F. A. Blyth, Commanding 10th Bengal Lancers.
Captain E. P. Johnson, Commanding No 5 Company, Queen's Own Sappers and Miners.
Lieutenant H. R. Stockley, Commanding No. 4 Company, Bengal Sappers and Miners.

30. I have also the honour to bring the following medical officers to His Excellency's favourable notice on account of the very satisfactory manner in which they carried out their duties, viz.:—

Surgeon-Major C. W. Johnson, Army Medical Staff.
Surgeon-Major W. A. Sykes, D.S.O., Indian Medical Service.

31. I am greatly indebted to my personal staff, and I have the honour specially to commend the services of the under-named officers thereof, viz.:—

Lieutenant Viscount Fincastle, V.C., 16th Lancers, Aide-de-Camp.
Lieutenant W. S. Fraser, 19th Bengal Lancers, Orderly Officer.

32. I have further the honour to bring to notice the good services of the following Political officers, viz.:—

Mr. C. E. Bunbury, Indian Civil Service, Chief Political Officer.
Lieutenant C. P. Down, Staff Corps, Assistant Political Officer.
Khan Bahadur Ibrahim Khan, Political Assistant.

33. I also beg to recommend the under-named Honorary Commissioned Officer, and Warrant Officer to favourable consideration on account of the highly satisfactory manner in which they carried out their duties, viz. :—

Honorary Lieutenant A. Watt, Bengal Sappers and Miners.

Conductor A. Edwards, Unattached List, Staff Clerk.

34. The Revd. L. Klugh, Chaplain, Church of England, and the Revd. R. H. Stevenson, M.A., Chaplain, Church of Scotland, accompanied the force during its march through Buner, and carried out their duties most satisfactorily.

35. Rai Bahadur Lorinda Mal, Contractor to the Commissariat of the force, is brought to favourable notice by Major H. Wharry, D.S.O., Chief Commissariat Officer, and I accordingly beg to recommend that his services may be rewarded in some suitable manner.

36. I regret that the Nabha Infantry, who were sent to join the Buner Field Force towards the conclusion of the operations, did not arrive in time to take part in them. I inspected the battalion at Mardan on the 20th January, and was well satisfied with the turn-out of all ranks and with the manner in which they moved and in which the men handled their arms.

37. I have the honour to attach a casualty return, together with a sketch of the scene of the action on the 7th January. The Intelligence Department maps may be consulted for other details.

4 (d) After the expiration of the sixth year and before the expiration of the seventh year from the date of the filing of the specification—

The sum of R50 for the above invention.

NOTICES.

All communications relating to Act V (the Inventions and Designs Act) of 1888 should be addressed to the "Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture (PATENTS BRANCH), CALCUTTA".

The office of the Secretary under the Act is open for the transaction of business from 11 A.M. to 4 P.M. on all days except Sundays and gazetted holidays.

The Government of India are advised that, as trade marks are not "designs" within the meaning of the Act, they cannot be registered under Part II.

The fees payable under the fourth and sixth schedules are now collected in cash, and applicants are warned that they must be responsible for any delay in cashing cheques.

Copies of the weekly notifications, and of the quarterly lists, of applications and specifications filed in the Secretary's office are now on sale to the public at one anna and eight annas a copy, respectively.

Attention is requested to the rules made by the Government on the 10th October, 1895, in regard to the preparation of applications, specifications and drawings.

All applications made under the Inventions and Designs Act, V of 1888, will from this date (December 19th, 1896) lie in the visitors' room of the Patents Office for ten days from the date of the Gazette of India in which their filing may have been notified; or, if the tenth day is a holiday, till the evening of the office day next following.

At the time of delivering or sending an application for leave to file a specification, the applicant shall cause a duplicate copy of the application to be delivered or sent therewith to the Secretary.

A. T. PRINGLE,
Offg. Secy. under the Inventions and Designs Act, 1888.

Return of the number of persons in receipt of relief in districts affected by scarcity.

NOTE.—The figures are compiled from the Local Gazettes, and give the District details of the Provincial totals published weekly in the Crop and Weather Summary in the Gazette of India.

Non-labouring children and other dependants of relief workers are classed as on relief works when distinguished in the local returns from persons gratuitously relieved in poor-houses or at their homes.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, February 12th, 1898.

The large shallow barometric depression which covered Northern India at the close of the preceding week had disappeared at the commencement of the week under review. A high pressure area was formed over Northern India and fairly quiet fine weather prevailed over that region up to the 8th. Then the barometer began to fall briskly over North Bombay and a depression was developed there which occasioned steep gradients for easterly winds over North-Western India. The depression advanced very slowly north-north-eastward and moderate to heavy rain was received over nearly all parts of the country except the south of the Peninsula and North-East India. On the last day of the week the depression had disappeared and a high pressure area had been re-established over North-Western and Central India, and the rainfall had to a great extent ceased. Over the Peninsula the pressure was fairly steady during the week and the weather fine until Thursday, February 10th when some moderate showers were received. Over Bengal, Assam and Burma the weather was somewhat disturbed and showery during the first two days of the week, but afterwards cleared and remained fine till the close. The mean temperature of the whole country was above the normal average during the first four days of the week, about normal on the 10th and below the normal on the 11th and 12th.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, February 6th.—Pressure had been steady over Burma and the southern half of the Peninsula and had risen elsewhere. The rise amounted to over two tenths of an inch in the Punjab. Pressure was highest in the North Punjab and lowest in the south-west of the Peninsula. The winds were variable in direction and moderate or light in force. The temperature distribution was somewhat irregular. The heat was less than usual on both sides of the Peninsula and over North Bengal, Assam and Upper Burma and was excessive elsewhere. The variations from the normal were large in several parts of the country Light showers of soft hail had been received over the North-West Himalayas and rain over the Assam Valley, North Bengal and parts of Bihar and of the North-Western Provinces.

Monday, February 7th.—Pressure had decreased briskly in Burma and had changed slightly elsewhere. The barometer remained highest over the Punjab and lowest over Malabar. Northerly winds prevailed over the head of the Bay and over Burma, while elsewhere the directions remained variable. The force was still light or moderate. The mean temperature was lower than usual along the foot of the Himalayas and on both sides of the Peninsula and was higher than usual elsewhere. The variations from the normal continued large. A few light scattered showers were reported from parts of Northern India and from Burma.

Tuesday, February 8th—The barometer had risen over Burma, Bengal and the Circars and fallen elsewhere. The changes were slight except over Bombay where the fall had been brisk. A low pressure area was developing over North Bombay, but otherwise the pressure distribution was unaltered. The winds had shifted to north over the Indus Valley, but elsewhere the directions remained variable. The force was inclined to rise in the neighbourhood of the area of low pressure. The mean temperature was about normal over the Assam Valley, the Gangetic Plain and the Madras and Bombay coast districts and was unusually high elsewhere. A few scattered light showers had fallen in different parts of the country.

Wednesday, February 9th.—The barometer had fallen slightly to rapidly over North-West India and had risen elsewhere. The depression which was reported from North Bombay on the 8th had developed, and at the centre which lay between Bhuj and Deesa pressure was 0·30" below the normal. Pressure was highest in Assam and relatively high in the North Punjab, and gradients were very steep between these regions and the depression over Bombay. Except in Burma, Bengal and the south of the Peninsula the winds were influenced by the depression and exhibited an indraught towards the centre. The force was freshening in the north-west and was strong at Bombay. The mean temperature was slightly lower than usual in Assam and in part of Bombay, but was more or less excessive elsewhere. Showers had been received over a large part of North-Western and Central India.

Thursday, February 10th.—The barometer was rising slightly over North Bombay and the south of the Peninsula, but was falling elsewhere. The fall had been rapid over the Punjab and the depression noticed in the north-west on the 9th was drifting northward or north-north-eastward. Steep barometric gradients and strong cyclonic winds were reported over a considerable part of the country. The north-western and central parts of India as well as a considerable part of the Peninsula had received rain, but in Burma and Bengal the weather had been fine. The largest amounts (between 1" and 3") were reported from the north-west and centre.

Friday, February 11th.—The barometer had generally fallen over Bengal and the Bay area, but had risen elsewhere. The depression in the north-west had continued to drift slowly northward and was entering the Punjab, while a large high pressure area had been developed over Bombay and the Central Provinces. The winds were still cyclonic in the north-west, but had returned to about their normal directions elsewhere. The mean temperature was very low over the central parts of the country but was above the normal in the north-west, the south and the north-east. Rain had fallen except over Burma, Assam, Bengal, Sind and the south of the Peninsula. The amounts were heavier than on the preceding day.

Saturday, February 12th.—The barometer had continued to fall over Burma, Bengal, and the Bay area and to rise elsewhere. The rise had exceeded 0·20", over the Punjab, and the depression in the north-west had filled up. An area of high and uniform pressure covered North-West and Central India, while readings were lowest in Burma. The winds were light and generally between north-west and north-east. The mean temperature was high in the extreme north-west, the extreme south, and the extreme north-east, and was very low in the central districts. Showers had been received over parts of Northern India and of Madras. The amounts were smaller, and the fall much less extensive than on the two preceding days.

Temperature.—The mean temperature has exhibited large variations from the normal during the week under review. During the first four days of the week the heat, except in Bombay, was generally greater than usual. This was particularly the case in the Punjab on the 6th, when there was an average excess of 6°·2. On the 10th, the extensive and heavy rainfall noticed in the earlier sections set in, and with this fall of rain there occurred a rapid fall of temperature, and the mean temperature fell very generally to below the normal. This fall was greatest over the Central Provinces and the Bombay Deccan, where the heat during the 11th and 12th was largely below the normal.

The following lable gives the temperature data for the week :—

PROVINCE.	FEBRUARY 1898.							Mean variation of week.

The above shows that the mean temperature of the whole country was excessive from the 6th to the 9th, normal on the 10th, and below the normal on the 11th and 12th. In Burma, the weather was hotter than usual during the whole week, but in all the other provinces the variations from the normal were more or less irregular from day to day.

Rain.—A great change in the rainfall conditions has been brought about by the disturbed weather of the week under review. The deepish barometric depression which developed over North Bombay on the 9th and which travelled slowly north-north-eastward during the 10th and 11th, occasioned cyclonic winds and a falling barometer over a very large part of the Indian area, and these conditions resulted in widespread and in places heavy rainfall. The influence of the storm was hardly felt over the south of the Peninsula and the north-eastern parts of the Indian region, and these areas received either no rain or lighter falls than other parts of the country; but with these two exceptions all districts came within the influence of the storm and experienced rainy disturbed weather for three days. In addition to the above the weather was disturbed and showery over Bengal Assam and the adjacent parts of the North-Western Provinces and Bihar on the 6th. The rainfall table at the close of the Summary shows that only in eight divisions, viz., Tenasserim, Deltaic and Central Burma, Arakan, the Surma division of Assam, Coorg, Baluchistan, and the Jeypur division of the East Coast north, was there absolutely no rain during the week, but in the case of Upper Burma, East Bengal, Orissa and Mysore, the average actual rainfall of the week was le s than one-tenth of an inch and was hence unimportant. There were thus twelve divisions in which there was either absolutely or practically no rain, but over the whole of the remaining forty six rainfall divisions moderate to heavy rain was received. The average actual fall exceeded 3" in the case of west, west submontane, and hills divisions of the North-Western Provinces and the submontane division of the Punjab; 2" in the case of the Central division of the North-Western Provinces, the Punjab Hills and the Central division of the Central Provinces; and 1" in the case of the Bengal hills, South Bihar, the east of the North-Western Provinces, South and North Oudh, the East Submontane division of the North-Western Provinces, the South-East Punjab, the South Punjab, the Central Punjab, the West and East divisions of the Central Provinces, Gujarat, the Eastern division of Central India, the north of the East Coast, and the southern division of the Hyderabad State. The third column of the table shows that in no less than forty-five of the rainfall divisions the average normal rainfall was exceeded. The area of excessive rain included Upper Burma, the Assam Hills, the Central, North and hills divisions of Bengal, Chota Nagpur, South and North Bihar, all the North-Western Provinces and Oudh divisions, all the Punjab divisions, all the Bombay and Malabar divisions (except Coorg) all the Central Provinces divisions; all the North Bombay divisions, except Baluchistan; all the Central India and Rajputana divisions and all the Madras divisions, except the Jeypur division of the north of the East Coast. The only districts there in which the rainfall of the week was not excessive were some of the Burma, Assam, and Lower Bengal divisions, Orissa, and the neighbouring Jeypore division, Baluchistan, and Coorg. Not only however was the area of excessive rain large, but the amount of excess was also very large, exceeding 3 inches in the west and west submontane divisions of the North-Western Provinces, and 2 inches in the Central and hill divisions of the North-Western Provinces, the submontane division of the Punjab, and the Central division of the Central Provinces.

This heavy general rainfall has brought about a marked change in the conditions of the seasonal rainfall. Last week there were only 10 divisions within which the total rainfall from the 2nd of January to date exceeded the normal average, while this week there are only 17 divisions in which the rainfall for the whole season is below the normal. In many cases the excess is very large, thus, the Central division of the North-Western Provinces reports an actual total of 2·24" instead of the normal 0·67"; the west division of the North-Western Provinces 3·64" instead of 0·74"; the Konkan 0·70" instead of 0·12"; the Deccan 0·44" instead of 0·07"; Gujarat 1·16" instead of 0·08"; and Hyderabad (South) 1·03" instead of 0·22".

" The total amounts for the week under review have been heavy in many cases, as will be seen from the following record of the maximum fall in the different districts :—

W. L. DALLAS,

Asst. Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India.

SIMLA, the 17th February 1898.

J. B. FULLER,

Offg. Secretary to the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weekly Report on the state of the Season and Prospects of the Crops.

Madras.—For week ending 19th February.—Good showers fell during the week in the Nilgiris, Tinnevelly, and in parts of Tanjore and Madura; and there were light local showers in parts of other districts. The water supply is generally insufficient for irrigation, except in Malabar and in parts of the Circars and the Deccan. Agricultural operations continue. The harvest continues and the outturn of crops is generally middling. Pasture and fodder are growing scanty in parts. The condition of cattle is normal. Prices are steady or are slightly easier. There is some improvement in prospects in the Markapur taluk of Kurnool district, and in Tanjore and Tinnevelly. The numbers on relief in Nellore were—test workers—1,870 men, 3,081 women, 1,639 children, total 6,590 Gratuitously relieved—(a) in kitchens—(dependants)—2 men, 3 women, 149 children, total 154. Others—5 men, 12 women, 3 children, total 20. (b) Otherwise relieved—2 women—total on gratuitous relief 176. Grand total on relief 6,766.

Bombay.—For week ending 21st February.—There was slight rain in parts of Sind and in one taluka of Bijapur. The standing crops have been injured by locusts in parts of Thar and Parkar and by blight or insects in parts of Poona. Cotton and tur (Cajanus indicus) in parts of Surat and cotton in parts of Baroda territory have been damaged by the recent rain Jowari in Ahmednagar and wheat in Dharwar are poor. Harvesting of late crops is in progress in fourteen and land is being prepared for next season in six districts. Fodder is sufficient. Agricultural stock is generally healthy. Prices have risen in three and fallen in six districts; elsewhere they are stationary. The price of jowari in Sholapur was 15$\frac{9}{20}$ seers per rupee. The average number on relief works, including dependants, was—Sholapur—8,349, of whom 7,789 are relief workers and 560 dependants. Of relief workers—2,631 are men, 3,752 women, and 1,405 children. Of dependants—19 are men, 48 women, and 493 children. On gratuitous relief—Sholapur—4,004, of whom 2,192 are men, 1,338 women, and 474 children.

Bengal.—For week ending 21st February.—There were slight showers during the week in parts of Darjeeling, Patna, Saran, Champaran, Monghyr, Purnea and Khondmals. Reports of the spring crops continue favourable, but in Chittagong rain is required. Oilseeds and potatoes are being gathered, and the pressing of sugarcane is in progress. Boro or spring rice is doing well. Ploughing for the autumn crops is going on in several parts of Bengal Proper. The poppy crop in Bihar and Hazaribagh is promising and lancing has begun. There is no want of fodder except in the flooded tracts of Chittagong and at Kurigram in Rangpur. Prices remain steady.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—For week ending 23rd February.—Rain has fallen in the western submontane and hill districts. The spring and poppy crops have benefited by the rainfall of the past fortnight, and save where injury has been caused by hail, they are in flourishing condition. Harvesting of the earlier spring crops has commenced in places, and land is being prepared for intermediate crops. Prices are gradually falling, and there is no want of supplies.

Punjab.—For week ending 21st February.—Rain has fallen all over the province averaging from $\frac{1}{8}$th of an inch in Multan to 3 inches in Sialkot and Rawalpindi; a slight fall is also reported from Delhi. Sugarcane is being pressed. The standing spring crops are greatly benefitted by the recent rain, and prospects are generally reported excellent. The stocks of food grain are sufficient. Locusts appeared in parts of Shahpur, but did no damage. Hail fell in parts of Lahore, Rawalpindi, and Shahpur; the crops in Shahpur were slightly damaged. Crops on low lying land have also been injured to some extent by water in parts of Umballa and Sialkot. Cattle are generally in good condition except in parts of Dera Ismail Khan; they are now improving in Sialkot. Fodder is scarce in parts of Amritsar and Dera Ismail Khan and sufficient elsewhere. Prices are rising in Amritsar, Rawalpindi, and Dera Ismail Khan; falling in Delhi, Umballa, Lahore, Shahpur, and Peshawar; and are unchanged elsewhere. Wheat is selling from 11 to 16, gram 12½ to 13¼, barley 19, bulrush-millet 18 to 23, maize 17¾ to 22$\frac{1}{16}$, great millet 20 and rice 10 to 11, seers per rupee.

Central Provinces.—For week ending 21st February.—The weather is generally clear and cold, with light clouds occasionally, and slight rain in Raipur and Wardha. The condition of the winter crops is generally fair to good. The prospects of late sown crops are much improved by the recent rain, which has also facilitated ploughings for summer sowings. The recent hail has caused but slight damage. The harvesting of winter crops has commenced in places. The outturn is estimated at 12 annas in Hoshangabad and Nimar and 10 annas in Bhandara. Prices of juar and rice are generally falling or stationary, with slight rises in Seoni, Narsinghpur and Sambalpur; that of wheat has fallen considerably in Chanda and shows a general downward tendency. Relief is confined to 160 sick in poor houses and 112 children in orphanages.

Burma.—For week ending 19th February.—In Lower Burma threshing and winnowing are nearly completed. In Upper Burma the cultivation of dry weather crops and of crops on islands continues. Prospects are favourable. In Mandalay, ploughing for early wet weather paddy has commenced. The price of paddy has risen considerably in Pegu and Mandalay, and slightly in Rangoon, Prome, Amherst and Thayetmyo; elsewhere it is stationary.

Assam.—For week ending 22nd February.—Slight rain has fallen in most districts facilitating ploughing for crops Preparation of land for summer paddy in Assam Valley continues. Gathering of pulses and mustard; pressing of sugarcane; and pruning and hoeing of tea continue. Prices of common rice — Sibsagar 12, Dhubri 11½, Gauhati 11, Tezpur 10½, Silchar and Dibrugarh 10, and Nowgong 9, seers per rupee. Fodder is scarce in Cachar, the Naga Hills and Khasi and Jaintia Hills.

Mysore and Coorg.—For week ending 23rd February.—MYSORE: The standing crops are in good condition. Prices have fallen slightly in Bangalore Mysore, Hassan and Kadur. Paddy has been harvested in Bangalore, Kolar and Shimoga.

COORG: Threshing of rice and ragi (Eleusine coracana) continues. Coffee picking is nearly completed. Prices of food grains are stationary. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Berar and Hyderabad.—For week ending 21st February.—BERAR. The weather is cool and clear. Cotton picking and threshing of jowari are in progress. The winter crops are in fair condition. Wheat, gram and linseed are in pod and are being cut in places. Breaking up of land for the next monsoon crop continues. Fodder and water supply are sufficient. Prices are stationary in one district; fluctuating in another; and have fallen elsewhere. Prices — jowari Akola and Amraoti 22, Basim 20, Buldana, Ellichpore and Wun 23 seers per rupee.

HYDERABAD: Rainfall during the week 26 cents. The rainfall of the last week has done slight injury to the standing spring crop ready for harvest. It has done good to the standing winter rice crop. The spring harvest is going on in parts. Prices of grain are almost stationary. Prices—wheat 5½, coarse rice 6¾, and iowari 11¾ seers per current sicca rupee.

Rajputana.—For week ending 23rd February.—Rainfall—Bikanir average 92 cents; Ulwar 35 cents; very good showers in four parganas of Jaisulmere and slight showers in Jodhpore. The standing crops and prospects are good. Crops are being harvested in parts of Kherwara; and gram in Jhallawar. The condition of agricultural stock is fair to good. Pasturage or fodder is sufficient. Prices are rising in one State; falling in eight; fluctuating in one and are steady elsewhere.

Central India.—For week ending 21st February.—There was no rain during the week. The condition of the standing crop and probable outturn is good in all agencies, though some damage has been caused by hail in parts of the Bundelkhand Agency. Agricultural stock and pasturage are good in all agencies. Prices have fallen considerably in Bundelkhand; are falling in Indore territory; and are steady in other agencies. The opium crops have been slightly damaged by hail in Malwa, and are fairly good in Gwalior and Bhopal.

Kashmir.—For week ending 22nd February.—The weather is rainy. Prices continue below normal.

Jammu Province.—For week ending 22nd February.—Heavy rain during the week accompanied by hailstorms. Slight fall in prices. Condition of standing crops fair.

Nepal.—For week ending 21st February.—Slight rain during the week. The weather is seasonable. Prospects are good. Price—$8\frac{5}{16}$ seers per rupee.

The total numbers in receipt of relief during the preceding and present weeks were as follows:—

The Hon'ble MAHARAJA BAHADUR OF DURBHANGA took his seat as an Additional Member of Council.

MEMON BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Hon'ble Sir John Woodburn be substituted for the Hon'ble Mr. Rivaz as a member of the Select Committee on the Bill to render it permissive to members of the Memon community to declare themselves subject to Muhammadan Law.

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN STAMP BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND moved that the Hon'ble Mr. James be added to the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Stamps.

The motion was put and agreed to.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure. He said:—"In presenting this report I have to tender my thanks to the Select Committee and to each member of the Select Committee for the unsparing way in which they have devoted their time and attention to the consideration of this lengthy and intricate Code. The Committee have devoted more than twenty days, and long days too, to examining the details of this Bill and the large body of criticisms and suggestions which were submitted to them. I am sure also that I am speaking on behalf of all my other colleagues in expressing our obligations to Sir Henry Prinsep who undertook the laborious task of digesting all these criticisms and suggestions and presenting them to the Committee as we went through the Bill clause by clause.

"Hon'ble Members have not yet got the amended Bill before them, so it would be useless to-day to refer to the details of the changes we have made; but I wish to make one or two observations of a general character.

"Speaking broadly, we have treated the Bill as a consolidation Bill. We have not attempted to introduce any organic changes into the law of procedure. There are but few amendments in the Bill which do more than remove doubts arising from conflicting decisions, or put what we thought to be a convenient construction on a section where the Courts have held themselves constrained by the former wording to put an inconvenient construction upon it. Of course, in electing between conflicting decisions we have often entered on controversial ground, and we have dealt with matters which may properly be discussed at a future stage.

"In cases of doubt we have retained the old language, and by mechanical means we have endeavoured to lighten the labours of those who will have to master the new Code. In the first place, by occasionally splitting a section into two, or by running two sections into one, we have been able to retain intact the old numbering of the sections. In the second place, we have distinguished the alterations in the law proposed by the Bill, as introduced, from alterations made by the Select Committee. When the Bill was introduced deviations from the Code of 1882 were shown in italics. These we have retained. Subsequent amendments made by the Select Committee are printed in heavy Roman type. When the Code becomes law, any one who takes a copy of the Bill as now presented, and compares it with the Code, could note up all the changes made in an hour. In dealing with the Bill throughout we have had regard to practical convenience rather than to any question of form. The Code has to be administered by busy men, and we have done what we can to make their task in mastering it as light as possible. As I said, I am not going to refer to the amendments we have made; but there were two amendments of which I gave notice on the 21st of December last concerning which I ought perhaps to say a word because they excited some public attention. I announced on behalf of the Government that we should provide by amendment in the schedule that offences under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code should be triable by Magistrates of the first class and Presidency Magistrates in addition to Courts of Session. That was a proposition which was laid before the Select Committee. The Select Committee considered that proposition carefully and have modified it. We propose that the jurisdiction to deal with these offences shall be confined to Chief Presidency Magistrates and to Magistrates of the district In making this change we were influenced to some extent—we thought it desirable on other grounds—but were certainly influenced—by the strong expression of opinion from our Native colleagues. We gave them time to consider it, and they were clearly of opinion that the change was a desirable one. In addition we have made some consequential amendments on that proposition. We have provided that the appeal, instead of lying from the Magistrate to the Court of Session, shall lie direct to the High Court.

"Now I come to another section of which I gave notice. It was a section which provided that security might be taken from persons who disseminated obscene, seditious or defamatory matter, instead of proceeding against them by way of prosecution The Select Committee have inserted that section, but with modifications, which Hon'ble Members will see when the Bill is in their hands. In the first place, we have cut out the reference to 'obscene matter'. We think the existing provisions of the Penal Code relating to obscene matter are quite sufficient, and that offences of that class should be dealt with by prosecution and not by taking security. The alterations in the Penal Code Amendment Bill which we are going to proceed with to-day have necessitated an alteration in the term 'seditious matter.' We have substituted for the term 'seditious matter' matter which comes within section 124A, or matter which comes within section 153A. Then we came to the question of defamation, and we thought that defamation was too wide a term. There is a great deal of defamation which of course may be dealt with either by criminal prosecution or by civil action. We have no desire to interfere in cases of that kind. We have confined defamation to defamation of judicial officers, as it is essential in some parts of India to protect our subordinate Native officers from continual and habitual attacks made upon them. I suppose the European officers do not care much what is said about them, but the Native officers for some reason will not prosecute, and they are in some places—well, I might say—almost systematically blackmailed by a certain small class of papers. We think that that is a case where the law ought to interfere. It will be noted that we have omitted from our definition of sedition what is contained in the English definition, namely, that it amounts to sedition to bring into hatred or contempt the administration of justice. To some extent this new provision, which I have just adverted to, will supply the place of that provision of the English law."

INDIAN POST OFFICE BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND moved that the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Post Office in India be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers, the Hon'ble Babu Joy Gobind Law, the Hon'ble Mr. James, the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu and the mover.

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN PENAL CODE AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Indian Penal Code in relation to Extra-territorial Offences be taken into consideration. He said:—"I desire to trouble Council with a few remarks on the scope of the Bill, and to discuss some of the objections which have been urged against the measure.

"In the first place, this Bill is approved by the Local Governments. We have, of course, been in communication with the Local Governments from the earliest inception of this legislation, and we are now proceeding with it, backed by the cumulative weight of their authority. Now what does this mean? It means that the high officers who are responsible for the peace and good government of the provinces under their charge consider that these provisions are required. Those high officers are all men of wide experience, and they are intimately acquainted with the conditions and requirements of their respective provinces, and when we get a coincident body of opinion from them, that opinion is entitled to the utmost weight.

"Now where do the main objections to the Bill come from? They come from people who are in the happy position of being able to criticise without having any responsibility for the result thrown upon them. If we adopted their suggestions, we should not shift the responsibility from our shoulders to theirs. It is the Government of the country, and the Government alone, which is responsible for maintaining its peace and tranquillity.

"There is another general observation which I wish to make. Most of the important criticisms on the proposed measures have come from the presidency-towns. I am not going to belittle the presidency-towns. A citizen of Calcutta, Madras or Bombay may well say that 'he is a citizen of no mean city.' If we were legislating only for the presidency-towns, I should attach the greatest weight to these criticisms But we are not. We are legislating for India as a whole; we are legislating for 260 millions of people in all stages of progress and civilisation, and not merely for the two millions or so of people in the presidency-towns.

"Now I want to mention some of the specific criticisms which have been made. In the first place, it is alleged that in the new section 124A we are altering and extending the existing law under the existing section, section 124A. This criticism is mainly based on some remarks made by Sir Fitzjames Stephen when introducing the Act of 1870. I agree that it might be inferred from some passages in his speech that he considered an appeal to force to be an element in seditious utterances. But it is a familiar rule of law that proceedings in the Legislature cannot be resorted to to interpret an Act. To discover what the law is, when its meaning is contested, you must look at the language of the Act itself, and, if that language has been interpreted by the Courts, you must look to the interpretation of the Courts. The Courts of Justice, and they alone, can put an authoritative interpretation on the meaning of an Act of the Legislature. If that test be applied, I feel sure that no one who candidly and carefully reads the consentient decisions of the Calcutta, Bombay and Allahabad High Courts can come to any other conclusion than this—namely, that in our new section we are keeping well within the existing law, though we are expressing that law in less ambiguous language. By dropping the term 'ill-will' from the explanation of 'disaffection' we may be somewhat restricting the existing law, but we are not extending it. In confirmation of what I have said, I will read an extract from the unanimous decision of the Allahabad High Court which considers and sums up the previous cases. Sir John Edge in delivering that judgment observes:—

'In our opinion any one who by any of the means referred to in section 124A of the Indian Penal Code excites or attempts to excite feelings of hatred, dislike, ill-will, enmity or hostility towards the Government established by law in British India, excites or attempts to excite, as the case may be, feelings of "disaffection," as that term is used in section 124A, no matter how guardedly he may attempt to conceal his real object. It is obvious that feelings of hatred, dislike, ill-will, enmity or hostility towards the Government must be inconsistent with and incompatible with a disposition to render obedience to the lawful authority of the Government and to support that lawful authority against unlawful attempts to subvert or resist it. The "disapprobation of the measures of the Government" may or may not in any particular case be the text upon which the speech is made or the article or letter is written, but if upon a fair and impartial consideration of what was spoken or written it is reasonably obvious that the intention of the speaker or writer was to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government established by law in British India, then a Court or a jury should find that the speaker, or writer or publisher, as the case might be, had committed the offence of attempting to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government established by law in British India. To paraphrase is dangerous, but it appears to us that the "disaffection" of section 124A is "disloyalty"; that is the sense in which the word "disaffection" has been generally used and understood during the century. We are further of opinion that the ordinary meaning of disaffection in section 124A, having regard to the evils at which section 124A strikes, is not varied by the explanation contained in the section.

'The intention of a speaker, writer or publisher may be inferred from the particular speech, article or letter, or it may be proved from that speech, article or letter, considered in conjunction with what such speaker, writer or publisher has said, written or published on another or other occasions. Where it is ascertained that the intention of the speaker, writer or publisher was to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government established by law in British India, it is immaterial whether or not the words spoken, written or published could have the effect of exciting such feelings of disaffection, and it is immaterial whether the words were true or were false, and, except on the question of punishment or in a case in which the speaker, writer or publisher is charged with having excited such feelings of disaffection, it is immaterial whether or not the words did in fact excite such feelings of disaffection.'

"Then it is urged that the proposed clause goes further than English law, and again some passages in Sir Fitzjames Stephen's speech are referred to. All I can say is this. If in 1870 he thought that an appeal to force was a necessary constituent of sedition, he afterwards changed his mind. After he had served on the Criminal Code Commission, which was composed of some of the most distinguished Judges of modern times, he published his Digest of the English Criminal Law. In Article 96 of that Digest he states the English law in the clear and precise terms which I read to Council on the 21st December. There is nothing in that article, and there is nothing in the almost identical article framed by the Criminal Code Commission to suggest that an appeal to violence is a necessary factor in the offence. I take it that the offence is complete both in India and England if it be proved that the offender has attempted to excite disaffection towards the Government. It is not necessary that he should himself appeal to force. What he does is to excite or attempt to excite feelings of discontent which make people ready for mischief should the opportunity arise.

"But after all these arguments are more or less academic. No one in his senses would contend that because a given law is good and suitable in England it is therefore good and suitable in India. Take, for instance, the English Marriage Laws which are the foundation of English society. They are based upon monogamy protected by the severest penalties. But no one would think of introducing them into India, any more than he would think of enacting by law that the people of India should wear top hats and trousers. If a rule of law exists in England we may fairly consider whether it is suitable to India, but the answer to the question must always depend on the conditions which prevail in India. How much license of speech can be safely allowed is a question of time and place. If I smoke a cigar on the maidan, it pleases me, and it hurts no one else. If I smoke a cigar in the powder magazine of the Fort, I endanger the lives of many and do an act well deserving punishment. Language may be tolerated in England which it is unsafe to tolerate in India, because in India it is apt to be transformed into action instead of passing off as harmless gas. Look at the cow-killing riots in Western India, with the deplorable loss of life that followed: look at the murder of Lekh Ram at Lahore, at the Poona murders, and at recent events in the Peshawar District. Just the other day a Brahmin gentleman and a native doctor were murdered at Sinnar by a fanatical mob. That apparently was the reward for their self-devotion in attempting to grapple with the plague and save the lives of their fellow-countrymen. In legislating for India we must have regard to Indian conditions, and we must rely mainly on the advice of those who speak under the weight of responsibility and have the peace and good government of India under their charge.

"Now let me say a word or two about the changes introduced in the Select Committee. We have added a further explanation to clause 124A. The second explanation was intended to protect fair and honest criticism which had for its object the alteration of the policy pursued by the Government in any particular case. Some people were apprehensive that the express declaration of this principle might be held impliedly to negative the right of people to criticise Government action when that criticism could not lead to a reversal of such action; for instance, criticism on past expenditure, or criticism on an appointment which the critic may think objectionable. I think this apprehension was quite unfounded, but in order to allay it we have introduced the third explanation. We have also removed the offence of stirring up class hatred from the sedition clause, and have inserted it in the chapter relating to offences against the public tranquillity. This offence, no doubt, only affects the State indirectly. It affects the State through the danger it causes to the public tranquillity. It is less akin to treason than a seditious attack upon the Government by law established, and therefore we have provided a much smaller punishment. But in India the offence is a very dangerous one. When class or sectarian animosity is directed against any section of Her Majesty's subjects, the members of that section are in peril. Any accidental event may cause an explosion, and it is difficult to foresee the direction which the explosion will take. The persistent attacks made on the officers and helpers engaged in plague operations have already resulted in sad loss of life. A squabble over an alleged mosque gave rise to a dangerous riot which at one time it was feared might turn into a general attack on the European community in Calcutta. We wish to trust to prevention rather than cure, and by taking power to punish people who foment class animosities to obviate the necessity of putting down the consequent disturbances with a high hand.

"In section 505 the Select Committee have made a considerable modification. As the clause now stands, I think it need cause no apprehension to any speaker or journalist who acts in good faith. It must be borne in mind that the clause does not strike at mischievous and mendacious reports generally. It is aimed only at reports calculated to produce mutiny or to induce one section of the population to commit offences against another. If a man takes upon himself to circulate such a report, he surely cannot complain if he is asked to show that his intentions were innocent, and that he had reasonable grounds for believing the report.

"But though we think and believe that the measures we have proposed are necessary, we have provided safeguards against any possible abuse of them—safeguards which, I may observe, are unknown to English law. My Hon'ble friend the Maharaja of Durbhanga says in his note of dissent that under the proposed section 124A 'it is quite possible to punish a journalist or public speaker who is only guilty of using indiscreet language calculated at most to give rise to trifling feelings of irritation.' May I call his attention to section 95 of the Indian Penal Code, which provides that 'nothing is an offence by reason that it causes, or is intended to cause, or that it is known to be likely to cause, any harm, if that harm is so slight that no person of ordinary sense and temper would complain of such harm.' In the highly hypothetical case which he puts, it seems to me that his journalistic friend would have committed no offence, and would have nothing to fear. If you put hypothetical cases, and assume that the law will be strained and administered without common sense, there is scarcely a section of the Penal Code that ought to be allowed to stand for five minutes. But we have provided another and wider safeguard. As the law now stands, no prosecution under section 124A can be commenced without the authority of the Local Government or the Government of India. We intend, of course, to maintain that rule and further to apply it to offences under sections 153A and 505. There remain the rights of appeal and revision. Every sentence passed under the provisions I have referred to can be brought in one form or the other under the cognizance of the High Court.

"I freely admit that our proposals have met with a good deal of adverse criticism. But, then, what are the alternatives? We have been urged both from official and private sources to re-enact the Press law. But we are entirely opposed to that course. We do not want a Press in leading strings that can be made to dance to any tune that its censors may think fit to call. We want simply a free Press that will not transgress the law of the land. We are aiming at sedition and offences akin to it, and not at the Press. Sedition which is taught and preached orally is even more dangerous than written sedition, because it operates more directly on the ignorant, and therefore the dangerous, classes. Some of our critics apparently would have us sit idle till an outbreak has occurred, and then call upon us to suppress it by violent methods not known to the law. As a sample, let me cite an extract from a Calcutta daily paper which disapproves our present proposals :—

'We cannot govern Calcutta as a Western city. In places like Algiers or Samarkand the religious leaders of the Muhammadan community are told that they will be held responsible for order, and it is found that it has a magical effect. In England, to lock up the clergy would be probably ridiculous and quite useless as a means of avoiding a riot, but that is the difference between Calcutta and London, and yet we try to govern Calcutta just as we govern London. We must begin by recognising that we live in the East and do as the East does.'—(Indian Daily News, 12th July, 1897.)

"But we have chosen much less drastic methods than those suggested to us. We have proposed what we think, and are advised, to be reasonable amendments in the law, and we intend to supplement the substantive law by providing a prompt and workable procedure to put it in force."

The Hon'ble MR. ALLAN ARTHUR said :—" Whatever the views of the mercantile community may be in regard to the means which the Government propose to take to curb that section of the Press in India which so frequently exceeds the bounds of legitimate and healthy criticism, there is no doubt that the mercantile community are at one with the Government in thinking that there is a disease in some parts of the country for which it is necessary, in the interests of the public good, to find a remedy. With reference to the remarks made by the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers in regard to giving Magistrates and Presidency Magistrates power to try sedition cases under section 124A, I feel bound to mention that there is a strong feeling against giving Magistrates such power under this section, the punishment for which may be penal servitude for life, although presumably Magistrates will not be given the power to inflict such a punishment. It is thought by many non-officials that it would be better to provide for the punishment of reckless writers under sections of the Indian Penal Code dealing with cases which are triable by Magistrates in order to avoid giving a worthless person all the eclat of a State trial.

"In regard to the Bill before the Council, the views which have been put forward by some of the non-official bodies would, if adopted, have the same effect, it is believed, as the measures proposed by the Government, and, in so far as they would, in the opinion of these bodies, have made the law clearer and therefore more difficult to evade and at the same time cause less friction, I regret the Government have not seen their way to adopt them.

"With regard to explanations 2 and 3, it will certainly be difficult for a speaker or writer to criticise the actions of Government without exciting a certain amount of contempt, but the country has had a most direct assurance from Your Excellency that the Government have no desire or intention to interfere in any way with the liberty of the orator or of the Press, which assurance ought to be perfectly satisfactory to the ordinary person who has none but loyal feelings. In so far, however, as the assurance is not placed in the Statute-book, it fails to satisfy every one.

"As the European mercantile community are entirely in accord with Government on the broad principle that it is necessary to find a ready means to check the evil that has arisen in connection with the writings of a certain section of the Press in India, and as they have every desire to avoid embarrassing Government at the present time, I am prepared generally to support the present measures. If they result in the raising of the tone of the Press in India, they will undoubtedly be in the best interests of the people and of the Empire."

The Hon'ble GANGADHAR RAO MADHAV CHITNAVIS said :—" My Lord, the fourth section of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee repeals section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, and offers a substitute. It introduces important innovations. With regard to one of these I feel that there cannot be any difference of opinion. That a person who attempts to bring Her Majesty into hatred or contempt, or to excite disaffection towards Her, should be held to have committed an offence and should be liable to be punished, is manifestly right and proper. This addition to the penal law I heartily welcome. We in this country are accustomed to invest sovereignty with a character of sanctity, and deem any insult to the King as almost a sacrilege. Her Gracious Majesty the Queen-Empress has, however, other claims on the affection and gratitude of the Indian people than those of sovereigns in general. By Her wise and beneficent measures, by Her many acts of kindness, by Her watchful and active sympathy with the millions of Her Indian subjects, she has laid them under obligations that they scarcely know how to acknowledge. And a law purporting to protect Her against disrespectful and disloyal treatment by speech or writing cannot but command universal approval. I may be permitted, however, to point out one little defect in the drafting of this part of the section. The phrase 'Her Majesty' is not only an abbreviated and elliptical form of the expression 'Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland and Empress of India,' but is obviously applicable only to Her and not to all Her possible successors. To prevent the law from being futile and to obviate the necessity of verbal amendments on the occasion of changes in the succession to the British Crown, I would beg to suggest that the words 'the Sovereign for the time being of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland' be used in place of the words 'Her Majesty'.

"To the rest of the section I have some serious objections. 'Brings or attempts to bring into hatred or contempt' are words of very vague import, and hardly distinguishable from 'excites or attempts to excite disaffection.' Whoever brings Government into hatred or contempt will be held to excite disaffection towards it, and whoever excites disaffection will be treated as bringing Government into hatred or contempt. Another difficulty that cannot but arise in cases of alleged sedition is to know exactly when Government is brought into contempt or hatred, and when disaffection is excited towards it; to determine, that is to say, the limits of legitimate criticism. There may be occasions when a Court will be disposed to treat any adverse criticism of Government, however reasonable, as tending to bring it into hatred or contempt, or to excite disaffection towards it. I apprehend, therefore, that the section when it becomes law may seriously interfere with the free discussion of measures of Government, for any criticism that is not commendation may be adjudged as seditious. I confess I do not see my way to supporting a provision which, though no doubt conceived in a good spirit, is likely to have the effect of restraining the expression of opinion on topics of public interest.

"The ambiguity of the text of the section is not removed by any of the three explanations appended to it. Explanation 1 does not interpret or explain 'disaffection,' nor exhaust the different feelings included in it. It only states, what might very well have been presumed, that disloyalty and feelings of enmity are covered by it. If the explanation does not tell us what disaffection is, neither does it tell us what disaffection is not. Explanation 2 specifically exempts some comments from the operation of the measure, namely, comments which, though they express disapprobation of the measures of Government, are made with a view to obtain their alteration by lawful means.

"Explanation 3 gives a little more liberty than the explanation 2. It states that comments on all actions of the Government will be excused even though they express disapproval. With regard to such comments it is not necessary that they should have been made with any particular view. A comparison of the two latter explanations naturally suggests a question as to the distinction between measures and actions; but it is difficult to find an answer. No principle is apparent which would justify one rule with regard to measures and another with regard to actions. Neither explanation 2 nor explanation 3 indicates the kind or degree of disapprobation which will not be held to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection. I venture to think that all objections to the vagueness of the words introduced into the section would be met if the simple fact of resistance, or rather the disposition of resistance, to the lawful authority of Government were made the test of disaffection, disloyalty or enmity.

"As regards punishment, the Select Committee have no doubt made an improvement on the original draft of the Bill by reducing the maximum term of imprisonment from ten years to three. But even in its present form the section lays down a punishment which is unduly severe. Transportation is an extreme form of punishment that is hardly called for by the necessities of the case, and, as regards imprisonment, the purposes of justice would, I believe, be fully met if the simple and not the rigorous form of that penalty were prescribed. I read the following in Archibold's Pleadings and Evidence in Criminal Cases: "The Prison Commissioners shall see that any prisoner under sentence inflicted on conviction for sedition or seditious libel shall be treated as a misdemeanant of the first division, notwithstanding any statute, provision or rule to the contrary." Misdemeanants of the first class are not considered criminal prisoners and are allowed privileges denied to the latter. They are not sentenced to hard labour. They are not imprisoned for more than two years. It thus appears that, if it is intended to frame the Indian law of sedition on the model of the English, the punishment as now laid down in the section has to be materially altered.

"The strongest objection to the section has yet to be mentioned. It is that the section is unnecessary. Penal and restrictive legislation is never justified except on the plea of necessity. It is an evil which is brought in to correct greater evils. In the present case I do not see that the circumstances of the country and the state of the law call for such a measure as this section purports to be. The country is not rife with sedition, nor convulsed by disturbances. The existing law has not been found to be inadequate or nugatory for dealing with cases which the State has considered to be cases of sedition. Its proposed modification, therefore, is wholly unnecessary. The section that embodies the present law has been tried and not found wanting. Its proposed substitute is, I hope to be pardoned for observing, a venturesome leap in the dark. Its construction by the Courts, its effect on the country, can only be subjects of uncertain and not very hopeful speculation at the present day.

"It has been said, my Lord, that recent events have necessitated the proposed alteration in the law. In other words, a belief has evidently arisen, as has just been said by the Hon'ble the Legal Member, that the recent unfortunate events in the Bombay Presidency were directly or indirectly the result of newspaper writings. But this is a belief in which the educated Indian community do not share. Possibly some papers, in the excitement of the time, gave vent to their feelings in indiscreet and improper language. Can that be reasonably regarded as a ground for amending the general law of the land and fettering the liberties of the entire Indian Press? My Lord, differences of opinion there must always be. Such unfortunate events as occurred last year must always produce a feeling of unrest. But it is for Your Excellency's Council to consider if such trifles necessitate a change in the law of the land. We have it upon Your Excellency's authority that, although it was desirable that the general tone of the papers in India were not so often unduly coloured by prejudice, no general imputation of disloyalty can on that account be laid at their door. It is a valuable testimony, my Lord, to the loyalty of the Indian Press generally—a testimony which only imperfectly reflects the generous principles upon which the Government of this country is conducted, and upon this testimony alone I would take my stand and urge that no alteration in the substantive law of the land is necessary. The educated community of India represented by the leading newspapers of the country are at any rate acute enough to foresee that in any disturbances that might arise they would be the first to suffer, and the instinct of self-preservation alone, if nothing else, prompts them to abstain from any line of action that would be likely to bring ruin upon their heads. The Hon'ble and learned Member in charge of the Bill has assured the public that Government has no quarrel with the Press. Much less then has the Press any quarrel with the Government. Any idea of a contest between the Government and the Press in this country is too ridiculous to deserve serious consideration. When it is declared that the Government welcomes all fair, candid and honest criticism it is recognised that the Press is a necessity in this country. It is a necessity, my Lord, because with all its defects it is a mirror reflecting the thoughts and wishes of the people, from which an enlightened administration cannot fail to derive much benefit and advantage. Even hostile critics have admitted that the newspapers in this country are the great safety-valves of the Empire. What would be the condition of things, my Lord, if the newspapers in this country were to die out, or if, through fear of State prosecution, they were to abandon all honest criticism and take to singing the praises of officials and their acts in season and out of season? It will be said that Government does not intend such a course to be taken, that Government does not wish honest journalism to be abandoned. My Lord, the most hostile critic will not question the intentions of the Legislature, and yet, if the Bill be passed in its present form, the boldest of editors will feel that a sword is hanging over his head. It is for Your Excellency's Council to consider whether any value could be attached to what he might write under the influence of such a feeling.

"My Lord, I cannot but regret that it should have become my duty to oppose so largely a measure purporting to embody the views of Your Excellency's Government. But I have every assurance that my protest will be received in the spirit in which it has been meant and made. Liberty of the Press, or rather liberty of speech, is a principle valued by no nation more highly than the English. If we have learnt to appreciate it, it is because we have been subjects of the English Government, because we have received our training at the feet of English instructors, because we have been governed on principles that are English. English training and English methods of Government have bred in us aspirations of the English sort, and furnished us with methods of criticism that cannot be described otherwise than as English. I cannot believe that it is intended to restrict criticism, however trenchant, of public measures, but I have thought it necessary to present to the Council what I consider to be the probable consequences of the measures now under consideration. A withdrawal of sections 4 and 5, or a material modification of them, or a postponement of the consideration of them to the next session, will be an act of grace and magnanimity for which the country cannot but be thankful; and, in conclusion, I can only couple the protest I have already made with an appeal for one of these three possible concessions to public opinion.

"My Lord, what I have said is not merely the coinage of an individual brain. The views and sentiments I have expressed are also the views and sentiments of such important and influential public bodies as the Chamber of Commerce, the Anglo-Indian Defence Association, the Calcutta Bar, the British Indian Association, the Indian Relief Society and of such leaders of thought as the Englishman, the Madras Mail, the Indian Daily News, the Statesman, the Amrita Bazar Patrika, the Indian Mirror, the Hindu Patriot, the Hindu, the Indian Nation and others. I would also most respectfully draw the attention of Your Excellency's Council to the representations of the Calcutta Bar and the Indian Relief Society on the amended Bill. My Lord, one of the objects of these representations is that the further consideration of the Bill should be postponed till after the amended Bill has been translated into several Vernaculars of India and a reasonable time has been given to the public to express their views thereon. In my humble opinion this request is a very reasonable one.

"My Lord, there is one point in the speech of the Hon'ble Legal Member to which I would beg to refer. He says that most of the criticisms that have been received on the present Bill have emanated from presidency-towns. My Lord if any intelligent criticism is expected, as has been received in connection with this measure, it must be from places like the presidency-towns, where education has made the most progress. It is in the presidency-towns, or only in towns of some importance, that sedition cases, however few, have taken place. Very few such cases have occurred in the mufassal, and it is on that account I hold that criticism from the presidency-towns should receive greater consideration at the hands of Government. I will leave the consideration of other points in the speech of the Hon'ble Legal Member to my learned colleagues in the Council who like me think the introduction of this new section either unnecessary or the section itself too wide in its scope.

"With regard to the proposal of the Select Committee for the insertion of a new section 153A in the Penal Code, I beg to reserve my remarks till I come to move my second amendment. As regards section 505, I may observe that my leanings are for the changes proposed by the Select Committee."

The Hon'ble PANDIT SURAJ KAUL said:—"My Lord, in supporting the motion I would wish to say that I approve generally of the Bill except in regard to one point which I consider to be of some importance. That point is the insertion of the words 'with criminal intent' before the words 'brings or attempts to bring' in line 4 of the new proposed section 124A and the insertion of the same words before the words 'promotes or attempts to promote' in lines 4 and 5 of the new proposed section 153A.

"These additions would in my opinion have removed all possible doubt and prevented the occurrence of any difficulty.

"As, however, the Select Committee did not think it necessary to insert these words in the proposed new sections, I am willing to accept the conclusion at which the majority arrived and have not thought it necessary or desirable to move a formal amendment. I think it right, however, to give expression to my opinion in the matter before assenting to the motion now before the Council."

The Hon'ble MR. NICHOLSON said:—"In considering the numerous criticisms upon the Bill before the Council, a few remarks have occurred to me as desirable since I had not the advantage of discussing it in Select Committee.

"Many of the criticisms on the proposed alterations in section 124A urge that the liberty of the individual, of the Press, and of public discussion generally, is endangered by the proposed changes; some deem that the Bill 'extends' the existing law of sedition, while others term it 'a complete' reversal of the liberal and enlightened policy which has been so long pursued. In endeavouring to ascertain the history of the present section I was interested to find that the same objections, often in similar language, were used at its introduction in 1870, and I draw from this and other facts the comforting belief that, after all, the liberty, the elasticity and, perhaps I might say, the causticity of discussion will not be impaired by the proposed alterations in the section.

"For, in fact, the section, as now proposed, is simply the existing law made clear; it is not an 'extension' but merely an unfolding of the law. Whereas the word 'disaffection' has been by the present law left to the interpretation of the Courts, while a merely negative explanation showed what was not disaffection, the proposed section, following both the English law, the words of the English Law Commissioners, and the recent decisions of three High Courts, affirms clearly and in their language what before was simply connoted, viz., that the bringing of Her Majesty or of the Government into hatred or contempt is an integral part of the existing Indian law of sedition. As stated by the Hon'ble the Legal Member, it is most desirable that codified law should be explicit, i.e., that it should distinctly unfold to view what is comprised within a given term.

"And I take it that the present moment is not inopportune for such explaining or unfolding of the law, for in the lapse of years since 1870, and with so general a word as 'disaffection' standing alone in the Statute-book, the boundaries between free discussion and disapprobation on the one hand, and seditious libel—whether by incitement to hatred or contempt or otherwise—on the other hand, may have become indistinct. Hence the words now newly inserted in section 124A serve, if I may so say, as danger signals; pace various criticisms, the words 'hatred,' 'contempt,' and 'enmity' are perfectly clear and distinct, and it is well that they should now stand out clearly in the law in which till now they were latent. Indeed, I would say that if, on the question of clearness, we are to choose between the words 'hatred,' 'contempt' and 'enmity' on the one hand, and 'feelings incompatible with a disposition to render obedience,' etc., on the other, we must prefer the former, which are distinct and definite concepts, to the vagueness of the latter. I understand the word, perhaps the feeling, 'hatred,' but I am not so sure as to what might or might not be considered a 'feeling incompatible with a disposition to render obedience.' If it is urged, as it has been urged, that 'hatred' and 'contempt' have, when used judicially, a special and technical meaning, still the position is unchanged, for since it is the Courts which will apply the law they will also use the words in their special meaning, if any, in applying them to the facts.

"I think from reading various criticisms that perhaps the expressed apprehension as to the effect of the law upon the liberty of discussion is partly due to mistaking explanations for exceptions. It is, however, obvious that the explanations, even as now entered in the amended Bill, are not intended to be exhaustive exceptions delimiting the area of safety, but are merely explanations pointing out for public guidance that certain common and necessary forms of criticism are not, within certain limits, seditious; they are finger-posts, not boundary-marks. Hence it does not in any way follow that, because a case does not fall within the four corners of these explanations, it is therefore seditious. With reference, moreover, to other proposals, I would deprecate any attempt to enter within explanations, exceptions or provisos all possible cases which are not seditious; it is for the law to lay down in explicit terms what is sedition with such explanations as may serve for general guidance, and for the Courts to apply those terms to the facts.

"Finally, I would remark that the safeguards to honest discussion and disapprobation as distinguished from disaffection lie not merely, perhaps not so much, in the expressions in which the law may be clothed as in the judicial common-sense with which the law will be applied, and in the political common-sense with which the right of free discussion will be used. It is impossible to imagine that, under the safeguards provided by the Penal Code, as in section 95, by the provision that prosecutions shall only be undertaken with the prior sanction of Government, by the independence and sound judgment of the Courts, and by the more explicit declarations of the proposed law, any writer or speaker of political common-sense can be in the slightest danger, or that any bonâ fide discussion of public affairs or any disapprobation of public men or measures or methods, however severely expressed, can be mistaken for or will be treated as 'disaffection'. Sir James Stephen has been frequently quoted in their support by objectors to the section under discussion, and I will therefore read the following pertinent extract from his speech of November 25th, 1870, made when moving that the present section be added to the law:—

'It might be difficult,' he said, 'to frame a definition which would, by mere force of words, exactly include the liberty of saying all that you meant to allow to be said, and exclude the liberty of saying all that you did not mean to allow to be said. But, although there was considerable difficulty in framing a definition of the kind, there was none whatever in drawing a line for yourself. Every man who was going to speak, every man who was going to write, ought to know perfectly well whether he intended to produce disaffection. If he did (so intend), he had himself to thank for the consequences of his acts; if he did not, he (Sir James Stephen) was quite sure of this, that no words which that man could write would convey to other people an intention that he did not intend to express. He (Sir James Stephen) did not believe that any man who sincerely wished not to excite disaffection ever wrote anything which any other honest man believed to be intended to excite disaffection.'

"Such, my Lord, were Sir James Stephen's words, and it appears to me that one important advantage of the section as now proposed is that, by its more explicit statement of what constitutes disaffection, honest public writers and speakers will be more fully safeguarded than before, in that they can determine more precisely for themselves whether their words can produce, or can be interpreted as tending to produce, disaffection.

"Objection has been taken to the severity of the punishment possible under the law. In this matter the proposed section merely reproduces the punishments of the present law, which range from mere fine to transportation for life. I would here again refer to the speech of Sir James Stephen, who points out that it is necessary to have in the law possible penalties commensurate with the possible gravity of offences, as measured by the state of public affairs, by the position, character and circumstances of the accused, etc.; a violent speech by one person at one time may call for only a petty penalty, while an agitation under different circumstances may deserve the severest punishment. Sir James, in fact, indicated in his speech two instances in which the maximum penalty might be called for or was actually inflicted. I see no necessity to alter the law on this point.

"Turning now to section 153A. I desire to concur in its introduction into the Penal Code. The Madras Presidency has been happily described as 'that peaceful Province,' and I am glad to affirm the general truth of that description. Nevertheless, even there may be found the 'amari aliquid,' and, as a Magistrate of many years standing, I can recall cases in which the powers given by the new section would have been desirable, as in the case of various sectarian differences, of the long-standing and easily-excited feuds between the castes of the right and left hand, of the recent agitation against a whole tribe or caste, etc. I do not doubt but that the new provision of the law is at least equally—I understand that it is even more—desiderated in other provinces. I am unable, moreover, to concur with those who fear that the introduction of this provision will accentuate or encourage the intolerance of opposed classes who, it is said by objectors, 'are now kept under restraint by the consciousness that the British law allows the free expression of conflicting and even antagonistic opinions' or 'who will become impatient of advice or antagonistic opinions which, under the present law, are perfectly free from criminal liability'. I conceive, rather, that the mere declaration in the law that such wilful promotion of enmity will, in future, be criminally liable, will have a most useful effect not merely by reason of the penalty provided, but also from the fact that the Government, through the law, will have declared its policy and its determination; and I believe that it will have this salutary effect, even though the section remain, like section 298 of the Code, an almost unused provision of the law.

"One last remark is suggested by the minute of dissent of the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu. For prosecutions under all the main clauses of this Bill the sanction of Government will, it is believed, be a necessary preliminary, and my hon'ble friend admits, and rightly admits, that this will be 'something of a guarantee,' presumably against wanton or needless prosecutions. But I regret his remark that the action of Government in such cases 'will mostly depend on the strength with which the case is urged by the District Officer.' I content myself, however—it is all that seems to me necessary—with pointing out that in cases of this nature the tendency of any Government will be to sift proposals with the most jealous care so as to avoid embarking on any prosecution which in itself is unnecessary or undesirable, or which is uncertain in its result; Government itself will, of necessity, be the keenest critic of a case; it is not the strength with which a case is urged, but the intrinsic strength of the case, that will determine the action of Government."

The Hon'ble MR. LATOUCHE said:—"My Lord, I do not propose to repeat or add to what has been said by previous speakers regarding the definition of sedition. In my opinion, the meaning of clause 124A is clear, and it is not difficult for a plain man to understand what sedition is. If such a man does not wish to incur the penalty of sedition, let him abstain from sedition.

"It is because I believe that the proposed provisions will not fetter or restrict the free expression of legitimate criticism and honest opinion that I approve of them. As the Hon'ble the Legal Member has pointed out, the law has not been in any respect substantially altered. During the 28 years that section 124A has been on the Statute-book no instance can be alleged where a person has been wantonly or needlessly vexed by a prosecution under that section, and under British rule there is no ground for supposing or fearing that any one will be needlessly vexed in the future.

"I do not anticipate that the passing of the present Bill will be followed by a crop of prosecutions.

"Rather do I hope that the discussion to which this Bill has given rise will result in an increased sense of responsibility, in greater self-respect, and in greater care in verifying facts on the part of those who undertake to express and direct public opinion.

"If this should be the result, the usefulness and influence of the Press, against which this legislation is not specially directed, will be largely enhanced, while at the same time the principles of toleration and true liberty will be preserved and extended.

"I wish to make a few remarks regarding the new section 153A which the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu has in his note of dissent from the Report of the Select Committee characterised as impolitic and dangerous. I consider that the provisions of this clause and of the cognate clause 505 (c) are not only necessary for the maintenance of the Queen's peace, but eminently desirable in the interests of the vast majority of the people of India. Peace and tranquillity are the true interests of the people, and the first duty of a Government is to maintain public order and to prevent a disturbance of the public peace.

"The essence of seditious writings and preaching, the element in sedition which demands measures for its punishment and prevention, is that seditious practices are calculated to disturb the tranquillity of the State, to cause groundless alarm to ignorant men, and to excite them to break the peace.

"The people of India is a large phrase, and I speak now only of that portion of the population with which I am best acquainted, and I do not include the educated classes who do not require protection. The great mass of that population is possessed of many estimable and amiable qualities. They are law-abiding and of a kindly nature, but they are ignorant, impressionable and credulous. Such men should be protected against the preaching of sedition.

"The need for protection will, I think, be admitted by all who recall to their recollection the occurrences which took place a few years ago in the eastern districts of the North-Western Provinces. At that time a number of Her Majesty's subjects were filled with feelings of hatred against another class of Her Majesty's subjects, and were instigated to the commission of crimes of violence. In the result the criminals were punished and saw too late that they had been misled.

"It is such persons (ordinarily law-abiding citizens) that the clauses referred to will protect, and in the existing state of society in India these persons need protection.

"One cannot help feeling compassion, not alone for the sufferers from such deeds of violence, but also in a lesser degree for the misguided dupes who committed the crimes. But the mischief-makers who endeavoured to stir up strife between classes, who sought to promote mutual hatred and enmity—these are pernicious citizens, and for the repression of their practices I welcome the provisions of the new clauses."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS said :—"The amendments of the Penal Code which are before the Council to-day for discussion deal with three evils—first, attempts to make the people of the country hate or despise the Government; second, attempts to promote hatred between different classes; third, the dissemination of statements or rumours likely to lead to mutiny, tumults or riots.

"The first is dealt with by section 124A, the second by section 153A, the third by section 505.

"I propose to offer some observations upon each of the proposed sections under three heads—first, the evil to be dealt with; second, the remedy proposed; third, the objections to that remedy.

"First, then, as to the evil to be dealt with by clause 124A. The Government of this country is, broadly speaking, a Government of foreigners which has to discharge the gigantic task of governing the inhabitants of this great continent, numbering over 250 millions of Asiatics, mostly ignorant and credulous, comprising many nationalities, creeds and sects.

"I think the verdict of posterity will be that the Government has attempted to rule with justice and to improve the condition of the inhabitants.

"Amongst the boons which they have conferred upon the people are cheap education and the liberty of the Press. Very many, though only a small proportion, of the inhabitants have become educated, some more and some less, and of these many have taken to the Press as an occupation.

"The advantages of free and intelligent criticism and discussion of the acts and measures of Government, and of pointing out abuses and failures and suggesting remedies, are apparent and undeniable, and the liberty of the Press is a household word dear to the heart of every Englishman. I am glad to think that a large number of the newspapers in India, English and Vernacular, have carried out these objects and have discharged their duties as fearless critics to the benefit alike of governors and governed. But a free Press is an exotic in India, and indeed in Asia, and, like plants and animals transplanted into new surroundings, is liable to strange developments.

"For many years a portion of the Native Press, and particularly of the Vernacular Press, has devoted itself to pouring forth a continual stream of calumny and abuse of the British Government in India and to teaching its readers that all their misfortunes, poverty and miseries arise from a foreign Government, which draws away their wealth and is callous to their miseries, and from whom they can expect neither justice nor sympathy; and they point to a golden age of prosperity and plenty which preceded the incubus of this unrighteous Government.

"Now it needs no argument to prove that writing of this character, whatever the motives or ultimate objects of the writers may be, circulated daily for years amongst a credulous people, must tend to make them hate the cause of all their woes.

"It is a hopeless task for any Government, especially a foreign one, to endeavour to win or retain the affections of the people by just government and solicitude for their benefit, if the minds of the people are daily poisoned with matter of this kind, written in their own language and by men who know how to appeal to their sympathies, credulity and religious feelings.

"The existence of the evil and the necessity of putting it down seem to be admitted by many, if not all, of the European associations who have sent in memorials or notes on this Bill. Their objections are mainly to the remedies to be applied.

"Some of the apologists of the Native Press minimise the evil, while others appear to claim a right to excite as much ill-feeling as they please against the Government so long as they use no direct incitement to violence.

"But although subject people may acquiesce in a Government which they hate so long as it appears irresistible, yet when the time of trouble comes they cannot be expected to stand by it or support it even if they do not actually join the enemy or break out in insurrections. The 'oderint dum metuant' of the Roman Emperor is not a safe maxim of government at any time, still less for an alien minority ruling hundreds of millions of people.

"It is very true that contentment and good-will can only be produced by just and beneficent government and not by repressive legislation; but legislation can put some check on the writers who seek to poison the minds of the people against their rulers and can give the rulers a fairer chance of having the beneficence of their rule recognized.

"Others say, leave this apparent evil alone and treat it as a vent or escape for gases of discontent arising from below which, if confined, might explode. But to those who have watched it, as I have for thirty years and for twenty years as a member of this Council, it is apparent that this is the work of a small minority who have partaken of the cheap education of our schools and who distil and sell the poisonous product of the ferment in their heads of ill-assimilated and misapplied Western ideas. This opinion is not a hasty one; it is the same as I expressed in this Council in 1878, and as was then expressed in weighty language by the present Advocate-General of Bengal, whose knowledge of the country none can deny and who has never been accused of want of sympathy with its inhabitants. He then said:—

'Having attentively considered these extracts, I am irresistibly led to the conclusion that it is intended by these publications to disseminate disaffection, to excite evil prejudices, to stir up discontent, and to produce mischief of the gravest character: in short, to render the Government, its officers, and Europeans generally, hateful to the people. These are evil purposes which should be repressed with a strong hand and their controversy restrained from all further attempt to administer their subtile poison to the lower orders of the people, to saturate their minds with evil thoughts and to arouse their evil passions.'

"Since then the evil has grown greatly.

"So much for the evil. As to the remedy: there existed in 1878 the section 124A of the Penal Code now sought to be amended, and there were doubts as to its construction, and also it was felt that State trials with all their publicity were an objectionable means of dealing with this evil. The Vernacular Press Act was introduced to check license while leaving liberty. It worked well and without hardship, but was repealed in 1882. Since then the mischief has spread rapidly, and at the time of the Bangobasi prosecution in 1891 the alteration of the section was under the consideration of the Government. But it was decided first to take the opinion of the Courts as to the construction of the existing section, and whether it could reach the evil. The charge of the then Chief Justice of Bengal showed it could do so, and the recent decisions in Bombay and Allahabad and in the Privy Council have, I think, laid down clearly the proposition that under the section as it stands attempts to excite feelings of hatred and hostility towards the Government are punishable, while disapprobation of its acts in the way of criticism goes free.

"This is as it should be, and personally I should not have thought it necessary, had I had any voice in the decision of the matter, to undertake any revision of the section at the present time, knowing the storm of criticism it would provoke. But the Government has thought it its duty, considering the doubts which so long existed and still exist in the minds of many whose opinion is entitled to much respect as to whether the view taken by the Courts is the correct view of the section, to set these doubts at rest, by definitely adopting in the proposed section the main principle of those decisions, that attempts to excite feelings of hatred and hostility against the Government are attempts to excite feelings of disaffection and are punishable as such.

"Practically speaking, this is what is done by the revised section, and certainly it does not go further than the present decisions probably not so far as some of them. This is the proposal which is denounced so strongly as dangerous and reactionary.

"As to the objections taken, I will now only notice some of the principal; the Council will hear enough of the details and legal criticisms upon the various amendments.

"One of the objections taken by some of the European associations is that this section should be restricted to the graver class of offences, and that the lighter ones coming within its scope, as I have described it, should be relegated to the chapter of Defamation, and that defamation of Government should be dealt with summarily, like defamation of individuals, instead of being elevated to the dignity of sedition. This is, I understand, the course alluded to by the Hon'ble Mr. Allan Arthur as being preferable. There is much to be said for this view as a means of summary suppression, but in order to carry it out it would be necessary to provide that some of the defences open in cases of defamation of individuals should not be open to the defamers of the Government; otherwise to an indictment for defaming the Government by publishing the statement 'that the existence of the British Raj was the cause of all India's miseries, that it would be better for the country if it had never existed or should cease to exist,' it could be pleaded that the alleged libel was true and that it was for the public benefit to say so. But no Government can submit such questions to the Courts, nor would a trial of such a question either by a jury or a Magistrate be an edifying spectacle or one that could be allowed in any country.

"This is, I understand, admitted, and so to deal with these cases as defamation alterations of the defamation chapter would be necessary. What the exact alterations would be have not been suggested in any of the notes. It is not to be wondered at that the Government under these circumstances has preferred to take its stand upon the construction of the existing section 124A given by the Courts, in place of taking this new departure, however attractive. That it could be done by alterations in the defamation chapter I quite admit, and also if done it would probably work the desired result, but that it would in any way disarm Native objections I more than doubt.

"Next, it is said that we are going back to the law of seditious libel in England as it stood in 1792 and previously, and that prosecutions of this sort are not of recent years ever instituted in England. I shall leave it to the Legal Member of Council, who has more leisure than I have for such purposes, to deal with the question whether there has been any, and what, change in the English law since 1792. But I wish to point out to the Council that there are other reasons than change of law in England for the result. These are the system of party Government and the fact that the power has passed into the hands of the people, and the Government has become to a great extent a democracy.

"Under the system of party Government and party newspapers, the object of many partizans is to villify the party in power by every possible means, fair or unfair, and so excite such feelings of hatred and contempt for them in the minds of the people as to induce them to turn them out by their votes at the next General Election. But this is not hatred of the Government as by law established in England. The party exciting it hope to get into office themselves and so supply from among their members the Cabinet Ministers for the time being.

"Next, in a democracy, as the power is in the hands of the people, they can practically do what they like by the votes of the majority, and so exciting hatred and contempt against Her Majesty's Ministers has no tendency to any political trouble unless it is attended by exhortations to turn them out by force instead of by votes, or to resist the executive. Thus the evil which exists in India cannot easily exist in a democracy.

"When the Native Press in India complain that they are not allowed by this section to treat the British Government as by law established in India in the same manner as the Opposition Press in England treats the Ministers in office, I can only answer that the conditions are so utterly dissimilar that the complaint is absurd. How a democracy in which the power would be in the hands of the lowest classes who would have power to tax them out of their lands would suit the great landholders like my friend the Maharaja of Durbhanga I need not pause to enquire, as the question is not within the pale of practical politics; but, if ever that day comes, the newspapers will no doubt have all the license they claim. But I doubt if that will be much consolation to the landholder.

"Next, it is said the words are vague and want definition. To this I answer that both the Law Commission and Sir Fitzjames Stephen refused to define disaffection. The latter says, you cannot define 'insult', but you know the difference between the familiarity of friendship and the familiarity of insult though it cannot be defined. So the Courts of Equity would not define fraud, lest fraudulent people should commit frauds outside the definition.

"Thus, when the Native papers say, let us know exactly what we are forbidden to say and we will keep within the exact words of the prohibition, the answer is in plain English and according to the English common law: 'you may not attempt to excite the people to hate or despise the Government by law established; whether what you wrote is such an attempt the tribunal which tries you must decide'; and further it is added that disapprobation of the measures or acts of Government is a different thing from hatred of the Government, just as we may disapprove of many of the actions of our friends without hating them or even ceasing to. love them. As the Hon'ble Legal Member has said, if the words of sections are construed without some common-sense, few of us could escape some section of the Penal Code in our daily lives—notably the defamation section, which apparently is capable of being construed so as to include all depreciatory remarks upon the intellectual capacities of our neighbours and acquaintances.

"As to section 153A, I will reserve my remarks on it, as I have an amendment to move. I will only say that, if such a provision was part of the common law of England, it is much more necessary in a country like India with its discordant elements and hostile races and religions. The power to prosecute is placed in the hands of Government to prevent its being abused by private prosecutors and to ensure its being put in force only for the purpose of preserving public tranquillity.

"Next, I come to section 505. The evil here is the dissemination of statements or rumours which are likely to lead to mutiny or violence.

"The power to prosecute is again placed in the hands of Government for the public safety. That some such power should exist in a more workable form than the old section is, I think, conceded. Some of the objections have been met, and some it will be more convenient to consider when we come to the proposed amendments. I will only notice one.

"It is said 'the time has not come to prohibit the telling of the truth in India.' There is no denying the humour of this comment.

"But if the learned authors of it had met a man who had found out that by an accident there was something wrong with the grease for the sepoys' cartridges and who was going to take that information into the sepoy lines with the probable result of an immediate mutiny in which my learned friends, their wives and their children would be slaughtered, I much fear they would have laid violent hands on that man in preference to dying in defence of the principle so neatly enunciated. In such cases—salus republicæ, suprema lex.

"The alarm created by the proposals of Government seems to spring from a very slender basis so far as this Bill is concerned, and I confidently trust that if this Bill becomes law all reasonable men will find themselves still in possession of all the liberty of speech and writing which they could reasonably desire.

"If I thought that the Bill would make free discussion of measures and petitions for the redress of grievances penal and leave it to the generosity or discretion of Government to prosecute or not, I certainly should not vote for it. It is with very great regret that I find myself in this matter holding a view opposed to that of the Calcutta Bar, of which I am a member, and which contains so many for whose opinion I entertain the most sincere respect, notably the learned Advocate General. But when dealing with matters of political gravity I have the responsibility on my own shoulders and cannot shift it. Had it been possible, I would gladly have done so."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU said:—"In summing up the discussion on the 21st December last, Your Lordship said that in interposing to prevent sedition you were only acting on behalf of the public, whose interests suffer if the passions of the ignorant are excited and the peace of the country is imperiled. In thus placing the two conditional clauses in immediate juxtaposition, you have but stated the law as laid down by the most eminent Judges of England; for you have recognised that the exciting of the passions is the cause—the proximate cause as I take it as distinguished from remote antecedent events—and the imperilling of the peace as the effect, i.e., the immediate effect as distinguished from what might be the composite result of a series of intermediate occurrences and acts of other responsible persons. Herein lies the whole distinction, if the law is to remain intelligible. Such is not only the law laid down by eminent Judges, but it is, in reality, the law as laid down for India by the Legislature as expounded through its accredited spokesman Sir James Stephen, then Mr. Stephen, the greatest criminal lawyer of Great Britain by universal and even judicial admission, and an uncompromising foe of tradition and authority merely as such. Those words of Mr. Stephen have been already quoted too often to be unfamiliar at the present day. I must nevertheless quote them from my place here.

"In one part of his speech in proposing the section 124A now in the Penal Code he said:—

'So long as a writer or speaker neither directly nor indirectly suggested or intended to produce the use of force, he did not fall within this section.'

"In another part of his speech he further elaborated his view, which by the way was the view of the Legislature, as follows :—

'Let it be shown that the matter complained of was not consistent with a disposition to obey the law; let it be shown that it was consistent only with a disposition to resist the law by force, and it did fall under this section. Otherwise not.'

"Nothing—let me repeat—can be plainer from these lucid statements than this, viz., that where the excitement of the passions is the proximate cause, producing or capable of producing the use of force, and it imperilled the peace of the country as a natural and proximate effect, the offence is committed. Nothing in any degree short of it—however near to it—is an offence. This being precisely what Your Lordship's words implicitly involve, no right-minded man can have anything to say against Your Lordship's Government proceeding to examine the section 124A with that view of the law and in order to re-word it in the declared spirit, which is at once unselfish and humane. That an occasion for examining the true meaning of the section has arrived is, to my mind, a matter for congratulation, and I shall welcome it as a godsend, if this opportunity is taken to state or rather re-state the law, so as to clearly bring it—if necessary to bring it back—within the declared intentions of the Legislature which introduced the section, and so as to do away with subtleties and technicalities which stand in the way of that true intention being unerringly given effect to. It would be, I venture to think, to mis-use the opportunity and to drift into slippery ground to go beyond the firm and intelligible position defined by Sir James Stephen so carefully and with so full a grasp of both law and the claims of perspicuity and precision. That the wording now proposed goes vastly beyond that intention and perilously enlarges the scope of the law of sedition is my honest conviction; and I beg to be excused for saying so; for I think that I have no business to be here if I flinch from avowing my convictions. I shall make good my said conviction in detail when later on I shall come to move my amendments.

"In going on with my further remarks at this stage I shall assume that not only has the scope of the offence of sedition been enlarged, but that it is the explicit intention of the Government to do so. It has been pleaded that, when so enlarged, the Indian law will be the same as English law. Whether such an enlargement is or is not an adoption of the English law is, in a sense, a purely academical discussion; for, if any exigencies of the present day necessitate the extension, it must take place, be it English law or not, provided, of course, it is intrinsically unobjectionable and free from obscurity. The fact of its being English law or not has only a subordinate use, i e., by supplying a link in the chain of argument for or against the change. But, after all, the change must either stand or fall, according as there are or are not the necessary conditions precedent for it and according as it is sound and intelligible or otherwise.

"Coming back again to the position that the present legislation has been embarked on in the interests of society and of the peace of the country, the question naturally arises, have there been or are there any symptoms of a danger in this direction? I may at once declare that, if there were any ground for apprehending any such danger, I should be the foremost to support any measure that might fitly answer. Myself and those of my countrymen who have spoken out against this measure and whose well-being I should do my best to safeguard have far too substantial interests at stake for me or for them to stand up for a mere sentiment or for what may be calculated to bring them or me harm and danger. We must abdicate our common-sense before doing such a suicidal thing. Fully alive therefore to those substantial interests and with my eyes and ears wide open, I feel bound to declare that there is no danger to fear—none to need this widening of the section into shadowy regions of speculation as I view it. I have no doubt that Your Lordship had utilised the resources at your command before undertaking this legislation. But, without disparagement, I venture to submit that the information available to Government must be, at least, second-hand, and that, for that reason alone, if for no other, it can at best amount to no more than a presumption and supply a sort of working hypothesis to initiate action upon, but liable to be rebutted by the actual experience and declarations of those whose protection is aimed at and of those who, while entitled to share that protection, possess opportunities at first hand to ascertain and voice the exact state of things and to aver whether the proposed alteration of the law will prove beneficial or prejudicial to public interests. I for one claim to possess that opportunity.

"To begin with, there is a great meaning in the absence of that ubiquitous class of persons who used invariably to bestir themselves under the notion that thereby they would please the Government of the day and make a parade of divergence from the public in pursuit of selfish ends of their own: for the fact shows that even such self-seeking spirits have recognised the peril and quailed before it. There is equal meaning in the fact that the Native officials who were competent to give an opinion, and whom the Government has considered to be worthy of being consulted, have all, with one voice, counselled against this measure This is not all. The entire non-official European and Eurasian community have, through their mouthpieces, spoken against the measure in unqualified terms; and it is no wonder. With the culture and intelligence they possess, with the great stake they have in the maintenance of the right of manly and frank discussion of public questions to correct errors, to which a bureaucratic system of Government is too prone,—let me add, unwittingly—and with the sense of fairness that should belong to them in taking an unselfish interest in public affairs—they could not be so far hoodwinked or beguiled as to be victims of any deceptive theory that in this respect there could be one law for them and another law for their Indian fellow-subjects; for they, of all men, are sure to recollect that Governments had not hesitated to prosecute even exalted persons, as for an instance Sir Francis Burdett, and even Members of Parliament—a thing as possible here as elsewhere any day, inasmuch as sedition is generally viewed, and rightly viewed, as a political offence, differing both in kind and degree from crimes, involving moral turpitude and grovelling selfishness.

"Another body, justly reputed to be the most staid and (if anything) too cautious, viz., the historic British Indian Association, has come to the front with its unequivocal disapproval of the measure, notwithstanding that the members of that body have in this country the very greatest interest, which would be the very first to be jeopardised in case there was any real sedition here. Perhaps it may even be said with truth that it is because they have all that weighty interest and because that interest will suffer serious damage if this Bill suppresses the public voice (as its tendency is sincerely believed to be) they have stepped forward, seeing (few can see better than they) that the ogre of sedition is nowhere to be found. Not content with the expression of their own opinion, that influential body called a conference of nearly all the men of light and leading in this city to examine the measure from all standpoints and in all its bearings on the public weal. That conference, too, pronounced unfavourably on this measure. Having been shown the courtesy of being invited to that conference, I was a personal witness to the deep earnestness and the unfeigned fear, which pervaded, of the perilous character of this measure. That conference—be it noted—was presided over by one who holds the first place not only in the people's but in the Government's esteem, unless I am sadly mistaken, and it was composed of scores of persons, each of whom, in the language of Emerson, may count for a million and who possess, in the aggregate, more substantial stake in the way of property and so forth in this country than many of those who may view this measure with complacency. Similarly, other public bodies and the public of Bombay, Madras, Calcutta and other places in open meeting assembled recorded their objection to this measure. On the top of all these exponents of the lay public, the Bar of Calcutta, which is the foremost of its kind in all India, has deprecated this Bill, and the adverse verdict of all other professional bodies is quite in accord with that of the local Bar. Then, again, the leading public organs, the Indian all over the country and all the Anglo-Indian at the spot where the Legislature entitled to pass the Bill is sitting, have condemned it. It will be idle to deny to these organs the character of being the mouthpiece of some section or other of the public. Now, taking all this into account, I shall not be speaking out my mind in perfect frankness if I do not declare that two things are most discernible. First, there is no sedition, and therefore there is no need for any repressive measures. Secondly, the present Bill, while it has proved a standing and demoralising menace to frank and candid discussion of public interests, will itself become, if passed into law, a standing and irritating grievance, as it must amount to a declaration that the whole of the people in this land, indigenous, domiciled and sojourning, are less than dust in the Government balance. In saying this I do not lose sight of the fact that all the representations that have reached us have come to us only from the English-knowing classes, and that none has been received directly from the masses, who are usually set down to be ignorant, and between whom and their educated brethren some sort of antipathy, or at any rate a want of sympathy, is fancied to exist. But I do not also forget that, by not causing the translation and publication of this Bill and the reasons for it, so as to bring them home to the masses, Your Lordship has virtually recognised the English-speaking classes as fairly and fully representing and reflecting the mind of the entire people in this matter. Of one thing at least I feel absolutely sure, that Your Lordship at any rate will not brush aside all the several bodies above referred to as constituting 'the small number of individuals' whom you spoke of as 'out of touch with the sentiments which animate their fellows.'

"I think what is thus a necessary inference from the course adopted by Your Lordship is likewise a fact. One may well ask—and ask in all confidence and fearlessness—if one and all of the bodies that have been loud in the protest are to be pushed aside as unfit to represent those that are called 'the ignorant,' who else are fit and on what credentials? In my humble judgment, there is none such. If there should be any doubt about what would be the attitude of 'the ignorant,' I would venture to make a suggestion and be quite prepared to take all the consequences of its being accepted and acted upon. My suggestion is: let the Bill and the opinions of the members of the Select Committee be translated into the Vernacular languages and brought home to the so-called ignorant. Let a reasonable time be granted to admit of their conveying to us an expression of their ideas on the subject. If at the end of the prescribed period, and as a result of their realising the possibilities and bearings of this legislation on their abiding interests and well-being, the Bill should receive their hearty approbation, by all means let us pass it: but let us not act on any à priori theory that they would approve of it or that they know not their own interests or that the several bodies who have already spoken out are not fit to be accepted as their exponents. In the meantime, and in the absence of any such evidence to the contrary, I must hold that it has been conclusively shown to us that the measure runs counter to all sound and weighty opinion in the country, and that its necessity is negatived and its uncertainties and dangers have been laid bare by the very public for the protection of whose interests and safety, in Your Lordship's words, this measure has been brought forward. Where things have been reduced to this predicament, the course of wisdom open to the Government was set forth in the most unequivocal terms within the last two years. Having to considerably modify the Bills which dealt with juries and legal practitioners, the late Law Member, presumably with Your Lordship's approval as the Head of the Government, said as follows:—

'I think one of the great advantages of the system of legislation which prevails in this country is that we are not obliged, as some other Governments of which we know something practically are, to stick to every proposal which we make, right or wrong, from an instinct of self-preservation; but that we have the opportunity, and freely use it, of discovering, after we have put our proposals into the form that primâ facie recommends itself to ourselves, what the opinions of persons who are capable of giving advice in the matter from the outside are, and are able and willing to accept the advice we receive from outside persons and bodies so far as it commends itself to our judgment. I know it will be said—I know it has been said—that that is a weak thing; that having made up your mind you ought to stick to it, right or wrong. I confess that my opinion (and I am glad to feel that it is the opinion of my colleagues in the Government of India) is very contrary, and that obstinacy of the kind described is a sign of weakness, not of strength, and that it is a proof of strength after having asked for opinions to be able to accept them so far as they seem to be well-founded.'

"I trust—and I hope I do not trust in vain—that the measure now before us may be dealt with on the principles pointed out in the above passage. Dealing with this measure on those declared principles, I cannot help saying that the measure, if it is to be persisted in, should be modified in accordance with the constructive suggestions that have reached us, notably the excellently-matured recommendations of the Defence Association, re-echoed or concurred in by almost every one else who chose to exercise his mind on the subject. Prompted by my anxiety to describe this measure as it at present stands in the most fitting terms, I cannot do better than borrow Your Lordship's well-chosen words that 'I am most strongly of opinion that an Act of this nature is obnoxious in principle, uncertain in operation and not necessary under present circumstances'—words which seem to be quite as fit for this measure as for the now defunct Vernacular Press Act to which Your Lordship applied them.

"This is all I meant to say before I entered the Council. But since then I have heard some remarks made by some of the speakers before me, and they ought not to be passed over in silence. Many of those observations will have to be dealt with in connection with the amendments I shall beg to submit later, but I wish just now to refer to those points on which I shall not have any other opportunity to have my say. The Hon'ble Mover said that the fact to be borne in mind is that the Government is a responsible Government, and that its critics were irresponsible critics. Yes, nobody denies that the Government is acting under a sense of responsibility, but I am very sorry indeed to notice that the Hon'ble Member has been characterising the critics of this measure as irresponsible critics. If these whose criticisms have been before us are not responsible for conducting the Government, they are responsible for aiding the Government in the maintenance of the peace; they are responsible for their own safety; they are responsible for their own property, to their own children, to their own kith and kin. To put down and describe all these people as irresponsible is to do what to my mind is most improper. Government is undoubtedly responsible, but the people are also responsible for looking at every question the Government deals with, with an eye not only to the responsibility of those conducting the Government, but also with reference to the fact that measures of this kind have a direct bearing upon the welfare of the people, their lives, their liberties and interests.

"Again, I have heard frequent appeals to common-sense as an evident safeguard, neutralising the dreaded results of this measure. But I must suppose that the many hundreds of men who have spoken against the Bill do possess that common-sense as well, and (to put it mildly) it is a grievous impropriety to say that common-sense is the monopoly of the handful of us and must outweigh the accumulated common-sense of them all. They are all cultured men, and quite as cultured as ourselves. The Hon'ble Mover would have done well if he had not indulged in the pretension that we, the handful, are incomparably superior to them all, so numerous.

"I must likewise take serious exception to the Hon'ble Mover's remark that the opinions received by us are mainly from the presidency-towns and must be discounted on that account. Whose fault is it that the masses have not directly expressed themselves? They have been given no opportunity. Anticipating this sort of talk, I have thrown out a challenge. I have asked that the Bill and its Objects and Reasons be translated and published with the dissents that have been recorded by those who claim to reflect their views. Why not accept that challenge and refute the objectors by the event? Let the Hon'ble Mover accept that challenge and act upon it and take the consequences as I have said I am prepared to do. To talk in the style in which the Hon'ble Member has done, as if the educated section is a section as isolated from their fellow-men as the alien ruling classes, is a grievous mistake, to say the least of it. It must be patent, on the slightest knowledge of the true situation, that almost every resident in the presidency-town has a large circle of relations and friends in the mufassal and meets and converses with them almost every week, in their friendly gatherings, in their dinners and in their feasts, during the numerous auspicious and inauspicious ceremonies and religious rites which are scattered almost over every month through every year. To speak without due regard for these obvious facilities and opportunities for repeated intercourse between those in the presidency-towns and the rest of the provinces and for interchanges of ideas between them, argues a regrettable want of grasp of the actual conditions here. I deeply deplore that gentlemen, purporting to speak for the Government, should commit themselves to faulty and unfounded statements such as the one I am compelled to animadvert upon.

"The Hon'ble Mover has facetiously described what he proscribes by having recourse to a simile. I thank him for it, as it also exactly depicts the injury that the public have a right mainly to complain of. He says that there is no objection for a man to smoke a cigar on the wide maidan, but that no person will be permitted to do so in a powder magazine. I join issue with him there. In the first place, I ask what right has he to deny to any one the right to smoke, even in a powder magazine? Any one that does so takes the risk of doing so. It is his lookout. So long as he takes care not to throw away the stump carelessly in the powder magazine and controls the sparks from escaping, what does it matter? Why should he lose his right? In the second place, let us remember how wide the Hon'ble Mover's powder magazine is. It is, according to him, as wide as the whole country; the bulk of the population who are said to be ignorant, credulous and highly impressionable constitute his inflammable material. One may well ask then, where is that 'maidan' to smoke in? Evidently there is no space left in the country for it to be represented. At any rate no haunts of men can answer to it. The result then is this. Public speakers and public writers are gravely told to shun the haunts of men and the people at large and publish their utterances where there will be none to hear or read or none will care to hear or read. Is this not, in plain and honest English, a virtual denial of the right, by piling up imaginary fears and fancying powder magazines where none exist?"

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES said:—"My Lord, I was a member of the Select Committee upon this Bill, though unfortunately I arrived only in time for its last sitting, when the amendments were practically complete. And since the receipt of the amendments I have had no time to communicate with the Local Government which I represent on this Council, though at least some of the crimes which led to the introduction of this Bill occurred in my presidency. But I think I can say with confidence that the Bombay Government would strongly support this Bill, even though it has been altered. Speaking for myself, I feel, like Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu, that I have no business to be here if I do not express my convictions, though my convictions differ a good deal from my hon'ble friend's, especially as regards smoking in powder-magazines. I desire to express just the least feeling of regret that so much has been made of the safeguards provided by the Bill for persons treading on the perilous edge of crime, and that one can detect the least little feeling of apology for some of the clauses, which seems quite unnecessary.

"My Lord, Earl Canning contemplated this Council meeting at places outside of Calcutta, and I could have wished we had met at Patna, Azamgarh, Peshawar, Hyderabad in Sind, Poona or the Moplah Country. I believe we should not have seen one recommendation of the Select Committee, or at least that it would have been modified. Offences under clause 5 should, it is suggested, only be prosecuted 'under the authority of the Government.' I agree that private prosecution should not be allowed, but I would add to the words 'of the Government' the words 'or of the District Magistrate.' This Council should, I submit, recollect that the District Magistrate is the keystone of the fabric of our government. Compared with him, Governors and Councils are merely ornamental excrescences. And the tampering with his position and influence, as our Select Committee has suggested, in its recommendation that he should not take action under clause 5, without a prior reference to the local Secretariat, is, I think I may say without much exaggeration, a blow struck at the fabric of our administration. I admit that cases of actual sedition are sufficiently serious to justify a reference to Government for orders, but clause 5 comes under another chapter, that relating to public tranquillity, which is essentially one for District Magistrates and not for the Secretariats to administer. District Magistrates, of course, remain in touch with the Government and take their orders on matters of public policy from Government, but the responsibility for action should rest, sole and undivided, on the Magistrate. I shall be told, perhaps, that we have young Magistrates, weak Magistrates and incapable Magistrates. If so, the remedy is simple. Turn them out, as the Bombay Government did the other day to one who, I am told (for I have not seen the papers myself), excused himself for not preventing or dispersing a bloody riot at his door because he was opening his morning's post. But this was surely an exceptional case. The Civil Service of India has been made frequently the theme of admiration by public speakers, to an extent that really makes one blush sometimes. I for one don't claim for us that we are all plaster saints. We are simply honest, hard-working officials, doing our work to the best of our power, and I doubt if any one will have the temerity to say that the present race of District Magistrates are less capable of exercising the same powers and duties as their predecessors, even though—as, indeed, a Lieutenant-Governor once told me himself—owing to the want of backing which they meet with now-a-days sometimes in the performance of their very difficult and responsible duties, a race of young District Magistrates is growing up that looks to Codes and law treatises rather than to the exercise of that personal influence which, far more than the laws you pass, and which not over one in a hundred of the people ever heard of, maintains your power in India. Our District Magistrates, taken as a whole, are a body of plain common-sense fair-minded men, Gallios as regards contending sects, who would infinitely prefer to keep their districts quiet without having recourse to prosecutions or other severe measures. Still they must now-a-days have legal sanction for all their acts. Your power to govern India, I repeat, rests on the capacity of your District Magistrates. It is essential that if by their personal influence they cannot, when agitators and mischief-makers are abroad, keep people from flying at one another's throats—and I would like the Council to reflect that for one case of actual rioting that comes to the notice of Government there are hundreds where the personal influence of the Magistrate has nipped disturbances in the bud, kept the peace, and Government has never heard a word about it—if, I say, the Magistrate cannot keep the peace without it, he must have power to strike, on his own responsibility, promptly and quickly. For, in the words of the present Prime Minister, the commencement of disturbances in India must be put down with an unfaltering hand. Even in England the Magistracy, and not the Home Office, are responsible for keeping the peace, as Sir William Harcourt told the House of Commons during the colliery riots in Derbyshire, I think. With increasing facilities for inter-communication between towns and districts, with developing education, with an uncontrolled and, in some cases, a distinctly seditious Vernacular Press, every day the risk becomes greater and the task of keeping the peace more difficult, and you must strengthen and not weaken your laws and your executive. Of late years we have seen people over large areas in India in a state of unrest, and the old Adam in them is strong and not to be appeased and controlled by platitudes such as fill the papers of objections to this Bill which have been placed before us. As, therefore, the reign of law advances and arbitrary power disappears, so must the legitimate personal influence of the District Magistrate be maintained and increased, and he must not be encouraged to shirk his responsibility by referring for orders to the Secretariat. To put it shortly, when trouble is in the air, and the leaders will not listen to reason and promote strife instead of allaying it, the Magistrate must have power promptly to lock them up.

"While the provisions of the Bill will be found no doubt a most valuable addition to the law, yet in two more instances alterations have been made which are, I fear, open to criticism. For instance, the punishment of imprisonment laid down by clause 124A, which was extended to ten years, has been put back to three, with the object of drawing a broad line between serious and merely contemptible offences. I concurred in the reason and in the alteration, but I suggest that a rider of some kind is necessary. Who is to decide whether a particular case of sedition is serious or contemptible? The Courts? The Courts cannot take cognizance of facts outside those elicited on the trial. How is a Judge to know the inner workings of the local Native society, how honeycombed it is, or otherwise, with seditious poison, whether a severe example is needed, and whether transportation or three months' imprisonment should suffice? And I would hope that a device may yet be found of fixing a minimum of punishment when Government declares a case of sedition serious.

"The next alteration, I regret, is that in the exception to clause 505, for the salvation of newspapers and public speakers, if an editor or a speaker at a public meeting publishes a false report, he is to be free if he can give plausible reasons for saying he believed it and that he had no intention to cause mutiny or disturbance. Such a loophole, I submit, might well have been left closed. I venture to regret that in this matter the views of Sir Antony MacDonnell, Sir Frederick Fryer, Sir Mackworth Young, Mr. Justice Strachey, and last, but not least (if I understand his letter aright), His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, have been set on one side. If it is not too late, I should like to see following the word 'intent' in the excepton 'and without such likelihood as aforesaid.' Every one setting on foot rumours likely to cause the offences enumerated in clause 505 should learn that he does so at his peril, be they true or be they false. There is yet enough common-sense and feeling of justice left in the Government and their officers not to prosecute in cases of mere accident, or oversight, or ignorance. I cannot but attribute this alteration to the enervating ultra-legal air of Calcutta. We are of course always in a situation of difficulty when legislation of the kind is being undertaken. As pointed out, though in different words, by the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers, we need only milk-and-water legislation for Bengal—at least for a great part of it. We want strong meat for the Punjab, Sind, the Mahratta Brahmin-ridden Dekkhan, and for the North-Western Provnices. It is easy for gentlemen sitting in comfortable chairs here or in Bar libraries or Association rooms to write philosophic treatises on the liberty of the subject or on freedom of discussion. They have not known, as I have done for a considerable time, the feeling of anxiety when the two most important sections of the Native community in a large town were embittered against one another, and when the slightest false move on the part of the Magistrate, the least paltering on his part with any overt act or word tending to exacerbate the situation, might have brought on a terrible collision. For the sake of the people themselves, as Mr. LaTouche has said, the hands of the Magistracy must be strengthened and the Government, as by law established, must have power to check and punish those malicious scoundrels who make mischief between classes and races, and sow feelings of disloyalty towards the Government which has done so much for them. While, therefore, I welcome the Bill, I for one would not have been sorry had it been stronger."

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS said:—"My Lord, I do not propose to discuss those provisions of this Bill which deal with extra-territorial offences. They appear to be necessary, and will, I presume, be accepted by this Council. But those portions which are intended to amend the law of sedition have naturally led to much discussion—indeed are the outcome of much discussion; and I think that I ought not to give a silent vote upon the proposal to take them into consideration.

"All parties, my Lord, appear to be agreed in one respect, if only in this one. They hold that the law relating to sedition and cognate matters should be made as plain and simple as possible. There are some who would attain this simplicity by removing the whole subject from the Statute-book. 'The law of sedition' (I have read) 'is an anachronism.' I fear that the time is not ripe for the adoption of this course! There are others who think that the wiser plan would be to be content with the law as it now stands, since it has been made clear by the interpretations of the highest Courts. There is much to be said in favour of this opinion. The third way is to endeavour to take advantage of the recent interpretations, and to increase their authority and add to their definiteness by casting them in the more concise form of substantive law. This last method has this advantage, that the opportunity may be taken to supply defects which the judicial decisions could not touch because they were irrelevant to the cases before the Courts. And I see that there is a considerable weight of judicial opinion in favour of legislation. Mr. Justice Strachey, notwithstanding (or perhaps because of) the infinite pains which he took to examine and explain the existing law, has expressed himself very decidedly on this point. I think, however, that I should be wasting the time of the Council if I were to discuss this matter further. We are not now in the position of having to decide whether there should or should not be legislation. The Bill has been introduced, and cannot possibly be abandoned. All that we can do is to see whether the Bill, as it now stands before the Council, is sufficient to safeguard the interests of the public while not likely to endanger the safety of any individual who may honestly discuss political affairs.

"The Select Committee, with the approval of the Government, have very carefully reconsidered the Bill by the light of numerous criticisms, some of them of great weight. Several important modifications have been the result; all of these appear to be improvements in either substance or language.

"It was strongly urged upon us that the term 'Government' should be struck out, and 'Government as by law established' substituted. This has been done.

"The critics thought that the new offence of setting class against class was in its nature akin rather to offences against public tranquillity than to sedition. We accepted the suggestion and drafted a new section. At the same time, the maximum punishment was reduced to two years' imprisonment. In fixing this period regard was had to a new clause in the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Bill, which has been before the public for some time. This clause provides that a person offending for the first time may, instead of being sentenced, be called upon to give security, either with or without sureties, to appear and receive judgment when required.

"The term 'ill-will' in clause 124A was strongly objected to as being too vague. The Select Committee have removed it.

"Fault was found with the original draft in that the maximum term of imprisonment under this clause had been raised from three years to ten. This change had not been made without reason, but the Committee restored the original term.

"The explanations have been enlarged and made fuller.

"Further, the exception to clause 505 has been much modified with the object of removing the misgivings which had been expressed as to the probable working of the clause.

"All these changes show sufficiently clearly how ready the Government and the Select Committee have been to consider and accept criticisms not inconsistent with the objects and principles of the Bill. It is disappointing to find how little importance is now attached by the less candid of the critics to the modifications which, before they were accepted, were pressed with so much urgency.

"On one point of great importance the majority of the Select Committee could not give way. They did not think it right that the operation of clause 124A should be restricted to such direct attacks on the Government as constitute an excitement to disaffection. In their judgment, it is only less injurious to the public welfare to permit the dissemination of writings or the utterance of speeches the object and tendency of which must be to bring Her Majesty and the Government established by law into hatred and contempt.

"I will not anticipate the amendments of which notice has been given, but I trust that the Bill, with its main principles unaffected, will be passed by the Council. Such a law will, I am persuaded, be perfectly compatible with the existence of a free and strong Press, at once a patriotic leader of public opinion and a respected coadjutor of the Government.

"I say this with the more boldness because my desire for a sound and efficient Native Press has long been known, and the latest expression of it has received the public approval of Your Excellency.

"I think that the safeguards against possible abuses are as strong as they well can be. Every conviction and sentence will run the gauntlet of appeal and revision. Though the Government can mitigate or remit punishments, it is powerless to inflict them; in this respect the influence of the Courts is paramount. No prosecution under section 124A can now lie without the sanction of Government, and in the amended Criminal Procedure Code presented this day it will be found that due provision of the same kind is proposed. Attempts are (it is true) being made to minimize the effect of this provision. The Hon'ble Member (Mr. Ananda Charlu) in his minute of dissent says that in the case of clauses 153A and 505 the value of the guarantee 'will mostly depend on the strength with which the case is urged by the District Officer;' he fears that, in the face of a strong representation by such an official, 'the Government would, naturally and perhaps not improperly, hesitate to take upon itself the responsibility of withholding sanction.' I venture, in concurrence with the Hon'ble Mr. Nicholson, to think that this apprehension has no foundation whatever, either in experience or in probability. The Government will never make its sanction depend on the urgency of any subordinate officer.

"It is true enough that in some matters the Government may have to depend on a local officer for the facts, and may possibly be misled by him: but the present case is obviously not one of these, for the words on which the prosecution would be based must be before the Government. The responsibility of the Government will be direct and substantial.

"The Hon'ble Member, however, goes on to admit that 'the mischief of these sections lies not so much in the natural results which will follow, as in the unnatural and exaggerated dread they would undesirably inspire in most cases.' I feel sure, my Lord, that the Hon'ble Member and others who, like him, enjoy the confidence of important sections of their fellow countrymen, will in the interests of those whom they represent, point out to them how 'undesirable' this factitious and 'exaggerated dread' is, and instruct them to turn their minds to those 'natural results' which the Hon'ble Member himself admits to be comparatively free from mischief, and which we hope will be highly beneficial.

"The latest contribution to the controversy on the proposed legislation is a letter bearing the signature of the junior member of the Calcutta Bar, and purporting to come from that body. From this paper we learn that, in the opinion of its learned authors, clause 124A as drafted will, without doubt, render liable to transportation for life a writer whose own loyalty, and the absence of any wish or intention on whose part to tamper with the loyalty or true allegiance of others, are indisputable. The result of this Bill (we are told), if passed into law, will make it penal amongst other things—

(1) effectively to criticise the policy of the Government with reference, for example, to the present war beyond the frontier;

(2) effectively to oppose and to give true utterance to the feelings of the people, or a section of the people, against a proposed tax that may be considered oppressive;

(3) to present a petition for the redress of serious grievances, showing the existence of such grievance hitherto unredressed.

"I will not stop, my Lord, to enquire what meaning is to be attached to the word 'effectively' in the above extract. I will merely say that I have done my best, as a layman, to consider the extract with the draft clause, and really cannot find that in order to fairly and reasonably criticise the frontier war, to propose fair and reasonable arguments against unpopular taxation, or to prepare a petition for the redress of grievances, it is necessary for the critic or the opponent or the petitioner (as the case may be) to 'bring or attempt to bring into hatred or contempt, or excite or attempt to excite disaffection towards, Her Majesty or the Government established by law in British India.'

"The majority of the Judges who have recorded their opinions accepted the clause even as it originally stood.

"It has been conclusively shown by the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill, with the assent of Sir Griffith Evans, that as it now stands it does not go beyond the interpretations given by the Courts to the existing law. Yet we see politicians proclaiming that they have been 'gagged and muzzled' with as much energy and volubility as if the judgments had never been given!

"And so, my Lord, I believe it will be when this Bill has passed into law."

The Hon'ble BABU JOY GOBIND LAW said:—"My Lord, there does not appear to me that there is any sufficient reason for the changes that are proposed to be made in the existing law. Whatever difficulties may have formerly existed in the interpretation of the present sedition law have been cleared up by the decisions of some of the highest Courts. If, my Lord, it is intended to catch the small fry of ignorant and irresponsible writers whose productions so often betray their ignorance, it is not worth the trouble, for no sensible man believes in such writings and the writers may well be left to 'stew in their own juice'. I think a great deal too much stress has been laid upon such writings. But, my Lord, no Government is infallible, and situated as is the Government of India in respect of a heterogeneous population, to which it is alien, and whose inner thoughts and sentiments are but imperfectly understood, I say that it is extremely desirable, nay essential, for the good government of the country that it should have as many sources of information open to it as possible, irrespective of official sources. If the Bill is passed in its entirety, these sources will, it is apprehended, be no longer available to the same extent, and what would be left may be something colourless and unreal, something manufactured to order to suit the new restrictions in the law. Therefore, my Lord, it does appear to me that a policy of restrictions such as are proposed in the Bill is not one that is best calculated to secure the ends of good government and the contentment of the people."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH said:—"I have listened with great attention and interest to the most able and exhaustive speech just delivered by the Hon'ble the Legal Member. I notice a chorus of felicitation has proceeded here, in respect of the Bill, from some of the Hon'ble Members who are responsible for giving a sound advice to Your Excellency's Government.

"Before I proceed to offer a few general observations in connection with the proposed amendments in the law of sedition, I feel, I am bound, both as a citizen, and as one associated with this Council, to express my deep sense of thankfulness to the Government of India for its wise decision not to re-enact any Press law on the lines of the Act of 1878, which, I think, was certainly a blot upon the Indian Statute-book, and another instance of which, I trust, will never recur again even in a different shape. I must also say that I heard with great satisfaction the assurance announced by Your Excellency and the Hon'ble the Legal Member, at the sitting of this Council held on the 21st December last, that it was not the intention of the Government of India to check a free expression of opinion or to restrict in any way the exercise of the freedom of speech within proper and legitimate bounds.

"The measure having now reached rather an advanced stage, it would, I am afraid, serve no practical purpose if I were to say that it came upon us somewhat abruptly. Indeed, we were taken by surprise, as we had no previous notice of the proposed amendments.

"When I submitted a short note on the subject towards the end of December last, I purposely refrained from offering any comments upon the necessity or policy that has dictated the repeal of section 124A, with certain other alterations. It strikes me that the Government of India feels itself justified in forcing its hands into the matter, in consequence of what unfortunately took place some time ago. It is, I presume, with the object of making the law effective that it has been deemed expedient to introduce an additional element of rigour into section 124A, to create a new offence in the form of the amended section 153A, and to re-cast section 505.

"As if these alterations were not enough, certain other changes have been made simultaneously in the Criminal Procedure Code as well, to which I think I cannot refer here in detail with propriety. Regard being had to the grave apprehension and alarm felt in the mind of the general public in consequence of the State trials we had had recently, if any alteration was required to be made in the existing law, it was, I venture to submit, necessary in the direction of leniency and not of stringency.

"The proposed amendments are certainly not calculated to soften the rigour of the law. The new section 124A in its present form is no improvement upon the old one, which, it has been observed, is wanting in precision. Judging by the results, the section as it stood before did answer its object well for all practical purposes. The late prosecutions were not hampered at all, owing to any supposed radical or technical defect in the section which, it is to be remembered, had been carefully considered both by Sir James Fitzjames Stephen and by Sir Barnes Peacock when it was first imported into the Code in 1870. As to the Indian Penal Code itself, it is needless to say it is regarded generally as a model of clear drafting, characterised as it is by a scientific arrangement. The section, says a lawyer, 'is very carefully drawn, so as to represent the law in England since Mr. Fox's Libel Act of 1792.'

"It is true the three High Courts which had occasion to discuss the interpretation of the term 'disaffection' did not construe it rather in a uniform sense. But that difficulty, I apprehend, must continue still to stare us in the face, as the term has been left practically undefined in spite of a divergence of opinion noticeable upon that crucial point in the judgments of those Courts.

"We do not want to know what the expression 'disaffection' includes, but what it means precisely. It may as well be observed parenthetically that according to the amended section (124A) the unlawful intention is to be of the essence of the offence contemplated by it, though it may be argued, as has been very appropriately observed by the Hon'ble Sir Antony MacDonnell, that 'the evil to be repressed being so great and touching the foundations of order, the test should be the external character of the act, rather than the actor's subjective or mental state'.

"I notice some critics have even gone so far as to hazard an assertion that the law of sedition now proposed to be brought into accord with that of seditious libel, as understood in England, does not, in fact, harmonize with the latter system, which, it is pointed out, has been much tempered in modern times with the humanizing effects of a liberty-loving civilization, and that so great is the sanctity attached there to the freedom of speech, that trials arising out of the offence of seditious language have of late been far and few between.

"I must confess I myself have not been able to test sufficiently the correctness of the assertion, but what I could gather from such scanty materials as I happened to lay my hands upon, is that the law in Great Britain has not been systematically codified or logically arranged in a compact form. Attempts at codification having proved abortive on a previous occasion, the law lies still in a diffused state in the decisions of several sedition cases by distinguished Judges, from which it appears that 'the criminal intention and incitement to violence against constitutional authority' are conditions essential for the purpose of constituting the offence of sedition. That being so, the proposed amendment, which introduces terms of an extremely vague and ambiguous character, such as 'hatred, contempt, enmity' and the like, is not in consonance with the English law upon the subject. The result is that the existing section has been dangerously widened, so as to imperil seriously the liberty of Press and speech, and interfere with all open and honest criticism of public measures, which is essential for helping the Government in effecting necessary reforms or rectifying administrative errors.

"I am aware that almost all the Heads of Administrations, the Local Governments and the Judges of several High Courts have approved of the amendments generally. No doubt, their opinions are entitled to great respect and weight, but any adverse decision arrived at by them, simply from an administrative point of view, would, if accepted, operate injuriously upon the liberty of the subject.

"Against the weight of official opinion there is a remarkable and an unprecedental unanimity amongst all classes of Her Majesty's subjects, including the Bar, the Press and the members of non-official Anglo-Indian community, in condemning the amendments as being exceptionally severe and uncalled-for. Their views, and the opinion enunciated by a majority of the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court, are, I think, entitled to consideration.

"As the combined and cumulative effect of these obnoxious amendments would, I apprehend, be to revive indirectly and in a different form the evils to which an attempt to re-enact the Vernacular Press Act might have led, with all its repressive consequences, it is desirable to revise the measure, making the language of the law so precise and certain as to leave no room for doubt or ambiguity in construing its meaning."

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI said:—"My Lord, I have reluctantly come to the conclusion that the Bill now before the Council should either be dropped altogether, or postponed to some future date, or, if neither of the above courses is possible, it should be referred back to the Select Committee for re-consideration.

"The Bill, although a short one, is of a serious character. It has arrested the attention both of the European and Native communities, and has been discussed by the public generally. It has been commented upon by public bodies and in the Press, both Anglo-Indian and Vernacular. It is obvious, therefore, that this Bill is regarded as a measure calculated to seriously affect vital interests. It is, therefore, the duty both of Government and of this Council to give to this measure their most careful consideration. This Council ostensibly is responsible for legislative measures, but no measure can be introduced in this Council, except by or with the consent of Government, and practically no measure can be passed by this Council except with the consent of Government, as Government and the official members constitute the majority. I, therefore, request the most careful consideration both of Government and of this Council to this measure.

"Before examining the principle of this Bill. I will briefly refer to a few collateral points bearing upon it. It is believed to be the opinion of some persons, who are educated, cultured, experienced, well-meaning and sympathetic, that it is desirable that Government should be invested by the Legislature with plenary powers, but that such powers need not be used by Government unless there is urgent necessity for doing so. But these persons should remember that Government, that is, the chief executive authority in each centre, cannot personally administer the whole of the centre for which it is ostensibly responsible, and that the powers nominally given to them have practically to be delegated by them to others who may not be equally educated, cultured, experienced or sympathetic; that no human administration, however well devised and however carefully recruited, can possibly be perfect, that the mere fact of passing an examination does not make a ripe administrator; that years of hard work and close observation are requisite for the purpose; that training is as essentially necessary as an educational test; and that an administrator is not usually born, but has to be both educated and trained up to. It is not safe, therefore, to place plenary powers in the hands of every one, simply because he happens to be a Government servant. It must also be remembered that India is a vast continent and the habits and circumstances of all the persons inhabiting it are not identical. It must also be rememb red that because an insignificant part of the country or an infinitessimal portion of its inhabitants have to be, on an occasion, kept strict in hand, it does not necessarily follow that the whole country or that all its inhabitants should be treated with the same rigour. It is true that it is difficult to legislate for a particular division of the country or for a particular portion or class of its inhabitants. But the proper course is that the rigour of the law should be softened and its provisions should be so hemmed in as to prevent the law from operating harshly. It must also be remembered that India is a peculiar country, and that it is inexpedient to put it under all the rigorous measures of Europe, and that, if it is necessary to import some of these measures, care should be taken that simultaneously with the introduction of such measures all the concomitant safeguards obtaining in Europe should also be introduced. It is inadvisable, for example, to work the proposed law relating to seditious offences and offences against public tranquillity without at the same time giving the accused the privileges which are given in England, where a grand jury, consisting of the fellow-subjects of the accused, has first to find a true bill, then the accused has to be tried before a jury of his fellow-subjects, and the persons prosecuting him, the persons giving evidence against him, the persons judging him, are all his fellow-subjects, and the whole thing, moreover, is keenly watched by a strong public opinion, and, lastly, Parliament is near at hand to put in an immediate and effective interference.

"Assuming, however, that the proposed legislation is necessary by reason of the non-efficiency or ambiguity of the existing law, it is respectfully submitted that the present is not an opportune time for undertaking such legislation. For some time past India has been subjected to a succession of calamities, each heavy enough in itself to exhaust the patience and to disturb the equanimity of even such a mild nation as the Indians. There has been a famine in the land, which has been admitted to be the greatest calamity of this century. There has been plague, than which a more hateful malady does not exist on the surface of this earth. There has been an earthquake which was sufficient to unhinge the equanimity of even the most resigned hearts. In addition to these supernatural calamities, there has been a bloody warfare on the North-West Frontier. In spite of all these peace-disturbing calamities profound peace has prevailed throughout the land, and the people have borne their misfortunes with patient endurance and unswerving loyalty to Government. Government—British, enlightened, generous and sympathetic Government—ought to take into consideration these important facts and put off passing such a measure, assuming it to be necessary, to some future period. At the present juncture the people are naturally inclined to regard this measure as an additional misfortune. The misfortunes of the people deserve sympathy. Their loyalty deserves consideration. Nothing will be lost by a postponement of the intended legislation. Urgency has not been pleaded, much less made out.

"Experience teaches that whenever the Vernacular Press is bodily against an intended measure, it is an unmistakable sign that such measure is unpopular with the general Native public; further, that whenever the Anglo-Indian Press joins the Vernacular Press in opposing an intended measure, it may be safely concluded that such measure is not an advisable one, and that it is better to postpone, if not altogether to drop, it. It is sometimes said that the Vernacular Press does not represent popular voice; that it represents only the educated natives who form but a small minority of the people. It is true that in India the proportion of the educated to the uneducated is not the same as it is in Europe. But it is also true that in no country in the world are all the inhabitants educated and that for all practical purposes the educated classes are the leaders in all countries, and India is not an exception to this general rule. In fact, in India the respect for the educated has from ancient times extended even to veneration. At any rate education is a factor which cannot be entirely ignored. The Vernacular Press is but one of the fruits of education which it has been the noble policy of British rulers to foster in India. It is also sometimes said that the educated classes in this country are disloyal. This general statement is without foundation. Indeed, there is no single class in India which is so loyal to Government as these educated classes, inasmuch as their interests, their aspirations and their sympathies are all intimately connected, even bound together, with the existence and maintenance of British rule in India. These classes have been brought into existence by that rule; they flourish under its ægis and without it they will be swept off the face of the earth. The educated are, moreover, the true, correct and sympathetic interpreters between the rulers and the ruled and are a necessary aid to the proper administration of the country.

"The Bill, moreover, is a retrograde measure. The Vernacular Press Act was repealed and the Press was declared free. That measure of repeal was one which will ever redound to the credit of British rule in India so long as history continues to be read. The Bill now proposed to be passed is regarded by the people as practically re-enacting the Press Act, if not even going further.

"Referring now to the reasons advanced in favour of the proposed legislation, it is a well understood principle in such matters that before Government interposes it should clearly be ascertained that, if Government does not interfere, public interests will undoubtedly suffer and the peace of the country be seriously imperilled. As a matter of fact, public interests are not suffering and the peace of the country is not imperilled at all. Public passions are not excited, the people are as quiet as possible, there is no sedition and consequently there is no necessity for repressive measures. It is stated—

'recent events in India have called prominent attention to the law relating to seditious utterances and writings. We have had anxiously to consider the state of the law regarding these matters and to decide whether, and in what respects, it required amendment ....The second [course] was to amend the general law relating to sedition and cognate offences, so as to make it efficient for its purpose. ....We have come to the conclusion that the second course is the right one for us to take.................................But we are also determined that the law shall not be a dead-letter and that offenders against the law of the land shall be capable of being promptly brought to book.....................I cannot say that that section [124A] strikes me as a model of clear drafting..............................The law might be expressed in clearer and less equivocal terms. When law is codified, the codes should be as explicit as possible.........................Moreover, decisions [of the Calcutta, Bombay and Allahabad Judges] are not technically binding on other High Courts.'

"The reasons above quoted might be briefly stated to be (1) that the present law is not a model of clear drafting, and (2) that the decisions of the three High Courts are not binding on the other High Courts.

"Taking the latter reason first, the answer is, firstly, that it is extremely probable, nay almost certain, that the other High Courts will follow the 'consentient' and well-considered judgments of the three High Courts, and, secondly, that there was no danger, nor even inexpediency, in waiting for the decision of the remaining High Courts. As to the former reason, that the present section is not a model of clear drafting, the answer is that it has been considered and interpreted by three High Courts, and a statute as interpreted by a current of judicial decisions is, as a rule, much better understood and much better applied than a substituted piece of fresh legislation, which has in its turn to undergo the same process, as is abundantly evident from the history of English law. It is worthy of remark here that although the wording of the present section 124A has been, as above noticed, found fault with, the proposed substitute is no better. In fact, the proposed section 124A makes use of the words 'hatred', 'contempt' and 'disaffection'. How far are these terms inclusive, exclusive or co-extensive nowhere appears in the proposed Bill. It is submitted, therefore, that the reasons given for undertaking fresh legislation are neither weighty nor urgent. The case for the proposed sections 108A, 153A and 505 is, if possible, still weaker. No urgent necessity, it is submitted, has been made out for their enactment. In fact, the whole of the proposed legislation might have been well left alone, or, at any rate, postponed until the revision of the Indian Penal Code which, it is understood, will shortly be taken in hand. Indeed, it is admitted that 'the interpretation of the section [124A] has recently been discussed before the Calcutta, Bombay and Allahabad High Courts', who 'have substantially agreed in the interpretation', and that the 'proposed new section in no wise alters the law at present in force in India'.

"Referring now to the sections of the Bill so far as is necessary to do so for the purposes of considering the same in general, it is true that Government have power by the existing law to punish its Indian subjects wherever such subjects may happen to commit offences, when such subjects return to British India. But unless the offences committed outside British India are of the nature of offences from the time immemorial recognised as the main and inexcusable offences against the laws of natural justice, such as murder, it is manifestly inexpedient, and even unfair, to take notice of them in the country of birth or domicile. For example, suppose a person residing in British India goes to the United States, resides there for a long period, and while so resident makes a speech, in the course of which in the heat of the moment he utters words which under the proposed legislation might be punishable under section 124A or section 153A or section 505, or has a quarrel in the United States, in the course of which he causes hurt to a person there: after some years he returns to British India. Will it be reasonable to prosecute him under the proposed legislation? Again, if an Indian subject goes to England and whilst resident there he makes a speech consonant with the liberty and freedom common in England. He then returns to British India. Will it be reasonable or fair or expedient to prosecute him under the proposed legislation? Ought the British Indian Government, strong and powerful and great as it is, condescend to notice that speech and institute proceedings here? That person's European fellow subjects will not under similar circumstances be liable to be taken up at all. That person's fellow-subjects in England will also be free from any such liability. Will not the prosecution in British India of the Indian subjects mean that even in England, that thrice-blessed island, the land of liberty and progress, three several sets of persons doing similar acts, it may be even jointly doing the same act, will be liable to be differently treated? Will not this also mean that a person for doing a certain act in England may not be prosecuted in England, but may on his return to British India be prosecuted and punished for it in British India at the instance of the British Indian Government which is subordinate to the British Government? Will this be a dignified proceeding? England paid millions of hard-earned money for the emancipation of negro slavery. Englishmen deservedly boast that any one on landing on their country's shores, by the very fact of his landing there, becomes a free man. Will Englishmen, if once awakened to a sense of such a differentiating treatment, tolerate such a thing? Again, in these days of rapid communication and exchange of thought, will it be possible for the Indian Press to abstain from reproducing the views which may from time to time be expressed in the Press in England? It is a well-known fact that newspapers in England express their views with commendable candour and fearlessness. These views, if reproduced in India, will fall under the proposed legislation. Is the Press here to be prosecuted, or is the importation or circulation of the English papers to be prohibited? Again, it should be remembered that the political Government in England is carried on by means of Party politics inside the Houses of Parliament aided by Party Press outside. Both parties hit hard. The Englishmen in India naturally take interest in home politics. The Anglo-Indian Press necessarily refers to it and offers criticism. Will it be right or proper to prevent them from doing so? Again, the Press at home criticises, and very properly, upon Indian matters. Will it be fair to require the Press out here to remain silent and not to reply? The fact that persons other than Indian subjects cannot be proceeded against under the proposed legislation as above pointed out will create an invidious distinction. It will mean that there is one law for one set of persons and another law for another set of persons. In fact, the proposed legislation is directly at variance with the principle of lex loci. In England it is believed Courts will take cognisance only of such torts committed abroad as are torts in England as well as in foreign countries in the same case.

"Again, Stephen's Criminal Digest, article 98, defines what is not a seditious intention. The new explanations in the proposed law are inadequate for the purpose.

"It is doubtful if the words 'measure or action' include also omission or neglect. It may reasonably be asked, therefore, for instance, that since the grievances of third class railway passengers cannot be regarded as directly due to any measures of Government nor to any action on the part of Government, but that they may possibly be regarded as due to neglect on the part of Government to awaken the railway companies to a sense of their responsibility, will criticism in regard to such grievances be protected under the strict letter of the proposed explanation 2? Again, supposing a person says that the India Council should be abolished. Now the India Council is neither a measure nor an action of Government. It is an integral part of the governing machinery. Is the person above referred to protected by the explanation? Again, it is doubtful whether the words 'measure or action' include institutions and departments. Is criticism on institutions and departments protected? If a person wants to say that the present system of administration is costly and recommends some other system, will he be protected? The wording of the proposed legislation goes far beyond the expressed intentions of the framers of the existing section 124A and the scope of the law of sedition is vastly enlarged; and this extension is neither in the interests of society nor of the peace of the country. On the contrary, it is calculated seriously to endanger the right of manly and frank discussion of public questions. Again, take the proposed section 153A. The statement of a racial or a religious grievance is not protected. The social reformers in India advocate widow re-marriage. This advocacy does excite hatred and animosity. So also the social conference proceedings do rouse feelings of enmity towards reformers. So also the vegetarian movement, the Brahmo-Somaj movement, the monotheism movement, the anti-idolatry movement, and the Prarathna Somaj movement do excite hatred and contempt. Are all these movements to be stopped? Again, take the proposed section 505. Cases under the proposed sections 124A. and 153A, respectively, might fall under the proposed section 505. The result will be that in one and the same case the sections will operate differently. Again, if a bonâ fide statement makes a soldier or sailor to fail in his duty, should the person making the statement be punished? Will it not give rise, and properly, to a retort—why should the soldier or sailor forget his duty? Again, the proposed section 505 refers to three kinds of intent. If that intent is present, even bonâ fides, it is apprehended, will not protect. Again, what is to be done with statements likely to lead to the results mentioned in the proposed section 505 if such statements are made bonâ fide? The exception is silent on the matter. This is rightly regarded as a grievous omission. The section as it at present stands may possibly provide soldiers and sailors with an excuse or incentive to disregard their duty or to commit an offence? Indeed, any mischievous person may bring any one into trouble by acting disobediently or turbulently although no causal relation can be established between the writing and the act of disobedience or turbulence. Again, it is difficult to understand what is meant by the words 'in his duty as such.' Suppose a soldier or a sailor is employed in plague operations or in extinguishing a fire, and suppose he misbehaves, is criticism on his conduct criminal because it is likely to induce him to fail in his duty? Innumerable illustrations may be cited to show that the proposed section will be unworkable, that is, it may be condemned on the same ground on which the present law has been condemned in the speech made on the 21st December last in favour of the proposed new legislation. With all due deference, therefore, it is submitted that the proposed legislation is not a well-considered one, that it is not calculated to work smoothly, and that it will give rise to endless complications. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the proposed Bill will either be dropped altogether or postponed and considered along with the proposed revision of the Indian Penal Code, or at any rate referred back to the Select Committee for re-consideration. Although it is a short Bill consisting only of six sections, two Hon'ble Members had to dissent from it, and no less than five different Hon'ble Members have found it necessary to send in notices of amendments, and the number of such amendments is not insignificant. As a rule, every Bill is referred to a Select Committee, who thrash it out so fully that usually the Council does not find much difficulty in disposing of it. The present Bill is an exception. It will be difficult to amend it in Council so as to put it in a proper shape, even after all the amendments have been duly put, considered and voted upon. It will, therefore, facilitate matters, if this Bill is to be proceeded with, to refer it back to the Select Committee for reconsideration."

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ said:—"I have only a very few general remarks to make on the Bill before the Council. The proposed amendments of the Indian Penal Code were made after consultation with the executive authorities who are responsible for the good government of this country, and I do not see how any impartial critic can regard them as going beyond what is absolutely necessary to support lawful authority and the prevention and dissemination of seditious matter which is intended to excite disaffection or to stir up dangerous strife. As regards section 124A, the Hon'ble Legal Member and the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans have pointed out that the new section does not extend the existing law regarding sedition, but only expresses it in clearer language. The new section 153A provides means, the necessity for which has been forcibly demonstrated by recent events, for taking prompt action towards checking the incitement of dangerous, racial or religious animosity, and I fail to see how this section will have the effect, which the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu anticipates, of proving detrimental to undoubted rights or useful work. As regards section 505, I need only repeat, what the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers has said, that at all events as it now stands as altered by the Select Committee no writer or speaker who acts in good faith need fear it. All the proposed amendments of the Penal Code have therefore my full support. It must be remembered that no prosecution can be instituted under any of the three sections I have referred to without the previous sanction of the Government; but this is a safeguard which, with all deference to what my friend the Hon'ble Mr. James has said on the subject, I think is a desirable one. The apprehensions which some Hon'ble Members seem to entertain that the intention and object of the Government in making the proposed amendments are to repress legitimate freedom of speech or writing are, I need hardly say, absolutely groundless."

The Hon'ble SIR ARTHUR TREVOR said :—" My Lord, I do not think I can usefully attempt to add anything to the arguments which have been used in support of the Bill, but, as it has met with so much hostile criticism, I think it right to say that I support it generally, not only as a member of the Executive Government as might perhaps be assumed if I merely recorded a silent vote, but also from personal conviction, which has been considerably strengthened by the course of the discussion."

The Hon'ble MAJOR-GENERAL SIR EDWIN COLLEN said :—" I did not intend to speak during this debate, but there are one or two points in the speech of the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu upon which I wish to offer a few observations, although of the briefest character. The first point is his declaration that there is no such thing as sedition in India, and that such a thing does not exist. I do not know where my hon'ble friend derives his information from, but I am afraid I cannot agree with him. It has been my duty for many years past to study the utterances of the Press of this country, and although one must allow that a large section of the Press is marked in its writings with loyalty and intelligence, yet it can hardly be denied that at least some of the utterances of that Press are of a distinctly seditious character, however we may define the word 'sedition'. Can it be said that the dissemination of statements of this character is not dangerous to an uninformed and credulous people, or that such utterances conveyed, for example, to the minds of our native army, false and ridiculous as many of the statements may be, do not tend to sap that loyalty of which we are so justly proud, can it be said that those utterances are not injurious to the discipline of that great military class, the native army of India, whose loyalty, valour, and discipline have never been more conspicuous than at the present time? But my friend's second declaration was an especially alarming one. He announced his general intention of smoking in powder magazines, and he appeared to think that so long as he did not drop his lighted cigar in a powder barrel there was no harm done; but I must remind him that, even with those excellent cigars which are manufactured in Southern India, sparks occasionally fall from them, and, though we should be sorry to restrain my hon'ble friend's personal liberty, I do not think we shall allow him to smoke in our military magazines, or even in his own particular private powder magazine. I rather think that such a proceeding on his part would come under the section of causing alarm to the public. My Lord, I believe that the provisions of the Bill when they become law will make for peace and tranquillity in India. I welcome clause 505, because I believe it is likely to protect the military and naval forces from the insidious attempts of agitators. I am not able to agree with my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sayani that there is anything in that section which is likely to induce the offences which that clause is framed to meet; and I venture to think that in due time those who now oppose the provisions of this Bill will become convinced that it is a wise and expedient measure, absolutely harmless to the loyal, and only a terror to persistent evil-doers."

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND said :—" It is not my intention to address myself in any way to the merits of the measure which is now before the Legislative Council; I leave that part of the duty to my hon'ble friend who is in charge of the Bill. But one or two statements have been made in the course of this debate as justifying a proposal for the postponement of the discussion which I desire to call in question. A statement has been made by my hon'ble friends Mr. Chitnavis and Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu that in respect of the proposals now before the Council we have against us the whole of the Native Press, the whole of the English Press and every representative body all over India. Now, my Lord, that is a statement which, considering the facts before the Council, ought not to be left without challenge. For example, it is quite true that the Bengal Chamber of Commerce addressed a memorial to Your Excellency in which they made adverse criticisms on the Bill, but like sensible men they made those representations for the consideration of the Government and Legislature, and, having received upon them the decision of the Select Committee, we have heard to-day from the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur that the Chamber of Commerce and the commercial community generally, whatever they may desire as regards modifications in small particulars, give the Bill in its present form their general support. Another important Association, with respect to which the same statement was made, was the British Indian Association. It is quite true that that Association represents Native opinion, but it is one that represents Native moderate opinion. It has been most useful to the Council on many occasions on which it has submitted its criticisms for the consideration of the Legislature, but we know, and have evidence before us to which I shall presently refer, that that Association has withdrawn from any active participation in the opposition to the Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee. I should also like to mention, with reference to the English Press, that within the course of the last week I have seen a disclaimer in one, if not in both, of the Bombay newspapers of the statement that they are in direct opposition to the Bill at present before the Council. In going through (as I was bound to do) the representations made before the Legislative Council, it is impossible not to observe what a singular character was common to them all. We have any quantity of representations from Pleaders' Associations here, from Local Practitioners' Associations there and the different varieties by which those Associations call themselves. Now, I do not wish for a moment to say that gentlemen engaged in the practice of the law, or the more experienced among them at least, are not competent to give the Legislature advice as to the form the law should take; but it may be justly said that it is very remarkable that such criticisms as we have received from the public have almost all come from that particular section of it. We have heard in Calcutta within the last few days of a meeting which is called in a paper which we have to-day received. 'The humble memorial of the inhabitants of Calcutta in public meeting assembled.' This public meeting was advertised first of all in the Calcutta papers of Monday last. I thought it desirable that I should study that advertisement in order to see exactly what importance could be attributed to 'the inhabitants of Calcutta in public meeting assembled' as there shown. The first thing that struck me was that although I knew Calcutta was a great European city, yet in the whole list of names—a pretty long list—of gentlemen at whose instance that meeting was called there was not a single European name. I am also aware that in Calcutta there are two or three hundred thousand Muhammadan inhabitants. I looked down the list and could not find a single Muhammadan name in the whole of it. I looked also for the well-known leading names among the Hindus; they were equally conspicuous by their absence. I appealed to the Directory to find out who these gentlemen were who proffered themselves as representing the inhabitants of Calcutta. A number of them were not known to fame even as it is represented in the Calcutta Directory. All that I could find about those who were mentioned there, was that they were gentlemen who are engaged in the legal profession or who are editors of Native newspapers. Now, as I said before, I do not in the least depreciate the importance of these classes if they desire to represent themselves; but I am afraid that I, as an inhabitant of Calcutta, entirely deny their right to represent me, or to meet and call themselves the inhabitants of Calcutta when, as a matter of fact, they are only numerically a very small section of them. At the meeting which took place yesterday and which again we are told is a meeting of 'the inhabitants of Calcutta in public meeting assembled,' there were, I think, four speeches of any length delivered. Two of these were delivered by gentlemen whose profession is that of editors of Native newspapers. Well again, I say, they are perfectly at liberty to explain their views and to try to bring to bear upon the Government and upon the Legislative Council such views as they possess; but I think, if they want to be absolutely straightforward in the form in which they represent their views to Government and to the Legislative Council, they ought not to describe themselves as the inhabitants of Calcutta in public meeting assembled, but as gentlemen exercising the legal and the editorial professions residing in Calcutta. After going through a number of these memorials with such attention as I was able to give to them, I cannot help feeling that the forms in which the rules of Your Excellency's Legislature allow memorials to be presented, are used to the very great inconvenience of the Members of Your Excellency's Legislature. I, with others, am very willing indeed to hear anything which is said on the subject of our legislative proposals by any person who in any way has a right to make representations to us, but I do strongly object to being obliged to read long lucubrations sent to us by people who keep their names entirely in the background. The document which has been given to us with the respected name of Maharaja Sir Jotindro Mohan Tagore announces to us the conclusions of a conference assembled in Calcutta. From beginning to end of that document there is not the smallest hint of who that conference was composed of. I have heard to-day for the first time the name of one gentleman, namely, the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu, who took part in that conference."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU: "I did not say I took part in the conference, but that I was present."

SIR JAMES WESTLAND continuing said: "I beg the Hon'ble gentleman's pardon; but my point is that, though I have no doubt a conference took place, I think it is most unfair to Your Excellency's Legislative Council that we should be informed that a conference has taken place to pronounce some sort of conjoint opinion upon the measures which are before the Council, and that we should be left absolutely in ignorance as to whom that conference consisted of. Again, two or three documents have come to us with the pretentious introduction 'I am directed by my Committee to do so and so.' Again I ask who the Committee is; I ask who it is they represent. I cannot find information of any kind; it cannot be found in the Directory; it can be found nowhere. We all know the story in England of the three tailors of Tooley Street who drew up a petition in which they styled themselves 'We, the inhabitants of England.' It seems to me that in certain cases in this country that precedent has been very largely improved upon. It has been considered here that it is a ridiculous waste of individuality that three persons should combine to send one memorial to Government. We are much more likely to get three memorials under various designations from each of the gentlemen concerned. It is quite true that what is stated in these memorials, whatever importance it has intrinsically, we are able to give that importance to it; but still I claim on the part of Your Excellency's Legislative Council that we ought to know who the people are who are addressing us, and that they ought not to be allowed to give us lengthy opinions without at the same time giving us some indication of the source from which they emanate and the authority with which they are put forward. A single individual in this country can easily constitute himself into an association, and send in a memorial beginning with the pretentious form 'I am directed by my Committee to do so and so', whereas as a matter of fact the young gentleman who writes the memorial, if he told the truth, would much more correctly say 'I am directed by Babu so and so to make the following representation'. I am not altogether without a precedent in making this representation to Your Excellency, because I find that all this class of memorial, when it is laid before that august body, the House of Commons, is rejected. It is a rule in the House of Commons that no person is allowed to sign for another or to put himself forward as representing another. If a memorial comes to that House, as several have come to us purporting to be sent by the inhabitants of so and so, the memorial is simply taken as coming from the particular individual who signs it, whether he calls himself chairman or president of a public meeting or anything else, and it is not regarded as coming from anybody else. I think, if Your Excellency would make a similar rule for the reception of documents purporting to represent the views of the public to the Legislature, you would attain two very useful objects. In the first place, you would exclude a very great deal that is sent in to us by pretentious nobodies, and, in the second place, you would give just prominence to those who are entitled from their position or their experience to advise Your Excellency's Legislature and Your Excellency's Government on matters of legislation."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR said:—"It is difficult to say anything now when following 17 other speakers in a debate like this, but I am unwilling to give a silent vote in favour of this Bill, both on account of its intrinsic importance and because there has been so much misapprehension as to its true scope and import, especially in Bengal, where the outcry against it has been particularly noisy, almost at times hysterical, the result, it may be feared, in some cases, of a specially guilty conscience. Much of that misapprehension ought to be removed by the speeches to-day of the Hon'ble Legal Member and other Members of this Council, but I feel it to be my duty to express clearly the view that I take of the measure. Section 124A of the Penal Code has in some respects had a strange history. Sir Fitzjames Stephen in 1870 explained how by an extraordinary oversight it came to be omitted from the Code as originally passed. He showed that sections dealing with sedition had been drafted both by the original Code Commission and by Sir Barnes Peacock, and that the section drafted by Sir Barnes Peacock, the weight of whose authority will always be acknowledged, was not only more severe than the section prepared by the Code Commission, but more severe than the measure which he then invited the Council to pass. Under Sir Barnes Peacock's section not only were such feelings of disaffection banned as were likely to induce the people to resist the authority of Government, but such feelings as were likely to lead them to disobey that authority, and the mere omission to do what you were told to do was disobedience. To any one who remembers the conditions of 1870, and who carefully reads Sir F. Stephen's speeches, it will be manifest that what the Government had in its mind at that time was the Wahabi conspiracy and the open preaching of jehad or religious war against the Government. Sir F. Stephen framed his proposals to meet that exigency, and his purpose was to bring the Code more or less into harmony with the law of England as he then read it. He admitted, however, that the law of England, though similar to the proposed section, was in reality far more severe. Then in 1878 came the Vernacular Press Act, which added to the offence of creating disaffection the rousing of feelings likely to excite disaffection, or antipathy between different races, castes or religions. It was mainly to the machinery set on foot for the working of that Act that objection was afterwards taken; and even most of the Local Governments who approved of the repeal of the Act—along with all those who did not approve of the repeal—urged strongly that the repeal should be accompanied by an amendment of section 124A of the Code, so as to bring within the scope of the ordinary law the two offences referred to above. Had this advice been listened to, we might by this time have had a decently conducted Indian Press, and avoided any doubt attaching to the State trials of the last few years. Much of the outcry against the present Bill rests on its supposed divergence from the law of England on seditious libel, and on the assertion that the law as settled in 1870 was sufficient and ought to be final. Now I venture to assert these two propositions—first, that the law of England, built up by judicial rulings to meet the circumstances of a homogeneous people directly interested in and sharing in its own government is not necessarily a norm to which the law of India ought strictly to conform; and, second, that the conditions of the country have themselves so altered since 1870 that what was adequate then is not necessarily adequate now. As to the first point, I said in my letter to the Legislative Department of the 18th January—

'In Sir Alexander Mackenzie's opinion, however, the question whether or not the draft section strictly follows the English law is not material. If the section is in strict accord with the English law, all criticism of it loses weight, since there could be no reasonable objection to the enactment for India of the same law of sedition as is in force in England: if it is not, there is, in the very great difference in the conditions of the two countries, ample justification for any deviation from the English law necessary for effectively checking the offence of sedition in India. It is clear that a sedition law which is adequate for a people ruled by a Government of its own nationality and faith may be inadequate, or in some respects unsuited, for a country under foreign rule and inhabited by many races, with diverse customs and conflicting creeds. It is impossible in India to accept the test of direct incitement to violence or intention to excite rebellion, and limit the interference of the Government to such cases. It is not the apparent intention of the writers or speakers so much as the tendency of the writings or speeches which has to be regarded, and the cumulative effect of depreciatory declamation on the minds of an ignorant and excitable population, to which attention has been drawn above, has to be taken into consideration. The Lieutenant-Governor does not think, then, that objections to the draft section based on alleged divergence from the English law should carry weight.'

"As to the second point, I remarked in the same letter—

'The necessity for the proposed legislation is unquestionable. Ever since the repeal of the Vernacular Press Act, the Native Press has been year by year growing more reckless in its mode of writing about the Government, Government officers and Government measures. Doubts having been always felt by the law officers as to the scope of section 124A of the Penal Code, the general policy has been to ignore these attacks. But within the last few months the barefaced sedition promulgated in the Native Press of the Bombay Presidency has forced that Government to institute prosecutions, and has led to the conviction of some of the offenders; an editor has also been similarly convicted in the North-Western Provinces; and at Lucknow a Muhammadan preacher has been required to furnish security to keep the peace for seditious language used at a meeting. These convictions have shown that the offence of sedition can be punished under section 124A of the Code as it stands, but they have involved much discussion of the explanation to the section, and the interpretation of the Courts before which the cases came has been challenged by the Native Press and the Native community generally, who have themselves expressed a desire that the law should be made more precise. In Bengal the only Press prosecution for seditious writing has been that of the Bangabasi newspaper, instituted in 1891, in which the jury disagreed, and which terminated eventually in the acceptance of an apology by the Government from the offending editor. The absence of other prosecutions cannot, however, be urged as evidence that seditious writing is rare in Bengal, and that an alteration of the law is not therefore called for in this Province. Resistance to the Government by violence has, it is true, not been directly suggested in the Bengal Press, and a sufficient reason for this may be found in the character of the writers, who belong to, and whose readers are, a people wanting in the warlike spirit of many other races of India; but there has been incessant writing tending to bring the Government, whether in itself or through its officers, into hatred and contempt, and such writing, though not immediately leading to resistance by force to the Government, cannot fail by its cumulative effect to create disaffection and ill-will, and thus produce such a state of feeling as may eventually prove dangerous to the maintenance of order and find its culmination in active resistance. If it be agreed that the danger is not so serious in Bengal proper, with its timid and unwarlike population, as to demand exceptional measures, it must be borne in mind that other parts even of this Province have a population of higher spirit, and that the writings of the Bengal Press and the public utterances of Bengal speakers have circulation frequently in other Provinces. Any law dealing with sedition must, moreover, be general; and the condition not of Bengal alone, but of all the Provinces of the Empire, must be taken into account. Whether, then, we look at the objections which have been taken by the people themselves to the interpretation of the present law by the Courts, or to the nature of much that has been written in the Native Press, the necessity for an amendment of the law is clear. The proposed amendment, it is true, proceeds further than the mere removal of ambiguity from the law as it stands, but, legislation being necessary, it is obviously advisable to take the opportunity of correcting other defects and supplying deficiencies, so as to render the law thoroughly effective, in the judgment of the Government, for the checking of sedition or of conduct tending to the disturbance of public order.'

"To any one who studies, as I do from week to week, the utterances of the Press in India, nothing can be more clear than that, though we seldom have such bold sedition preached as led to the recent trials in Bombay or as prevailed here in 1870, we are now-a-days face to face with a far more insidious and equally dangerous style of writing and speaking. That Indian newspapers can supply criticism without scurrility or malice is evident from the admirably conducted columns of the Indian Spectator, Indian Nation, and some few other papers I could name. But the majority of the newspapers simply revel in misrepresentation of the motives of the Government and the nature of its measures. And this is an evil which is yearly growing, and with the spread of what is called education is becoming more far-reaching in its noxious effects. It is indeed, in my opinion, to our own system of education that we owe all the trouble. I have long been convinced that it is thoroughly unsound. Sir John Strachey in his India points out that our educational institutions give a more or less good imitation of the purely scholastic part of an ordinary English education; but the young men of India (he says) learn in them almost nothing about their own country, or about the Government under which they live, and least of all are they taught to be good and loyal citizens. We are turning out by scores of thousands young men who are trained only in words, look mainly for Government employment, and failing to get it become, as the Maharaja of Travancore described them, 'a host of discontented, disobedient, and sometimes troublesome young men.' Mr. Cotton, whose leanings towards the educated Native are well known, says: 'This accounts mainly for the discontent and restlessness which are perceptible in the rising generation.' This is the class that writes for the Native Press, perorates on platforms, and generally vents its spleen upon the Government which has not been able to find appointments for more than a fraction of its members. 'We taught them language, and their profit on it is, they know how to curse.' To honest well-informed criticism no English Government would ever object. But every Government has the right to object when its critics wander off from criticism to calumny. Criticism, it has been said, is but a child compared to calumny; mere bows and arrows to artillery.' 'No one can well exaggerate the power of calumny or follow out her language and singular ingenuity without mixed feelings of envy and admiration. How clever she is, for instance,' says the same writer, 'in making use of dull, ignorant and idle people, using them as the conduits to conduct and the feeders to multiply the remarks and jokes and malice of cleverer people, so that she fertilises the whole groundwork of society with injurious reports, which cannot be well contradicted, about her victims (in this case the Government). Let any transaction be as white as a hound's tooth, she can so admirably discolour it that the original whiteness can never be restored.' Calumny begins, as Beaumarchais graphically describes it, with a gentle breath, but gathering as it grows becomes at last a general outcry, a public crescendo, a universal chorus of hate and denunciation. Practically, as applied to the Government and its measures, this is the sort of thing that has been growing more and more marked during the past twenty years, save that we now find the hostile denunciation in full cry, the whispering of sedition and calumny having been discarded as not strong enough for the vitiated taste of the newspaper writers and readers. It has in fact grown as the numbers of the semi-educated ex-pupils of our schools and colleges have increased. Now the first duty of every Government, and especially of a foreign Government ruling as we do in India, is self-preservation. We have to ask ourselves: How is the Queen's Government in India to be carried on? It is true that behind the Government is the power of the sword, but it is no kindness to the people themselves to allow any mischief to proceed so far as to leave us no refuge but the arbitrament of force. There is, as has been well said, no strength in stagnation. 'Cautious passiveness and official negativeness will be found very insignificant barriers against evil either in quiet or in turbulent times.' I am not sure myself that we have not carried our cautious passiveness and official negativeness already beyond the limits of prudence. No Government such as ours in India can afford to allow the minds of an ignorant and credulous Oriental population to be gradually poisoned and embittered by persistent calumny of the Government and all its measures. I shall not take up the time of the Council by quotations to prove that this is a common offence at the present day. We know it, every one but Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu knows it, to be a fact, and we are bound to put the evil down. There is unfortunately, as I have said, now amongst us a large class of discontented and semi-educated men, eager for notoriety, pining for the plunder of the State and its offices, and unable to understand the responsibility which attaches to all would-be instructors of the public. These men are a standing menace to the administration. By the law of England, conspiracy to diminish the confidence of the masses in the general administration of the law is sedition. We must safeguard the Government of India from similar seditious attempts to bring into contempt the Government as by law established in British India. I cannot pass over the remark by Mr. Chitnavis, where he accepts the provisions of section 124A as affecting Her Majesty personally but refuses to concede them to Her Majesty's Government in British India. At all meetings of his friends, where, if not rank sedition, sympathy with convicted traitors is freely expressed, 'cheers for the Queen' are usually given as though that condoned everything. The procedure is simply a fraud on the public and a blind to the uninformed at home. India is under the Queen's Government as by law established, and there can be no loyalty to the Queen without loyalty to Her Government.

"I believe that the mere existence in the Statute-book of the law which we are now considering will of itself go far to check the evil.

"I have often said that to my mind one of the most useful functions of the Indian Penal Code is the office which it performs of a moral text-book. It serves to set before the people a standard to which they know that they must needs conform, and I trust that, when these sections take their place in the law, they will tend to improve the standard of journalism and platform oratory in India when dealing with the Government and its measures. As has been pointed out, the honest loyal journalist and speaker has nothing to fear. The propagandist of sensational calumnies and the apostle of racial antipathies will find his occupation gone, and no good citizen will regret the fact.

"A good deal has been said of the vagueness of some of the terms used in the sections. As Sir F. Stephen once pointed out, there are scores of words in the Code open to the same criticism. It is impossible to find words that would not by perverse interpretation be found open to cavil. We must trust to the common-sense and fairness of our judicial tribunals. The journalist must trust also to the common-sense and dignity of the Government, which would only expose itself to well-merited ridicule if it showed undue sensitiveness to fair criticism. Certainly it has not done so hitherto. It has treated with silent contempt the petty traitor whose sole object is to get notoriety and subscriptions, and those would-be patriots whose chief desire is to substitute themselves for the Government as by law established. It has done so, believing that, when the need arose to deal with them, the situation would be, as Macaulay puts it,—(and I would not venture to quote poetry here if the poet had not been himself Legal Member and author of the Penal Code, and if the stanzas had not been singularly applicable to the state of things now-a-days)—

'Once the jays sent a message
  Unto the eagle's nest :
"Now yield thee up thine eyrie
  Unto the carrion kite,
Or else come valiantly and face
  The jays in deadly fight."
Forth looked in wrath the eagle,
  And carrion kite and jay,
Soon as they saw his beak and claw,
  Fled screaming far away.'

"But the time for absolutely ignoring this irresponsible chatter is over. The noise is becoming too persistent and clamorous, and if unchecked may get upon the nerves of the listening masses. Journalists and patriotic orators must learn to measure their phrases and test the sources of their information. They must not evolve hideous charges against the Government from the depths of their own turgid imaginations, and pass them off as reports that have reached their ears from reliable correspondents. For the rest, as Sir F. Stephen said, 'men must be content to take the risks incidental to their profession. A journalist must run the risk of being misunderstood, and should take care to make his meaning plain. If his intentions really are loyal, there can be no difficulty in his doing so. If not, he cannot complain of being punished.' If these sections lead to more careful, well-considered and responsible journalism, they will confer a benefit not only on the State and the public, but on the journalistic profession itself. A free Press does not mean a Press free to say anything it likes. It can say anything it likes so long as it obeys the law, and the law contained in this Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, appears to me to be eminently reasonable and such as should be obeyed. The only serious flaw in the Bill, in my opinion, is that it omits to provide for bringing into contempt the general administration of justice, which is, to my mind, one of the most persistent, insidious and dangerous practices of a certain section of the Native Press.

"I am perfectly aware that there are many among the opponents of this measure who cannot fairly be included among the classes which it is meant to control. But I believe the opposition of all loyal persons will disappear when they find that the Government here and at home is firmly convinced of its urgency, when they see that it has been amended so as to meet all reasonable objections, and above all when they find that it is a weapon in the State armoury which will seldom be brought out save in case of real necessity."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I only wish to say a few words in reply to the various points which have been raised in the course of the discussion that has taken place. Perhaps the more convenient way would be to take the points as raised by the speakers in order. Some of these points I shall pass over for the reason that they will arise again hereafter on the amendments which are to be moved, and it will be unnecessary therefore for me to discuss them now. I will take the points in the order in which they have been raised. I will first take the speech of my hon'ble friend Mr. Allan Arthur, who, I am glad to see, has seen his way to give us the weight of his support. He feels, however, two doubts. First of all, he feels doubts about entrusting powers to try cases to Magistrates. Well, I may point out that this question does not arise on the present Bill. I hope that, when we come to deal with the Code of Criminal Procedure, we shall be able to supply arguments which will remove any doubts he may have on that point. At the present moment we are dealing with the substantive law. Then, again, he feels, and several other members have expressed the same feeling, doubts about introducing into the section the terms 'hatred and contempt.' May I point out to him that we are doing nothing new. May I point out that for seven years in Calcutta that has been the law as expounded by the late Chief Justice of the Calcutta High Court, Sir Comer Petheram. I will read only two lines from Sir Comer Petheram's judgment. Speaking of section 124A, he says: 'It is sufficient for the purposes of the section that the words are calculated to excite feelings of ill-will against the Government and to hold it up to the hatred and contempt of the people.' That is the law under which my friend has lived for the last seven years. I do not know that he or any one in whom he is interested has found that law oppressive; but the very fact that he raises this objection seems to me to be a good reason why we should re-enact the provisions of section 124A and, as my hon'ble friend Mr. Nicholson said, why we should unfold its meaning, because, if people are liable to punishment, it is better for them to know beforehand in what respect they are so liable.

"I should like now to say one or two words in regard to what fell from the Hon'ble Mr. Chitnavis. I can relieve his mind at once about one criticism. He says that in the Bill we have used the words 'Her Majesty,' but have not used the words 'Her Majesty and Her successors.' If my hon'ble friend had been in the Council last year, he would have read an Act called the General Clauses Act, which was passed last year, and in that he would have found that the term 'Her Majesty' means 'Her Majesty and Her Majesty's successors.' I think, therefore, that I can remove his apprehensions on that score. Then he raises another—a very important question, the question of punishment. He says that the punishment prescribed by the section is too severe. Well, the punishment remains the same as it was thirty years ago. It remains the same as it has been since 1870; we are not increasing the punishment. As a matter of fact, the extreme punishment has never been inflicted; but I am bound to point out that in a case the other day which was appealed to the High Court of the North-Western Provinces the learned Judges did observe that the punishment awarded by the lower Court was grossly inadequate. There may therefore be cases where, in the opinion of the High Court, these offences cannot be met by a small and summary punishment; but, no doubt, the mass of the cases can be met by a small and summary punishment We propose, indeed, to limit the punishment by giving jurisdiction to Magistrates whose powers are limited. When a case is tried before a Magistrate, ipso facto the power is thereby limited. I can only repeat again what I stated on the last occasion. Sedition is an offence which varies in its mischievous effects according to time, place and circumstances, and the punishment must vary accordingly. I can quite imagine a case where some words spoken or, say, rather written in a book dealing with political forms of government might be seditious. An adequate punishment, if any punishment was required, might be a very small fine indeed. But, if these same words were spoken to an angry mob with arms in their hands, why the words would require and deserve the severest punishment which the law provides. We have allowed for latitude of punishment according to the circumstances. We must trust the Courts to mete out proper punishment. If the offence by its surroundings calls for a severe punishment, the section allows it; if the offence calls for a nominal punishment, the section allows it; and, moreover, we have this additional safeguard, that if merely a nominal punishment is called for, the Government is not likely to authorize or sanction a prosecution.

"I come now to what was said by the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans, and he called our attention to an alternative suggestion which has been made to us from many quarters, namely, that we should not proceed against sedition but that we should amend our law of defamation and enable the Government to prosecute papers who defame it for defamation. Well, I have not consulted with my colleagues on that subject, but speaking for myself it appears to me that the proposed course would not meet our views at all. What is the meaning of the law of defamation? A prosecution or suit for defamation is a remedy given to a person who feels himself aggrieved because his reputation has been attacked. Is that the position of the Government? It seems to me, and I am speaking for myself, that the Government do not care a brass farthing for what is said about them; for what does it matter to them? What they care about, however, and what they wish to interfere with and prevent, is, not abuse of themselves, not abuse of the Government, but the spreading and stirring up of a spirit of sedition and discontent among the people which is an ever present source of danger to the community. But, quite apart from that general objection, there are other difficulties of procedure. Suppose, for instance, that some paper which is published so far off as Quetta defames the Government and has to be prosecuted, how is that prosecution to be conducted? I suppose it would be pleaded that its allegations were true, and that they were published for the public benefit. Take, for instance, a statement I saw in a paper last week, saying that, owing to the government of India by the British, the golden age had passed away, the people were unhappy and that it was better for them to die than to live under such a Government. Supposing the Government were to prosecute for defamation? I presume that the members of the Government would have to go down there, they would have to appear on the scene and be examined and cross-examined as to every measure the Government had ever taken; and I suppose the whole of the evidence given before the Welby Commission would be material to the issues to be tried. That clearly is an impossible procedure.

"Next, I want to say a word or two about my friend the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu's speech. I must say that I tender him my very hearty thanks. He has said more than I could say in favour of this Bill. I used as an illustration that, although I might lawfully and properly enjoy a cigar on the maidan, I could not do so lawfully and properly in the powder magazine in the Fort. My friend took issue on that point, and proclaims his right to smoke in the powder magazine in the Fort. Now, that is what I complain of in the attitude which is taken up by many of our critics. They say, 'We should have the right of free speech; we may cause an explosion; but we do not care who is injured so long as we can say what we like and when and where we like; we do not care whether our remarks are calculated to cause disturbances or whether they are not. What has that to do with us? We will smoke in the powder magazine.' But that is exactly what the Government are bound to see that people do not do. They are bound not merely to discourage appeals to violence, but they are bound to discourage smoking in the powder magazine; we are bound to see that a spirit of discontent is not spread abroad which might at any moment and at any place give rise to an explosion. It is perhaps difficult to express it in language, but that is the very point of our section. We want to discourage people who do this. They lay the train of gunpowder, they do not fire it themselves, they trust to a chance spark or to somebody else setting it alight. That is the very essence of the evil we have to aim at and to stop in India. My friend the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu says that there is no sedition in India. I quite believe that he is speaking in good faith; he is loyal himself, he mixes only with loyal people, and reads only loyal newspapers. I am very glad he does that; but, if he had to read through the weekly reports of the Press as we have to do, I am certain that he would come to a very different conclusion. He says we are acting on sentiment, and not information, or only on second-hand information. All I can say is that we have more sources of information than he has. His information that there is no sedition in India is not only second-hand, but third or fourth hand. The Government is in the best position of anybody to get information as to what is the true state of the country, and we are acting now, I am glad to say, backed by the authority of our responsible advisers.

"There are one or two other points which I think I ought to mention. My friend the Hon'ble Pandit Bishambar Nath is afraid, if this law passes, the public Press will not be able to help Government by giving it information. There is nothing in the law to prevent the Press from giving information; but, even supposing it were so, I do not know that the best way to call the attention of the Government to some abuse that you want rectified is to write about it in an up-country Vernacular paper. I should say that a much better way is to call the attention of the Government directly to the point. If you write a letter (say) to the Baluchistan Times, it may not come to the notice of Government; but if you write direct to the Government they get the letter at any rate. I am perfectly certain there is nothing in the proposals which will in any way interfere with what my hon'ble friend desires, that is, a free, fair and honest discussion of all public questions.

"I have only one word more to say about my hon'ble friend Mr. Sayani's point. He seems nervous that persons who are natives of India should be liable to be prosecuted in British India for offences against British Indian law committed outside British India. All I can say is that this has been the law for twenty years. Ever since the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act of 1879 was passed, natives of British India have been liable for offence against British Indian law committed abroad. As a matter of fact, I may mention that a native of India has been hanged in India for a murder committed at Perim, and another has been hanged in India for a murder committed at Cyprus. But that law has never been used oppressively, and the proof that it has not been used oppressively is that my hon'ble friend does not seem to have been aware of its existence; he has never apparently read the Act, although it has been in existence for over twenty years; that very fact shows that the law has not been oppressively used in the past, and I do not think it will be used oppressively in the future.

"I have now to move that the Bill be taken into consideration."

The Council divided :—

Ayes—17.

The Hon'ble Allan Arthur.
The Hon'ble Maharaja Bahadur of Durbhanga.
The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Pandit Suraj Kaul.
The Hon'ble F. A. Nicholson.
The Hon'ble J. J. D. LaTouche.
The Hon'ble Sir G. H. P. Evans.
The Hon'ble H. E. M. James.
The Hon'ble Sir H. T. Prinsep.
The Hon'ble C. C. Stevens.
The Hon'ble Joy Gobind Law.
The Hon'ble C. M. Rivaz.
The Hon'ble Sir A. C. Trevor.
The Hon'ble Major-General Sir E. H. H. Collen.
The Hon'ble M. D. Chalmers.
The Hon'ble Sir J. Westland.
His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.
His Excellency the President.

Noes—4.

The Hon'ble Gangadhar Rao Madhav Chitnavis.
The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu.
The Hon'ble Pandit Bishambar Nath.
The Hon'ble Rahimtula Muhammad Sayani.

So the motion was agreed to.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said :—" Before we proceed to the consideration of the various amendments, I wish to mention that the alternative form in which many of those amendments have been submitted by Hon'ble Members is unusual, and I have no hesitation in saying that, if they were brought under strict Parliamentary procedure, they would be out of order altogether. However, we do not wish in any way to preclude the opportunities of which Hon'ble Members wish to avail themselves, and we have accordingly arranged, to the best of our ability, to give an opportunity for them all. The only remark I would make is that where two amendments are identical, or substantially the same, unless advised by Hon'ble Members that they wish the second amendment to be taken, I shall call upon the mover of the first and pass by the mover of the second amendment. For instance, in numbers 8 and 9 of the List of Business there are amendments by the Hon'ble Maharaja of Durbhanga and the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu, which are exactly the same, and I propose to call on the Hon'ble Maharaja of Durbhanga and not on the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu. The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu can of course speak on the first amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI moved that in section 4, clause (1), of the Indian Penal Code, as proposed to be substituted by clause 2 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the words "in any place without and beyond British India" be omitted and the word "and" be added; that in clause (2) the figure "(2)" be omitted; and for the figure "(3)" in clause (3) the figure "(2)" be substituted; and that in illustration (a) for the word "Uganda" the word "Kashmir" be substituted. He said:—" The effect of the amendment will be that both Native Indian subjects and other British subjects of Her Majesty will be placed in the same position. To treat the two classes of subjects differently will be to create an invidious distinction between them. Under the benign rule of Her Most Gracious Majesty all Her Majesty's subjects are treated alike and there is the same law for all Her Majesty's subjects in India. All Her Majesty's subjects, whether a prince or a peasant, a white man or a black man, are equal. Further, to treat the classes differently will give rise to complications and other undesirable results. It is true that the proposed legislation is not entirely new, but as it is now intended to put it actually into force it is necessary to consider carefully its effects before deliberately confirming and extending it. I have already pointed out some of the effects likely to ensue if the proposed section is allowed to stand as it has emerged from the Select Committee, and I accordingly commend my amendment to the favourable consideration of the Council."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"On the part of the Government I must oppose this amendment. I have already noticed the point, but I will state rather more specifically my reasons for objecting to the amendment. The words my friend objects to add the words which render Native Indian subjects liable to the provisions of the Penal Code in respect of offences committed outside India. That has been the law for twenty years, and the law has been continually put in force when required, but although it has been enforced it has given rise to no trouble and no discussion. Let me read section 8 of the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act of 1879, which extends extra-territorially the law relating to offences and criminal procedure:—

'8. The law relating to offences and to criminal procedure for the time being in force in British India shall, subject as to procedure to such modifications as the Governor General in Council from time to time directs, extend—

(a) to all European British subjects in the dominions of Princes and States in India in alliance with Her Majesty, and

(b) to all Native Indian subjects of Her Majesty in any place beyond the limits of British India.'

"As I said before, it was under the provisions of a law which has been in force for twenty years that a British Indian subject was hanged in India for committing a murder in Perim and that another Indian subject was hanged for a murder committed in Cyprus Then, perhaps, my friend may say—why incorporate it in the Penal Code? I will tell him. The Indian Penal Code, as Hon'ble Members are aware, is re-edited from time to time by the Legislative Department with any amendments that have been made in it. On the face of these editions the Code is misleading and incorrect. It does not show on the face of it what its extent is, because the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act is not an amendment of the Penal Code, although it extends it. Section 4 of the Code professes to apply to servants of Government who commit offences outside India, and that is the only section dealing with extra-territorial offences, so that the Penal Code does not show what is the law and what has been the law for twenty years. The Code, which is the criminal law of India, applies to Native Indian subjects all over the world. Clearly the words my friend wishes to expunge could not be left out. As regards the subsequent words, we make no change relating to Native Indian subjects, but, pursuant to the powers given us by the Statute 32 & 33 Vict., c. 98, s. 1, we make a change as regards British subjects who are not Native Indian subjects. As the law stands at the present moment, a British subject who is not an European British subject is not liable to a British Indian Court in respect of an offence committed in a Native State. The provision of the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act which punishes British subjects for offences committed in India generally relates only to European British subjects, and does not cover, for instance, Cingalese or any one coming from Hong-Kong or Tasmania, or any place of that kind. We go as far as we can under the statute, and we provide that all British subjects who commit offences in any part of India shall be liable to punishment in British Indian Courts. For these reasons I oppose the amendment."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU said:—"Every Government out of British India has its own penal laws and has its unfettered jurisdiction to bring to trial and convict persons who commit offences within it. Necessary legislative facilities exist for their apprehension if, to escape trial, they escape into British India. If their laws do not penalise any acts which British Indian law would hold to be crimes, or if they do not care or choose to prosecute in view to safeguards which may exist there, I see no reason whatever why the British Indian Government should busy itself with such an undertaking.

Every offence is an outrage on the State, or on the society in that State, against its public tranquillity and against its other interests, safeguarded by its penal laws. If the actual sufferers do not mind what a man does or says in their midst, why on earth should we, in India, mind it? Numerous illustrations of how the assumption of power now claimed will work positive and gratuitous injustice are given by the Hon'ble Mr. Sayani in his speech. Till they are conclusively answered and unless they are conclusively answered, I for one cannot agree to this section passing, without the modifications suggested in the amendment before us. It is hardly necessary to point out that, embarking on this scheme of rendering the Indian society ideally perfect, we may often punish for what are offences in the eye of our law, without their being so under the laws of the land which was the seat of the acts or omissions themselves. On the hypothesis that the acts complained of are offences there as here, as well as on the hypothesis that they are offences here but not there, the section proposed seems hurtful and objectionable. These are among my reasons for supporting the amendment purposed by my hon'ble friend Mr. Sayani."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH said:— "The second section of the Bill repeals section 4 of the Indian Penal Code and substitutes for it a new section, which has three sub-sections, one explanation and a number of illustrations.

"The present section 4 extends the Code to extra-territorial offences, so as to declare the provisions of the Code to be applicable also to any offence committed by any Native Indian subject of Her Majesty in any place without and beyond British India.

"The Indian Penal Code came into force on and from the first day of January, 1862, and the existing section 4 has continued in its present form for nearly thirty-six years. So far as I am aware, no necessity has been shewn for introducing the provision embodied in sub-section (1), especially if there is still an enactment in force in respect of the matter for which the proposed measure professes to provide.

"Ordinarily, the law of the country, where a crime is committed, applies to that crime; why should, therefore, an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code, committed by a Native Indian subject of Her Majesty without and beyond British India, be made punishable according to the provisions of that Code, particularly where an act committed by him in such a place happened to be an act not punishable according to the law prevailing there? The alterations proposed in section 4, sub-sections (1), (2), (3), and illustration (a), by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sayani are desirable.

"The Calcutta Bar in their recent letter to the Secretary to the Government of India, Legislative Department, dated the 17th February, 1898, have made an observation in this connection which deserves the consideration of the Council. They point out that under sub-section (1), section 4 of the Bill, 'any Native Indian subject of Her Majesty who petitions the British Parliament for the redress of grievances or against alleged oppression, and thereby excites or attempts to excite any feeling of enmity against the Government of India as by law established, would, though his petition were in such terms as were allowable according to the procedure of the British Parliament, be liable to transportation for life when found in British India'.

"The case they put may, perhaps, be regarded as an extreme one, but it is, I think, necessary to suppose a case of the kind in order to bring out a logical result. One of the Hon'ble Members here has already taken an exception to the illustration, and, though his opinion is entitled to great respect, I regret I am unable to appreciate its soundness."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI moved that in section 108A, as proposed to be inserted in the Indian Penal Code by clause 3 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, for the words "without and beyond British India" the words "within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India" be substituted.

He said :—"The reasons for this proposal are similar to the reasons for the first proposal I have made, and I therefore do not want to take up the time of the Council by making further observations.'

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT :—"Do I understand that the Hon'ble Member withdraws the amendment ?"

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI :—No, my Lord, I do not withdraw it."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said :—"I do not think that this clause is on quite the same footing as the other. It arose from a recommendation of the Bombay Government. The point was this, and it is a point which it is necessary to provide for. The term 'India' is interpreted to mean British India and those parts of native territory which are under the suzerainty of Her Majesty. The case which gave rise to the recommendation from Bombay was this. A person in Bombay abetted the commission of a murder in Goa. Goa is not in India within the meaning of the Act. It is monstrous that a man in Bombay should be able to abet the murder of anybody in Goa or Chandernagore or elsewhere and then go free; we thought, therefore, that the Bombay Government was right in their recommendation. The High Court in deciding the case expressed the hope that legislation would be undertaken, and I think that the legislation is perfectly right."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU said :—"My remarks as regards the previous amendment of my hon'ble friend Mr. Sayani apply to this mutatis mutandis. I propose neither to repeat them nor add to them. I simply refer to them, yet fresh in the memories of my hon'ble colleagues, as the grounds on which I support this amendment as well.''

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH said :—"In order to be consistent I feel I am bound to support the amendment.

"As regards the new section 108A which is proposed to be inserted after section 108 of the Indian Penal Code, I observe that the illustration (a) meets the case which arose some time ago in the Bombay Presidency. But it would be extending too much the operation of the law of abetment in British India as regards all offences generally, when committed beyond British India."

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI said :—"I wish to make one observation, and that is this. My object is not that a man who in British India abets an offence which is committed anywhere else in India should not be punished, but the words are so very wide that if the man, say, in Peru, or Chili, or South Africa, or elsewhere, commits an offence, that offence would, under this section, be abetted by a person in British India. That is my objection."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MAHARAJA BAHADUR OF DURBHANGA moved that in lines 4 and 5 of the new section 124A of the Indian Penal Code as proposed to be substituted by clause 4 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the words "brings or attempts to bring into hatred or contempt or" be omitted. He said :—"I do not wish to take up the time of the Council with any remarks on this amendment, but I would wish briefly to point out that in many of the non-official representations that have been made I see that exception has been taken to the words 'hatred or contempt'. Whether the words are retained or not is a matter of little consequence, because the word 'disaffection' has been so well defined in the explanation that it will practically meet the case. As regards the word 'contempt' I will not say anything beyond what I have already said in my note of dissent. Effective criticism is impossible without exciting a certain amount of contempt for the measure criticised. And it is, I hope, not the wish of the Government to stop all kinds of criticism. The word 'hatred' is perhaps superfluous."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I must oppose this amendment of my hon'ble friend the Maharaja of Durbhanga. I agree with him that it makes very little difference whether the words 'bring into hatred or contempt' are inserted or not, because if they were not inserted they would be there impliedly. They are comprised in the term 'disaffection' according to the decision of the Courts; as Chief Justice Petheram says:—'It is sufficient for the purposes of the section that the words are calculated to excite feelings of ill-will against the Government and to hold it up to the hatred or contempt of the people.' Therefore those words are already by implication in the section: but the very fact that criticisms have poured in on the use of those words shows that it is necessary to unfold the meaning and to explain to people what the section really means. We should have been justified of course in going still further and using words which were deliberately used by the High Court of Allahabad. What were those words used by the Allahabad Court, not in a summing up but in a considered judgment? 'In our opinion any one who, by any of the means referred to in the section, excites or attempts to excite feelings of hatred, dislike, enmity, ill-will or hostility, etc.' As I said before, instead of going further and extending the law, we have rather restricted it."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU said:—"In section 124A, as it is now in the Code, there is but one word—and that comprehensively used—seemingly, i.e., in a technical sense, undefined.

"An objection, on the ground there was not a regular definition of that term, was raised and considered by the Law Commissioners and by Mr. Stephen; and it was set at rest by an assurance that the explanation appended to the section sufficed for all practical purposes. As is but natural, the lay public became satisfied with the assurance of such great authorities—authorities acknowledged as such even to the present day and even judicially.

"Later-day views would not accept that assurance in the spirit in which it was given; and hence the necessity has arisen to reconsider the situation and remove the ambiguity thus caused. This only adds another to the many illustrations of the hackneyed lines about critics in the Essay on Criticism. As the Statute makes a judicial have a greater binding force than a juridical pronouncement, the need has arisen, to my mind, to do away with the chances of subtlety, technicality and personal freaks neutralising the assurance, coupled with which the section 124A was accepted, when it was introduced. In this view, our duty is rigidly limited to this and nothing more and nothing less, viz., so to re-arrange the provisions as to give full effect to the assurance with which the section 124A was deliberately safeguarded. If this is the raison d'être of the present effort at legislation, as in fairness it is bound to be, then the only course open is to adopt my amendments 4 and 5. The why and wherefore of this opinion will be explained when I move those amendments.

"Before going further I must here notice a point just now insisted on by the Hon'ble Mover. He says, in effect, 'Never mind what Mr. Stephen said in his speech. It is inadmissible in the ascertainment of the meaning of the section. What is admissible is the interpretation put on it by Courts.' Speaking thus, he read to us a passage from the judgment of the Allahabad High Court. I quite agree that in a Court of Justice Mr. Stephen's exposition as to the scope of the section would be inadmissible. I equally agree that the Judge who presides has an unfettered right to put his own meaning on the section. But a distinction ought to be recognised between the function of the Judge and the function of the Legislature. The former has the right to evolve the meaning of the section from the expressed words, irrespective of the issue whether those expressed words adequately express the intention of the Legislature. Instances of glaring divergences between what the Legislature intended and what the words expressed are many. Having regard to this, it is our duty to ascertain what we, through our spokesman of the time when the section 124A was introduced, intended to be its scope and how far the Courts have subsequently read it in it or missed it from it. For this purpose and not for the purpose of trying any one in a judicial capacity, we are perfectly entitled to take into account what we, through our recognised mouth-piece, declared the legislative intention to be and endeavour to reassert that intention, with all deference to the Courts which have taken a different view as to the intention actually expressed and not as to the intention which was meant to be expressed.

"But what is fully transparent is that, under the profession of attaining this object and on the plea that Mr. Stephen intended to give India the law in force in England, the words which I ask to be omitted are resorted to—words which introduce obscurity where there was none or which (to take a more favourable or lenient view) quadruple the obscurity which now exists. Dissociated from the explanation which unquestionably throws the necessary light on what is intended to be meant by the word 'disaffection' in the section, there can be no doubt about the latter term remaining unelucidated and therefore so ambiguous as to depend for its interpretation on the idiosyncrasies of the presiding officer of the moment. This difficulty we are bound to get rid of. The question is have we done this? My humble reply is that we have not: but that, on the contrary, we have done two other undesirable things. We have, firstly, indented for words which are far worse, if not the worst which could be chosen, and, secondly, the words we have, as it were, unearthed from their deserved burial-ground, vastly enlarge the scope of the offence of sedition so as to carry it from within the limits of intelligible sense, on to regions, shadowy and calculated to provoke endless and capricious speculation.

"If all this evil is only incident to practices which might be given up as a nasty job, and if it concern individuals merely and not materially prejudice the interests of the public, I for one would not care to bestow much thought on it. But the truth is that it is not so to be disposed of. The public and the Government, far more than the individual writers and speakers concerned, stand in urgent need of the sort of service these individuals can render, and both the public and Government will seriously suffer by unnecessary stringency and unintelligible definition of the limits within which it is safe to write and speak and beyond which it would be an offence to do so.

"In my humble judgment, it is seriously impairing this engine of public good, by involving the law in infinite doubt and considerable obscurity, to keep on the words 'hatred and contempt'. These are indeed very familiar words; but then therein lies the mischief. It is these familiar words which are the parent of endless confusion. The fact that words are familiar necessarily postulates their being understood by different men according to their varying intelligence and their varying degrees of culture. No two men, picked up at random, will have the same precise idea of such words. Degrees and varieties of shades must inevitably belong to such words, as numerous and as differing as the varying grades of men's minds and culture. This is one reason why, for scientific purposes, words out of common are, I believe, chosen, or, if they are utilised, unequivocal definitions are elaborately and carefully supplied. No such attempt is made here and none is quite possible. When Mr. Stephen referred to the definition now in the Penal Code as stating the law, freed from a great amount of obscurity and vagueness which hampered the law of England, he should have had these words in view in my opinion—an opinion that can be dislodged only by my being shown any other equally substantial instances of obscurity and vagueness as having been alluded to by him. I object to these words 'hatred and contempt' in the first instance as having been deliberately cast aside as utterly unsuitable by master-minds who had them before them, and who would have utilised them, if they were really serviceable.

"In the second place, I take exception to them as vastly vaguer and obscurer than the word 'disaffection'. Few will deny, I venture to think, that they are so, standing by themselves. I shall comment upon the words, taking each by itself. Let me take the word 'hatred' first. After the initial attempt was made to turn disaffection and hatred (in its widest sense) into convertible terms, every subsequent Judge, who has had to pronounce upon it, virtually qualified it by some adjective or expression to narrow its prevalent signification for making it admissible for legal use. Farran, C. J., thought fit to qualify it by the adjective political, thereby affording just ground for the necessary implication that by itself the word 'hatred' covered a dangerously wider ground than is safe, legal and just. Mr. Justice

Parsons went further and unequivocally declared that the word 'disaffection' excluded the idea of hatred as it is understood in common parlance. I may point out here that, in citing these differences in the interpretation of the word hatred, I do not in the least pretend to decide who is right and who is wrong. I call attention to the differences merely for the purpose of showing that the word, standing by itself, is of perilous vagueness and obscurity, and that therefore it should be eschewed where precision and perspicuity are the real aim.

"In the third place, I object to it also as included in the word 'disaffection' as explained in explanation 1 and therefore superfluous and misleading as if intended to cover some further idea. I ask wherein lies the difference between hatred and enmity which is in the explanation No. 1? Worcester found none to notice. His Highness the Maharaja of Durbhanga, whose culture is of a very high order, has been able to find none. The hosts of public bodies and persons who have sent us representations—all well cultured men—have found none. For my own part, with such lights as I possess, I have found none. If there is any distinction, it is a revelation yet to be made. None has been vouchsafed up till now and, in my present state of darkness in this respect, I cannot help objecting to its retention alongside of the word 'disaffection.'

"Now, coming to the word 'contempt,' it is, if possible, worse still. Is it not contempt to raise a laugh? Is it not contempt to speak of a measure as ill-conceived or ill-advised and ill-executed, in so far as such a description implies intellectual weakness of its authors and lowers them in general esteem? Is it not contempt to say that the Government has been misled or mistaken in this or other of its measures or administrative acts; for it must mean that the Government was weak-minded enough to be led astray, though the criticism would fall within justifiable limits under the words of eminent Judges. How are these shades of contempt kept out of the section? And yet it is but common-sense that they should be kept out.

"How utterly indefensible it is to include 'exciting hatred or contempt' under the category of an offence can be conclusively shown by a reductio ad absurdum. It must be conceded on all hands that a calm, well-reasoned and logical exposure is perfectly allowable criticism. But then it must necessarily follow that the more conclusive the reasoning and the more complete the exposition, the lower and lower must the persons criticised fall in public esteem, i.e., in other words, there would result a case of deeper and deeper contempt. But such a result should not follow and therefore no good or sound or conclusive criticism should take place. But ex hypothesi it is permissible.

"Having regard to these and other dangers in the use of such words as 'hatred' and 'contempt,' one cannot but feel—let me repeat—that Mr. Stephen and others before him bade adieu to these words, once for all and for ever for perfectly manifest reasons.

"It has been said that it is the English law, and if that were good for England, it must be à fortiori so for India. I beg to demur to each of these two propositions. I am unconvinced that it was ever English law in this sense that any one could be brought up or was ever brought up for exciting 'hatred or contempt' alone. These words were in the charges; but it is notorious that those charges were pleonastic to a degree for reasons which Mr. Stephen has well explained.

"These words are indeed found scattered also in the summings up of Judges to the jury. But it will be readily granted that a summing up at the nisi prius cannot, by itself, be accepted as law. But what is more to the point is that there is not a single case, so far as I am aware, in which a prosecution was started or conviction had—at least within this half a century—on the naked question of offence committed by exciting hatred or contempt, divested of the concommitants of disturbances and breaches of the peace. Up to the present day sedition is an affair of common law in England and the isolated Statute 60 Geo. III and Geo. I, c. 4, section 8, was enacted only to lay down what books or pamphlets, etc., were to be seized and destroyed upon the circulator's conviction—not to lay down the law on which he was to be tried and convicted. As this Statute had not been expressly repealed, Mr. Stephen included its effect in his Digest and Draft Code. But the fact remains that it has been a dead-letter almost ever since it came into being. Therefore, I venture to think that it is incorrect to say that it is English law in the sense of a living law, sanctified by the opinions of any eminent Judges, crystallised into a settled rule and embedded in the consciousness of the people. That it is not of this latter description is, at any rate, clear from the following passages in Sir James Stephen's History of the Criminal Law of England :—

'(a) It is . . worthy of remark that though the law of England, if used in a stringent manner, might be at least as severe as the law of Germany as embodied in the Strafgesetzbuch, it has in practice become almost entirely obsolete, so far as Press offences are concerned, for a period of about fifty years.

(b) Since the Reform Bill of 1832 prosecutions for seditious libel have been in England so rare that they may be said practically to have ceased.

(c) In one word, nothing short of direct incitement to disorder and violence is a seditious libel.'

"Even assuming that it is the English law, it could produce no harm in the face of an effectual guarantee which exists in England : for, by the system under which a criminal is tried in England, a unanimous verdict of a jury of twelve men is, among other safeguards, a great protection. Well has Abbott, C. J., said that 'it is one of the peculiar advantages of our (English) jurisprudence that the conclusion is to be drawn by the unanimous judgment and conscience of twelve men, conversant with the affairs and business of life . . . and not one or more lawyers whose habits might be suspected of leading to the indulgence of too much subtlety and refinement.' With such a guarantee as this the most stringent law must be sufficiently innocuous. If I may be pardoned a simile, this guarantee is like a coat of mail, against which the most rigid law will, like the sharpest sword, fail to do undue harm. With that armour the sharpest sword might be a negligible weapon. Without it, as in this country, it will prove nothing less than a veritable sword of Damocles. But after all, as I have already said, the real question is—not whether what is alleged to be the English law is such or not—but whether, on its intrinsic merits, the proposition proposed is good or vicious, and whether there is need for it if good. That it is most pernicious has been as much my conviction all along, as almost everybody else has not hesitated to declare. Before I close my remarks on this amendment, I must notice the sort of hazy idea that is floating in the minds of some, viz., that some forms of hatred may well be conceived, which, while compatible with a disposition to obey the law or support the Government by law established, might yet need to be discouraged by the terrors of law. Though plausible, this is untenable. In effect this will be lapsing from the firm and intelligible into slippery and dubious ground. I cannot better refute this specious theory than in the words of an article in the last issue of the Madras Law Journal on a distinction made by Farran, C. J. The article says :

'The learned Judge draws a distinction between a man who is at heart loyal and who disapproves of the measures of Government and a man who is a rebel at heart, though ready to obey Government and support its lawful authority. It seems to us that the distinction is metaphysical rather than practical and legal. The only kind of conduct which laws and Courts can enforce is external conduct ; and it would be idle and impracticable for a Court to embark upon an enquiry into the workings of a man's mind, even though his conduct is that of a law-abiding citizen and has no tendency to make his fellow-citizens less law-abiding. So long as the words used by a person do not lead or tend to lead his fellow-subjects to disobey or refuse to support the Government, it would be a most futile task to attempt an examination of his psychological condition.'

"Before I conclude, I crave leave to read to the Council a passage from the latest edition (1896) of Odger on Libel as bearing on the law as to 'bringing into contempt' of the King :—

'Many dicta,' says Odger, 'in the old text-books represent the law as stricter on this point than is stated above. According to Hawkins' Pleas of the Crown, I, c. 6 (8th edition by Curwood, p. 66), and 4 Blackstone 123, c. IX, II, 3, it is high misprision and contempt merely to speak contemptuously of the King or curse him or wish him ill, to assert that he lacks wisdom, valour or steadiness, or, in short, to say anything "which may lessen him in the esteem of his subjects, weaken his government or raise jealousies between him and the people."

'But I can find no decision reported which supports so wide a proposition, and I venture to doubt if, in the present day, it would be deemed a crime to call the King a coward or a fool. Mere words of vulgar abuse can hardly amount to sedition.'

"With these words and reminding you that the words hatred and contempt are not defined, while the word 'disaffection' is attempted to be, I commend to the judgment of the Council the amendment which is before it"

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH said :—"The Bill as originally framed, it appears, was designed as one to amend the Indian Penal Code in relation to extra-territorial offences. It was subsequently deemed expedient to patch up to the Bill certain amendments as well relating to offences of sedition. It is obvious that the arrangement is equally illogical and inartistical. It is, however, not the form of the Bill that troubles us so much as its substance, against which the public feeling is intensely strong.

"The offence of seditious libel appears to have received a kind of statutory definition for the first time in 1819, by Statute 60 Geo. 3 and 1 Geo. 4, c. 8; the words 'any seditious libel tending to bring into hatred or contempt the person of His Majesty,' etc., occur there. That Statute, it seems, was enacted upon a conviction for a blasphemous libel, in order to empower a Court to seize all copies of such libel in possession of a person convicted. It is, therefore, not necessary or desirable that the words used in an old Statute of that kind, nearly a century ago, should be introduced in 1898 into the description of the law of sedition as it is now sought to be defined in section 124A.

"On a brief survey of the history of State trials held in England from January, 1793, down to May, 1881, in connection with seditious libels, I have not been able to trace a single important case in which a person was ever charged with, or convicted of the offence of, 'bringing into hatred or contempt the person of the Sovereign'.

"The words 'hatred and contempt,' being too vague and indefinite, are calculated to lead to mischievous results, and appear to have been borrowed from an old Statute, which I understand is now practically a dead-letter. In a trial held in 1839, since which time prosecutions for seditious libel have been in England so rare that they may be said practically to have ceased, the summing up of the Judge (Littledale, J.) states the modern view of the law on the subject plainly and fully. He is reported to have said 'In one word, nothing short of direct incitement to disorder and violence is a seditious libel.'

"The difference of opinion as disclosed in the recent decisions of the High Courts with regard to the interpretation of term 'disaffection' had abundantly demonstrated the necessity of defining it with precision and accuracy amounting to certainty.

"The danger of retaining the words 'with transportation for life' has already been clearly shown by an improper exercise of discretion in passing the original sentence in the late Satara trial. Punishment of that nature is enormously severe when we bear in mind that according to English law the offence of seditious libel is only a misdemeanour, punishable with imprisonment or fine, such an offender being, besides, treated as a misdemeanant of the first division, who is permitted to maintain himself and allowed other facilities subject to certain disciplinary rules. Surely there is nothing so peculiarly dangerous in the condition of the people here as to necessitate the imposition of a sentence of transportation for life, even in extremely bad cases of exciting disaffection.

"It would no doubt be a difficult task to construe the words 'contempt,' 'hatred' and 'enmity' should occasion arise to do so; and an attempt to define them singly, when 'disaffection' has been left practically undefined, would make confusion worst confounded, besides affecting the symmetry of the section itself.

"For instance, leaving out of consideration the secondary or tertiary sense of these words, 'contempt,' apart from its ordinary signification, which is the act of despising, means, in law, disobedience to the rules or orders of a legislative body, while 'hatred' means very great dislike, aversion or

'enmity.' Thus, it is manifest that 'enmity,' which is one of the words employed in the section in question, is a synonym of 'hatred,' and 'enmity' signifies also 'ill-will,' an expression that is now proposed to be discarded. These are not hair-splitting distinctions which have occurred to me, but which would arise of necessity in determining the true import of these convertible terms. It is unsettled yet whether explanations are to be regarded as part of the law which they mean to explain, but it is certain that the language employed in them should be in strict accordance with that of the scope or context of the section or sections to which such explanations are attached as a matter of arrangement. This rule has not, however, been observed in formulating the explanations 2 and 3 subjoined to the amended section 124A.

"What I mean is that 'exciting or attempting to excite hatred or contempt' is no part of the offence of sedition as described in the text of the section itself, which is obviously limited to the words 'whoever brings or attempts to bring into hatred or contempt,' etc., etc. Notwithstanding that, the same words, that is, 'exciting or attempting to excite hatred or contempt,' are so used in both the explanations 2 and 3 as if they were really the component parts of what constitutes the offence of sedition under the section. These words, thus, improperly used in both the explanations, must, therefore, be omitted for this reason also. Unless bringing into 'contempt' or 'hatred' conveys the same sense as 'exciting hatred or contempt' the text of the section and explanations 1 and 2 are not reconcilable in that respect.

"With due deference I must observe further that the whole section, including its three explanations, is nothing but a process of permutations or combinations of four vague words, viz., 'hatred,' 'contempt,' 'disaffection' and 'enmity,' besides 'disloyalty'. This is certainly a very imperfect and misleading statement of the law which the section professes to lay down, and must either be eliminated or completely modified. Having myself been engaged on the Select Committee in connection with the Criminal Procedure Code, I could not think of moving amendments as regards the present Bill, but as they are already proposed by some of my hon'ble colleagues, I would beg leave to support some of them now, and shall do so as others are duly taken up in their order."

The Hon'ble MR SAYANI said :—"My Lord, I simply beg to say that I am also in favour of this amendment."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MAHARAJA BAHADUR OF DURBHANGA moved that in lines 4 and 5 of the new section 124A of the Indian Penal Code as proposed to be substituted by clause 4 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, before the words "brings or attempts to bring into hatred" the word "intentionally" be inserted. He said :—"My Lord, in moving the second of the amendments that stand in my name, I cannot, as an elected representative of the non-official community, allow the occasion to pass without respectfully calling Your Lordship's attention to the marked opposition with which the present measure has been received by all classes and sections of the non-official public. Their unanimity is as complete as it is perhaps unprecedented. I do not think that it would be possible to name any occasion upon which a legislative measure has met with so little approval and so much unfavourable criticism from the public. The advocates of the Calcutta Bar, the merchants of Calcutta, as represented by the Chamber of Commerce, the large body of Europeans and Eurasians in the metropolis, as represented by the European and Anglo-Indian Defence Association, the British Indian Association, the great body of educated Native opinion in the Bombay Presidency as voiced by the Poona Sarvajanik Sabha and the Presidency Association, the inhabitants of Madras, the Indian National Congress, composed of representatives from all parts of India—these form in themselves a sufficiently formidable body of opposition.

"It is true that in Your Lordship's Council my hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans is understood to intend to give his general support to the measure. But my learned friend has been altogether thrown overboard by his colleagues at the Calcutta Bar, so that he cannot be said to represent their views in any way on the present occasion: and, weighty as his observations always are, they cannot, I submit, be taken to convey more than the expression of his own personal opinion upon the question.

"Coming now to the subject-matter of the amendment, I have to observe that the Hon'ble the Legal Member in moving to introduce the Bill announced that it was his principal object to bring the law of British India with regard to sedition into harmony with that of England. I do not dwell upon the obvious criticism that it does not at all follow, because a certain condition of affairs is suitable and applicable to one country, that the case is identical with regard to a country which is dissimilar and markedly dissimilar in more than one important respect: I am bound to accept, and I fully and unreservedly accept, the Hon'ble the Legal Member's assertion. The hon'ble gentleman is reported to have observed that 'in England words spoken or written with seditious intent constitute a criminal offence, and the intent is presumed from the natural meaning of the words themselves without reference to the feelings of the person who used them.' My Lord, I am no lawyer, nor can I claim to pretend to any legal knowledge: but in a question of this kind there can be no lack of authority accessible alike to the layman and the practitioner, and I have had the curiosity, inasmuch as the question is one of considerable importance, to examine some of these authorities in order to satisfy myself that they were in support of the Hon'ble Legal Member's contention. But with due deference to the hon'ble and learned gentleman, I am obliged to say that they are rather in the opposite direction. To my mind they appear to establish conclusively that in England and according to English law it is necessary, in order to punish a writer or a speaker for sedition, to show that his intention was criminal and seditious, and that his object was to create public disorder. Take the words of the late Mr. Justice Cave in the well-known case of Queen v. Burns, which is reported in the sixteenth volume of Cox's Criminal Cases at page 364. The learned Judge thus interpreted the law of sedition in England:—

'I am unable to agree entirely with the Attorney-General when he says that the real charge is that, though these men did not incite or contemplate disorder, yet, as it was the natural consequence of the words they used, they are responsible for it. In order to make out the offence of speaking seditious words, there must be a criminal intent on the part of the accused, they must be words spoken with a seditious intent, and although it is a good working rule to say that a man must be taken to intend the natural consequences of his acts, and it is very proper to ask a jury to infer, if there is nothing to show the contrary, that he did intend the natural consequences of his acts, yet, if it is shown from other circumstances that he did not actually intend them, I do not see how you can ask a jury to act upon what has then become a legal fiction. I am glad to say that, with regard to this matter, I have the authority of my learned brother Stephen, in his History of the Criminal Law.'

"It will be observed that, according to the English law, to punish a writer or speaker for sedition, it must be shown that his intention was criminal or seditious and that his object was to create public disorder. According to the English law, the criminal intention must be proved. But, according to the proposed law for India, the intention is to be inferred from the words used. As regards the assertion of the Hon'ble the Legal Member that in England the intent is inferred from the words used, I would venture to observe that Sir James Stephen has given a very different testimony, as will be seen from the following lines quoted from his History of the Criminal Law of England and which are those referred to by Mr. Justice Cave in the extract I have just given:—

'The maxim that a man intends the natural consequences of his acts is usually true, but it may be used as a way of saying that, because reckless indifference to probable consequences is morally as bad as an intention to produce those consequences, the two things ought to be called by the same name, and this is at least an approach to a legal fiction. It is one thing to write with a distinct intention to produce disturbances, and another to write violently and recklessly matter likely to produce disturbances.'

"My Lord, I cannot forget that although Sir James Stephen, in spite of the protest of a large section of the Native and European public, thought fit to support the enactment of the Sedition Law of 1870, he yet felt bound to give that protection to freedom of speech and writing to which it is entitled, by providing good safeguards, namely, by making criminal intent and incitement to force essential ingredients of the law of sedition. In his several speeches before this Council, that hon'ble and learned gentleman repeatedly emphasized these points. 'So long as a speaker or writer,' he said when moving for leave to introduce the Bill on the 2nd August, 1870, 'neither directly or indirectly suggests nor intends to produce the use of force, he does not fall within the section.' In this he was but adopting the words of Mr. Justice Cave in the Queen against Burns, where it was laid down that 'there must be a criminal intent on the part of the accused' and that 'the language used by the defendants' must be used 'with the intention to produce violence.' In this he was but expressing the sentiment which we find reiterated in the second volume of his History of the Criminal Law in England, where, after a careful review of all the cases on the subject, he remarks with his usual terseness and forcible directness :

'In one word, nothing short of direct incitement to disorder and violence is a seditious libel.'

"In this view Sir James Stephen is, as I have endeavoured to point out, supported by Mr. Justice Cave in the latest judicial pronouncement on the subject · and I would go further and say that this is the kind of intention that has been laid down by every judicial authority in England, who has considered the question, to be the ingredient of the offence. In my position of a layman it would be impertinent in me to attempt to dogmatize : but I venture to say that I shall be much surprised if it can be shown that there is a single case on record, at any rate in modern times, in which a man in England has ever been charged with sedition, much less tried and convicted for it, unless his words or writings were criminal or seditious and calculated and intended to cause disturbance. Intention such as this is nowhere emphasized and brought into prominence in the amended section and explanations as they have left the hands of the Select Committee.

"Similarly, the other safeguard, namely, incitement to physical force, has also been taken away by the proposed amendments. In short, to create a mere feeling of contempt or hatred against Government, without any intention of doing it and without any incitement to violence so as to resist or subvert its authority, will be enough to make a man liable to be prosecuted. The situation then is this : under the existing law in India, and in England as interpreted by English Judges, the people know that so long as their disapprobation of the Government is compatible with a disposition to render obedience to the authority established by law, they have no chance of being prosecuted on a charge of sedition. 'Let it be shown,' said Sir James Stephen in 1870, 'that the matter complained of was not consistent with a disposition to obey the law ; let it be shown that it was consistent only with a disposition to resist the law by force, and it did fall under the section, otherwise not.' But the effect of the section as amended and of the explanations appended to it is to take away the idea of force and intention altogether. You have to produce only an unfriendly feeling against Government, however mild it may be, and you make yourself liable to be transported for life or at the very least imprisoned with hard labour. Such a provision will make it almost impossible for a journalist or a public speaker, or even public bodies, and perhaps Members of Councils, to criticise the policy and measures of Government with honesty and independence. It has therefore seemed to me, my Lord, that I should lay before Your Lordship's Council the views of the majority of the non-official community upon this important point. The object of my amendment is to make it quite clear, by the insertion of the word 'intentionally,' that an intention to produce the effects contemplated by section 124A is the basis of the offence. In this proposal I am happy to find that I have been so fortunate as to obtain, among others, the weighty and valuable support of the majority of the Hon'ble Judges of the Calcutta High Court, and of the Calcutta Bar. I observe, on reference to the letter received from the High Court, that the majority of the Court are of opinion that it should be clearly stated in the section that the gist of the offence of sedition lies in the intention to produce the effects mentioned therein. I need not dwell upon the importance or upon the significance of such a declaration from such a body. To the deliberate opinion of these matured and judicial minds I have to add that of the Calcutta Bar. It is in the ranks of the Calcutta Bar that Your Lordship will find some of the most brilliant intellects and some of the ripest and most experienced lawyers in the country. I have only to mention such names as those of Sir Charles Paul, Mr. Pugh, Mr. Jackson, Mr. Bonnerjee and Mr. Garth to command instant assent to my proposition. What do these learned counsel and their colleagues of the Bar say with regard to this matter?

"The gist of the offence undoubtedly is the intentionally exciting or attempting to excite feelings incompatible with due obedience as a subject and disposition to assist the Government of the country in time of need. Anything short of this may be defamation, but it is not sedition.

"The force of circumstances has devolved upon my unworthy self the task of acting as the spokesman of the views of this learned body, than whom no better exponents of the law are to be found in this country. But they do not stand alone. Apart from the legal profession and the majority of the Hon'ble Judges, we have, as I have already pointed out, the British Indian Association, the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce, the European and Anglo-Indian Defence Association, the Bombay Presidency Association, the large and representative conference of Calcutta notabilities presided over by my friend Maharaja Bahadur Sir Jotindra Mohan Tagore, and a host of minor bodies and associations, united in opposition to this measure. I would respectfully ask Your Lordship and the Hon'ble the Legal Member, in face of these representations, to consider the advisability of accepting the amendment now before the Council. 'It is a principle of natural justice as well as of law,' said Lord Chief Justice Kenyon in the old case of Fowler v. Padget, 'that the intent and the act must both concur and constitute the crime.' 'It is undoubtedly a principle of English criminal law,' says Mr. Justice Wills in the case of The Queen against Tolson, 'that, ordinarily speaking, a crime is not committed if the mind of the person doing the act in question be innocent.' Mr. Justice Cave's observations in the same case are very similar.

'At common law,' he says, 'an honest and reasonable belief in the existence of circumstances which, if true, would make the act for which the prisoner is indicted an innocent act, has always been held to be a good defence. Honest and reasonable mistake stands in fact on the same footing as absence of the reasoning faculty, as in infancy, or perversion of that faculty, as in lunacy. So far as I am aware, it has never been suggested that these exceptions do not equally apply in the case of statutory offences unless they are excluded expressly or by necessary implication. Now it is undoubtedly within the competence of the Legislature to enact that a man shall be branded as a felon and punished for doing an act which he honestly and reasonably believes to be lawful and right; just as the Legislature may enact that a child or a lunatic shall be punished criminally for an act which he has been led to commit by the immaturity or perversion of his reasoning faculty. But such a result seems so revolting to the moral sense that we ought to require the clearest and most indisputable evidence that such is the meaning of the Act.'

"Again, in his judgment in the same leading case, Mr. Justice Stephen observes—

'The principle involved appears to me, when fully considered, to amount to no more than this. The full definition of every crime contains expressly or by implication a proposition as to a state of mind. Therefore, if the mental element of any conduct alleged to be a crime is proved to have been absent in any given case, the crime so defined is not committed, or again, if a crime is fully defined, nothing amounts to that crime which does not satisfy that definition.'

"Lastly, I will quote the judgment of Lord Esher, then Mr. Justice Brett, in the case of The Queen v. Prince, reported in Law Reports, 2 Crown Cases Reserved, at page 162:—

'It would seem that there must be proof to satisfy a jury ultimately that there was a criminal mind or mens rea in every offence really charged as a crime. In some cases the proof of the committal of the acts may primâ facie either by reason of their own nature, or by reason of the form of the statute, import the proof of the mens rea. But even in those cases it is open to the prisoner to rebut the primâ facie evidence, so that, if in the end the jury are satisfied that there was no mens rea or criminal mind, there cannot be a conviction in England for that which is by the law considered to be a crime.'

"In this view of the law, as stated by the late Master of the Rolls, all the other Judges, fifteen in number, before whom the matter was heard, practically acquiesced, and Mr. Justice Hawkins in The Queen against Tolson, expresses his entire agreement with it as expressive of his own views touching the principles of law which govern such questions. We have it then, my Lord, on the authority of these eminent Judges, that intention is primâ facie the gist and the essential ingredient of every criminal offence. Of course, as Mr. Justice Hawkins has pointed out, the rule that there must be a mind at fault before there can be a crime, is not an inflexible one, and a statute may relate to such a subject-matter and may be so framed as to make an act criminal whether there has been any intention to break the law or otherwise to do wrong or not. In such cases the acts are properly construed as imposing the penalty when the act is done, no matter how innocently, and in such a case the substance of the enactment is that a man shall take care that the statutory direction is obeyed, and that, if he fails to do so, he does it at his peril But to what class do these statutes almost entirely belong? It will be found, my Lord, as I venture to think, that they are concerned mainly with the large body of municipal law which has been brought into being by the needs of the present day and which is conceived chiefly in this spirit, regulating as it does a variety of matters necessary for the welfare, health or convenience of the community. It is not, I trust, intended to place the law of sedition on the same footing as such enactments The offence contemplated by the term 'sedition' is a serious one. Is a man to be held to have committed sedition 'unintentionally'? Is it intended that the mere fact of prosecution under this section (which, although it is undertaken under the sanction of Government, must after all be based on an ex parte representation of facts) should be treated as primâ facie evidence of guilt, unless the accused succeeds in establishing his innocent intention? It may no doubt make it more difficult to obtain a conviction if the onus of proving criminal intent is thrown on the prosecution. But criminal intent is the essence of the offence according to English law The Hon'ble the Legal Member has told us that our present task has been undertaken with a view to assimilate the law of India on the point with that of England. I am unable to conceive that a trial for sedition differs in any way from a trial for any other penal offence. It is an established rule, and a salutary one, that in all penal cases the accused is entitled to demand that his guilt shall be fully proved against him by the prosecution beyond all reasonable doubt. The burden of proof, says a leading legal text-book, is always on the party asserting the existence of any fact which infers legal accountability. This is a universal rule of jurisprudence founded upon evident principles of justice, and it is a necessary consequence that the affirmant party is not absolved from its obligation because of the difficulty which may attend its application. To prove a negative is in most cases difficult, in many cases impossible. Criminality is therefore never to be presumed. Your Lordship's Government is so situated in this country that under favourable circumstances the assistance of the Press is not only valuable, but necessary. Honest and free criticism on the acts, measures and conduct of the Government are welcome, inasmuch as the Government are enabled thereby to discover the thoughts that are at work in the minds of the people. I do not hold a brief on behalf of the Indian Press. I am not asserting that there are not ignorant and malevolent journalists whose conduct is not only reprehensible but deserving of punishment. Let them be punished by all means: but let it be clearly and unmistakably shown that they will not be punished unless they intentionally incite to sedition. Under the proposed section it seems to me that it is quite possible to punish a journalist or a public speaker who is only guilty of using indiscreet language calculated at most to give rise to passing feelings of irritation. But what did Sir James Fitzjames Stephen say upon the subject from his seat in Your Lordship's Council in 1870?—

'The section now before the Council did not make it criminal to do things which people knew to be likely to excite disaffection. To punish the doing of an act which you knew to be likely to produce disaffection might be to punish a man for doing an act which he had a right to do, although it produced disaffection. He could imagine many things which a public man might have a right to do, even at the expense of exciting disaffection, but which nevertheless should not be punishable.'

"I am afraid I have been taking up too much time of the Council by these lengthy quotations. But I have to ask the Council to allow me to quote only once more, and that from the letter that was received yesterday from the Calcutta Bar:—

'The result of this Bill, if passed into law, will make it penal amongst other things—

(1) effectively to criticise the policy of the Government with reference, for example, to the present war beyond the frontier;

(2) effectively to oppose and to give true utterance to the feelings of the people, or a section of the people, against a proposed tax that may be considered oppressive;

(3) to present a petition for the redress of serious grievances, showing the existence of such grievances hitherto unredressed;

and to leave it in the discretion of the Executive Government to prosecute or not.'

"If, however, Government thinks fit in exceptional cases to make it a penal offence for a journalist or a public speaker to use indiscreet language, even if his object is perfectly harmless, I have nothing further to say on the subject. Perhaps in times of exceptional political excitement it may be advisable to use the powers proposed by this section to prevent the spread of public discontent. But what I wish to point out is that in cases like these the mere infliction of a fine at most is likely to prevent any recurrence of similar acts of indiscretion. In my humble opinion the law should distinctly lay down the difference between intentional offences against the State and rash or negligent actions. I fully sympathise with Your Lordship's Government in their efforts. to put the law of sedition on a sounder and clearer basis than it stands at present. And it is only with this object in view that I have considered it my duty to put before Your Lordship the views held by the majority of the Indian public. It is now for the Government to decide how far they are prepared to meet their wishes.

"One thing, however, I must mention before I conclude. On a former occasion also an Act was passed to repress sedition, but this Act had afterwards to be repealed. I allude to the Vernacular Press Act; and I am glad to find that in dealing with the same question Your Lordship has avoided making any invidious distinction between different classes of newspapers and public speakers. And I feel sure th t those who have studied the subject feel deeply grateful to Your Lordship for it."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I must oppose this amendment. These words do not occur in the existing section which has been in force for the last twenty years. No such consequences as the Bar seem to read into the section have occurred from the old section. I am unwilling to change the language used in the section which has stood for thirty years. As regards the English law, my hon'ble friend the Maharaja of Durbhanga says that he speaks as a layman, but I must congratulate him on presenting to the Council a learned legal argument. He takes to the law as a duck takes to the water I can only congratulate the Bar of Calcutta that the Hon'ble Maharaja is not there to compete with them and to take away their practice from them. As regards the substance of his argument, I am afraid I have not the same facility for picking up law as he has, and I cannot answer him fully at a moment's notice, but I will just cite two short extracts in reply. He has referred several times to the words and the writings of my predecessor Sir James Fitzjames Stephen. I will read to him article 99 of Stephen's Digest of the Criminal Law of England and what he says about intention. Article 99 runs—

'In determining whether the intention with which any words were spoken, any document was published, or any agreement was made, was or was not seditious every person must be deemed to intend the consequences which would naturally follow from his conduct at the time and under the circumstances in which he so conducted himself.'

"I will read also a few lines from a very well known work, Taylor on Evidence. Speaking of conclusive presumptions of the common law, section 80, last edition, it is said—

'It is again conclusively presumed that every sane man of the age of discretion contemplates the natural and probable consequences of his own acts. Thus an intent to kill is conclusively inferred from the deliberate violent use of a deadly weapon; on an indictment for cutting with intent to do the prosecutor some grievous bodily harm, the prisoner is rightly convicted, though it appeared that his real intent was to wound another person; an intent to defraud a particular party will be conclusively presumed on an indictment for forgery, provided the defrauding of such party would be the natural result of the prisoner's act, if successful, and this even though it be proved that the prisoner did not entertain the intention charged; and on a charge of arson for setting fire to a mill, an intent to injure or defraud the mill-owners will be conclusively inferred from the wilful act of firing. The same doctrine would, apparently, on principle, apply to all other crimes.'

"Well, if we put the word 'intention' into the Act as my friend the Maharaja suggests, we must also put in Sir Fitzjames Stephen's article 99, which shows after all that the word 'intention' is a legal fiction—Mr. Justice Cave has pointed out that it is a legal fiction. We have nothing to do with what a man thinks and feels, but we have to do with his acts, judged by reference to their probable consequences. That is what Mr. Justice Stephen lays down in article 99, and what Mr. Justice Cave has pointed out in his summing up. Of course a man's intentions are only known to himself. When you come to deal with the question of intention in law, you must take what he has done, you must consider the circumstances in which he has said or done a particular thing, and you must infer the intention from that. I think, therefore, if we accepted this amendment, we should not be in any way helping the cause which—I was going to say my hon'ble friend, but I will say my hon'ble and learned friend—has so ably advocated."

The Hon'ble GANGADHAR RAO MADHAV CHITNAVIS said:—"My Lord, with regard to this question of intention, I would, with due deference to the Hon'ble the Legal Member, beg to remark that it has been somewhat cruelly banished from all considerations in the proposed law. The intention will be presumed from the natural meaning of the words themselves, without reference to the actual feelings of the persons who used them. Thus an accused under the proposed law would be left very little chance of being allowed to prove his intention except from what might be apparent from the words themselves forming the subject-matter of the charge. There is not the least doubt that words are the natural outward expressions of the mind, and no man whose mind has not been deranged would say anything which he had not meant. But, then, there are at least some indiscreet people in this world who use words without foreseeing what the natural consequences from the use of such words may be; upon such persons the proposed law would operate a little too severely. In my humble opinion there ought to be some room in the law for such foolish men to prove what their intentions were, apart from what might be presumed from the natural meaning of the words. How often do we hear or read expressions like these, 'what a contemptible Government it is to levy a tax on a famine-stricken people'; 'what a swindle it is to pay the Services in 1*s*. 3*d*. rupees when they were promised to be paid in 2 shillings the rupee'. Such expressions are, as a distinguished officer in the Civil Service of Bengal has pointed out, the outcome of a man's supposed right 'to have his grumble', and cannot in fairness be considered seditious. It would be hard, my Lord, if the section 124A be enforced in cases like these. Then, again, do we not find almost daily men in high position—men of light and leading, men esteemed by society as highly intellectual and commanding the respect of nations—expressing regret to each other in words like these?—

'I did not mean what I said', or 'I am sorry my words hurt your feelings, but I never intended to hurt them; pray accept my sincere apology.'

"No one will deny, my Lord, that there is room for such things in this world even amongst the most highly-cultured and intellectual of men. If then a poor half-educated Indian editor in an unguarded moment or through want of sufficient foresight writes anything, from the natural meaning of which seditious intent might be presumed, would the law allow him no chance of escape? It will be answered perhaps that the Judges of the land would undoubtedly exercise their discretion in regulating the amount of punishment in such cases. But I leave the question entirely to Your Excellency's merciful consideration whether the ends of justice would not be more properly met by a lenient framing of the law and a vigorous administration of it where necessary, than by a rigorous legislation, leaving the accused to the doubtful mercies of a Criminal Judge.

"With these words, my Lord, I beg to support the amendment proposed by the Hon'ble the Maharaja of Durbhanga."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS said:—"I also oppose this amendment. The speech of the Hon'ble Mover was directed mainly to two points—first, that the word 'intentionally' should be inserted before the words 'excites or attempts to excite'; second, that an incitement to force should be necessary to constitute a crime under this section. As to the first point, it is to be observed that the word 'intentionally' is not in the old section which has been in force twenty-eight years without complaint as to its omission.

"The words defining the offence are 'excites or attempts to excite feelings of disaffection.' Now as to the first branch 'excites feelings of disaffection,' the indictment under this branch would have to be that the accused by certain words spoken or written had actually excited such feelings. But it is only possible to prove this in the case of an orator addressing inflammatory words to an assembly of people who show by their cries and acts that they are so excited as by going forth at once and committing acts of violence.

"I have never known any case in which a Judge was asked to convict on a written article under this head, still less one where there was a conviction. The reason is that it is impossible to prove that any such feelings were in fact excited by the writing. So that this first branch is inserted only to meet very exceptional cases.

"The key to the omission of the word 'intentionally' before the word 'excites' may possibly be found in the passage quoted from Sir Fitzjames Stephen by Cave, J., in the charge referred to by the Maharaja:—

'Even in those cases, however (i.e., cases where criminal intent was an essential element), the introduction of the term "intent" occasionally led to a failure of justice or to the employment of something approaching a legal fiction in order to avoid it.'

"Sir Fitzjames Stephen goes on to observe that reckless indifference to probable consequences may be as bad as a distinct intention to produce those consequences, but that they are not the same, though the former is often punished as 'intentional' by means of the rule of law that a man must be taken to intend the natural consequences of his acts, which rule he terms 'an approach to a legal fiction'.

"It may well be that, for those rare cases where the speakers can be proved to have actually excited such feelings by their words, Sir Fitzjames Stephen and the Law Commissioners did not think it desirable to provide expressly for the presence of 'intention', and so force the Courts to use what he terms a legal fiction, or else leave unpunished a grave offence.

"But with regard to the second branch (under which alone a writer has been or ever can be convicted)—'attempts to excite feelings of disaffection'—in this case the element of intention is sufficiently expressed in the word 'attempts'.

"To 'attempt' to produce a result is to try or endeavour to produce that result, and the tribunal must find as a fact by the perusal of the article and a consideration of such facts as may be before them whether the accused did 'attempt,' try or endeavour 'to excite hatred against the Government or disaffection'. If the tribunal does not find this, the man must be acquitted as it is for the 'attempt' he is tried. To insert the word 'intentionally' before 'attempts' seems wholly unnecessary, and would only tend to obscure the matter and introduce confusion as in the case of an ex-employé who attempted to wreck a train by placing an obstruction on the line and who was convicted of a minor offence, because his 'intention' was to get another employé into trouble and he was indifferent as to whether he wrecked the train or not so long as he gained his object.

"So too in the explanations we find the words 'without exciting or attempting to excite', and here too the same comment holds. The mob orator who, under the guise of expressing disapprobation, is proved to have actually excited the mob to rioting, will derive no comfort from the explanations. But the writer who expresses his disapprobation in strong terms is in no danger from the words 'without exciting', for, as I have shown, it is practically impossible to legally prove that he actually excited natural contempt or disaffection in anybody by his writing.

"The words the writer has to look to are the words 'without attempting to excite'. He may express his disapprobation as strongly as he pleases so long as he does not 'attempt to excite natural contempt or disaffection against the Government as by law constituted in British India'. Whether what he writes is honest though severe criticism on the acts of the Government, or is an 'attempt' to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, must be judged by the tribunal before which he is tried, and which tribunal must be credited with honesty of purpose and average common-sense.

"I have dealt with this point at length because much of the alarm created by the alteration of the section rests, I think, upon the mistaken idea that liberty of criticism is endangered by the word 'excites' in the section and 'without exciting' in the explanation.

"The explanation is not an exception and is merely intended as an instance of what can be done without contravening the section and also for the purpose of emphasizing the fact that disapprobation is not disaffection. It has been said that a majority of the High Court of Calcutta desired that words should be inserted making intention the gist of the offence, but it was a majority of one, and the minority contains many names deserving of respect; and I err (if error there be) in company with this very weighty minority of the Judges in thinking that the proposed amendment is not necessary.

"As to the observations as to incitement to use force being necessary, they do not appear to be germane to this particular amendment, and as the Maharaja agrees with me, as I gather, that attempts to excite hatred against the Government ought to be punished, though not under this section, and as I have already expressed my opinion on this point, I need say no more about it now."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU said:—"I strongly support this amendment. After the copious remarks contained in the Maharaja's excellent and exhaustive speech, I have little to add. I never understood till to-day that the Hon'ble Mover wanted virtually to eliminate 'intention' from being the very essence of this offence. He said in his speech on the 21st December last—

'In England, words written or spoken with seditious intent constitute a criminal offence, and the intent is presumed from the natural meaning of the words themselves, without reference to the actual feelings of the person who used them.'

"By this utterance I thought that the Hon'ble Mover fully conceded that intent was the essence of the offence, but that he merely contended that the evidence of that intent was the words alone and nothing else. Inasmuch as it is abundantly clear by this time that the concessions and expositions of movers go for nothing, I only thought that what has been undisputed must be made to appear on the face of the section itself, and hence this and other similar amendments on my part. But I never dreamt that the Hon'ble Mover would ever take up the attitude he has taken up to-day. He now virtually says that he would not put into the section itself the word 'intentionally'

'or anything else which would in any way enlarge his views as to the evidence of intent. This is hardly a correct position to take. That there is another and sounder view to take as to what amounts to the evidence of intent is clear from the exposition of Cave, J., in the case against Burns and others. I meant to quote that passage, but as it is already cited by the Maharaja, I merely allude to it. It is for Judges and not for us or the Hon'ble Mover to lay down what should be regarded as evidence of intention. I would therefore so word the section as to leave it for Judges to choose between the Hon'ble Mover and Cave, J., on this point. It has been said, as I expected it to be said, that in the section, as it now exists in the Penal Code, there is no word ' intention ', and that we were content all these years. That Sir Griffiths Evans should also re-echo this and insist upon it is to me a surprise. I have only to point out in refutation of this special pleading that the word disposition fairly gives prominence to intention; for where else is disposition? It is surely not in the leg or the arm."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH said :—" The amendment is a reasonable one, and is not adequately met by the plea of limitation or efflux of time that has so often been urged by the Hon'ble the Legal Member. The Hon'ble the Maharaja Bahadur does not care to share with us the emoluments of our profession; nor does his modesty claim the much-coveted designation of ' learned ', but his presence here and the advocacy by him of the cause of the people in connection with this Bill indicate that he merely feels the responsibility that rests upon his shoulders."

The Hon'ble the MAHARAJA BAHADUR OF DURBHANGA said :—"I simply put forward these amendments in order to indicate the changes that are thought necessary by the non-official bodies whom I represent; at least I have tried my best to put their views in the form of these amendments. I have only done my duty. And it is for the Government to decide how far they are prepared to accept them."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU moved that in line 8 of section 124A of the Indian Penal Code as proposed to be substituted by clause 4 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the words " and with the intention of exciting disaffection" be inserted after the word " India " and before the word " shall." He said :—" The observations which I made in supporting the Hon'ble Maharaja's amendment are the only reasons I have to give in supporting that which I now propose."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU moved that in the same section, in lines 8, 9 and 10, the words " with transportation for life or any shorter term to which fine may be added or " be omitted. He said :—" The reasons which support this amendment have already been mentioned in one or other of the speeches already made. They are by this time familiar enough to the Hon'ble Members. At this late hour I do not propose to repeat them. It is useless to repeat them if the remarks already made failed to convince. With these words I move the amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said :—" I must oppose this amendment. I have already stated the grounds on which I oppose it. This is the old punishment which has been in force for nearly thirty years. There were a certain number of cases tried under the old section, and we find that in spite of my friend's fears very small punishments have been imposed. It is quite true that one Court imposed a sentence of transportation for life, but the High Court reduced the sentence to one, I think, of eighteen months' imprisonment. All these sentences can come before the High Court in one way or another, and we have that guarantee that no sentence of improper severity would be allowed to stand. I have already pointed out that sedition is an offence of which the gravity greatly varies according to time, place and circumstance; that we must in exceptional cases retain the extreme punishment while we also provide for minor offences by a nominal punishment, and further, if jurisdiction is given to Magistrates, we provide effectively that in those cases a sentence of more than two years cannot be passed, and even that sentence will be liable to revision by the High Court."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI moved that in section 124A of the Indian Penal Code as proposed to be substituted by clause 4 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, before the word "imprisonment," in line 10, the word "simple" be inserted. He said:—"A careful perusal of the section shows that there are three classes of punishments provided by the section according to the gravity or lightness of the offences. For the offences of the gravest kind the punishment provided is transportation for life or any shorter term, to which fine may be added. For offences of a moderate kind the punishment provided is imprisonment, to which fine may be added. For cases of a trivial nature the punishment provided is fine. It is reasonable, therefore, to assume that the imprisonment intended to be awarded is simple imprisonment, especially when it is remembered that the offence intended to be punished is a political offence. Now the word 'imprisonment' under the law means imprisonment of either description, both rigorous and simple, and hence I propose the amendment with a view that there may be no ambiguity in the matter and that the intention of the Legislature may be clearly expressed."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I must oppose the amendment, and I would suggest to the Council that they should retain the punishment which has been in force in India for thirty years. As regards my Hon'ble friend's last argument let me point out this. If a Court thought that a sentence, say, of eighteen months' hard labour would meet the case, you could not quash that sentence. I think the orders are that no sentence of transportation could be passed for less than seven years. Well, then, because the Court cannot give the man eighteen months' hard labour, they must sentence him to transportation for seven years. There is no alternative, and thus the result would be that the amendment would tend not to mitigate, but to increase, the sentence in severity."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU said:—What I said on the amendment proposed just before applies to this. I support the amendment."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MAHARAJA BAHADUR OF DURBHANGA moved that for explanations 1, 2 and 3 to the same section the following explanation be substituted, namely:—

"Explanation.—Feelings of disaffection mean all feelings incompatible with a disposition to render obedience to the lawful authority of the Government established by law in British India, and to support the lawful authority thereof against unlawful attempts to subvert or resist that authority."

He said:—"The chief reason why I move this amendment is that I find there is a strong feeling existing that the word 'disaffection' has not been properly defined, and of all the suggestions made to us by different bodies this seems to be about the best definition. Nobody can say that this suggestion was made with any disloyal motive. The name of the European and Anglo-Indian Defence Association is a sufficient guarantee that it is not submitted with a disloyal motive."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I regret to say I must oppose this amendment. What it practically comes to is this—it is a point which has been discussed again and again. It is a question whether sedition is to be defined to mean stirring up hatred or enmity against the Government, or whether it is to be defined to mean stirring up hatred under such circumstances as involve an appeal to force or violence. It is putting that old question again in different words. Having regard to the conditions we have to deal with in India, I must oppose that idea altogether. We must stop sedition at an earlier stage. What we want to do is to have the power to stop people who promote feelings of discontent throughout the population, who do not themselves suggest a resort to violence, but who employ themselves in breeding feelings of discontent trusting to somebody else to set fire to the train and start the explosion. It is wholly immaterial whether a writer himself advocates violence or not. For myself I have a greater feeling of respect for the man who honestly preaches violence than for the man who simply sows the seeds of discontent waiting for somebody else to gather the crop, he himself keeping out of the way. For the reasons which I have already given I must oppose this amendment."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS said:—"I, too, oppose this amendment on somewhat different grounds from those of the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers. What this amendment means is really this: in the old section as it stood the crime was an attempt to excite feelings of disaffection. No definition of disaffection was given; it was deliberately left out, but an explanation was given which said that disapprobation of the measures of Government, such disapprobation as is compatible with a disposition to obey and support the Government, is not disaffection. Now this explanation points out that disapprobation is not disaffection, but that even to disapprobation there are certain limits, and that the disapprobation which you may lawfully seek to excite is limited by this—it must be such disapprobation as is compatible not only with a disposition to render obedience but with a disposition to support lawful authority. Now this is, as I understand it, loyalty. It must be a disposition not only to render obedience to the Government, but to come to the assistance of the Government in any invasion or attack or any attempts to subvert it. A disposition to support means active loyalty. Disposition to support means readiness to support. Now it is proposed to make this (instead of being, as it is in the section, a limit to disapprobation) an exhaustive definition of the word 'disaffection'. I would point out to this Council that only the other day the Statesman, which is certainly not in favour of this Bill, pointed out that this definition is defective. The feelings sought to be excited might be compatible at the present moment with rendering obedience to the Government and even coming to the support of it, if the Government was so irresistibly strong that it was known that any other course would be dangerous, and yet if the feelings sought to be excited were such as tended to weaken the tendency or disposition to support the Government and render obedience, that might be a grave offence and yet would not come within this definition. A great deal of argument is capable of being raised with regard to what feelings are compatible with a disposition to obedience and a disposition to support. Instead of putting to the jury or to the Judge the question, did the accused try to make the people hate the Government or not, we are asked to put the question whether the feelings of hate he has endeavoured to instil are such as are incompatible with a disposition to render lawful obedience. To illustrate the difficulty I will read to the Council the words of a very celebrated man, Ram Mohun Roy, in a petition made by him and other Hindu inhabitants of Calcutta against Press restrictions which existed in 1823. The petition has been published in one of the Calcutta papers, Reis and Rayet, and I take it from there. This is the third paragraph:—

'The greater part of Hindustan having been for several centuries subject to Muhamadan rule, the civil and religious rights of its original inhabitants were constantly trampled upon; and, from the habitual oppression of the conquerors, a great body of their subjects in the Southern Peninsula (Dukhin), afterwards called Marhattahs, and another body in the western parts, now styled Sikhs, were at last driven to revolt, and, when the Mussulman power became feeble, they ultimately succeeded in establishing their independence; but the natives of Bengal, wanting vigour of body, and averse to active exertion, remained during the whole period of the Muhammadan conquest faithful to the existing Government, although their property was often plundered, their religion insulted, and their blood wantonly shed.'

"So according to this it is possible for the people to be convinced that their blood is wantonly shed, that their religion is trampled on and their property plundered, and this state of mind may be consistent with faithfulness to the Government so long as they think the Government is too strong for them.

"Then he goes on—

'Divine Providence at last, in its abundant mercy, stirred up the English nation to break the yoke of those tyrants, and to receive the oppressed natives of Bengal under its protection.'

"Are we prepared to have the people imbued with such feelings that they will thank God for their deliverance from the British Raj?

"I think it is safer not to attempt to define disaffection as Sir Fitzjames Stephen also thought, though perhaps it might be difficult to find a better definition than this if it were not for the use that is sought to be made of the words 'compatible, etc.,' which were in the old explanation. It is said that they amounted to a quasi definition in that they had been authoritatively interpreted by Sir Fitzjames Stephen in his speech as meaning that nothing was an offence under this except an incitment to violence, and that the Courts had gone wrong in deciding otherwise. This to my mind is the only reason for altering the section. But in fact there is no allusion to force in these words: on the contrary, they seem to say in plain English that disapprobation may pass into disaffection when it becomes incompatible with a disposition or readiness and willingness to obey and support the Government, that is incompatible with an actual loyal frame of mind. But for the persistent claim to have these words construed by Sir Fitzjames Stephen's speech into something which they do not mean in plain English, I see no reason for altering the old section, which as interpreted by the Allahabad High Court to mean practically the same as the present section is intended to mean. As I have already said, I would not myself have altered the old section, but if it is to be altered it should be so altered as not to give any ground for the contention that incitement to force is necessary to constitute an offence under the section. As to the state of things in England, I have dealt with it in my previous observations."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU moved that the following provisos be added to the proposed new section 124A, namely:—

"Provided that no one shall be deemed to have committed an offence under this section by reason only that he has attempted in good faith—

(a) to show that Her Majesty has been misled or mistaken in her measures or policy: or

(b) to point out errors or defects in the Government established by law in British India with a view to reformation of such alleged errors or defects by lawful means: or

(c) to point out, in order to their removal by lawful means, matters which are producing or have a tendency to produce disaffection in Her Majesty's subjects: or

(d) to incite Her Majesty's subjects to attempt to procure by lawful means the alteration of any matter by law established: or (e) to express disapprobation of the administrative or other action of the Government."

He said:—"In moving this amendment I must say that I attach very great importance to it. I admit that the Hon'ble Mover's explanations cover the whole ground covered by the proviso and the several branches of the proviso I propose to substitute. But mere abstract and aphoristic propositions are not as good guides to the lay mind as are concrete and illustrative indications of the several directions in which criticism is allowable. Let me point out that when Mr. Stephen drew up his Draft Code for the English public—a public far better educated and which spoke the same language as the language of the Code as its mother tongue—such concrete and illustrative provisos were put in in his section 102 of that Code as needful. To Indians such a help is far more necessary. The several branches of the proviso I suggest have, besides, another decided advantage. They utilise and actually incorporate the very words and statements in which eminent Judges explained in what directions and for what purposes criticism was allowable. This is a safeguard which the Indian public rightly expect at the hands of their Legislature. I can conceive of no reasonable objection to this plain and elucidatory course commanding acceptance."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I must oppose this amendment. I need only say a word or two. I think it is covered by the existing explanations. These explanations, as I think my hon'ble friend has pointed out, are taken mainly from the Report of the Criminal Code Commission, or at least they correspond with that, and they relate rather to the original words of the Criminal Code Commission than to the words used here. I think, however, that our two explanations cover all the ground required. They cover the measures of Government which it is proposed to reverse; they cover also the measures of Government which it is proposed not to reverse but merely to criticise. I think these two clauses sum up all the criticism that can be required."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR said:—"The proposal is that these provisos should be added to the new section 124A, and I think with my hon'ble friend Mr. Chalmers that that is quite unnecessary, and that the explanations as they now stand do practically cover everything that is required. I should not have been sorry to have seen the explanations themselves drafted on the lines of these provisos, but, as that has not been thought desirable, I really do not think it necessary to add them as provisos to the present explanations."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU also moved that in explanation 1 to the new section 124A of the Indian Penal Code as proposed to be substituted by clause 4 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the word "means" be substituted for the word "includes" in line 2 thereof. He said:—"I lay considerable stress on this amendment. Now that we have the most comprehensive words 'all feelings of enmity' in explanation 1, what is the ground left uncovered? Why have a further loophole? Outside the area covered by the phrase 'all feelings of enmity' there can only be either friendliness or apathy. Are these or any part of these ever meant to be viewed as disaffection? If there is any other tangible and intelligible state of mind which should be penalised, and which we can realise and formulate, by all means let us have it now and have done with it by being put into the section once for all, and by closing the door for speculation once for all, so far as it may lie in us. If we can think of none such, let us substitute 'means' for 'includes.' Otherwise we shall some day be told by some sapient Judge that even the word 'wilful,' which we have deliberately dispensed with, is involved in the section, and then our Select Committee's reports, our expositions in the Council and even the unmistakeable assurances of the Hon'ble Mover will be absolutely of no avail."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I must oppose this amendment. I do not think it would be safe to allow it. 'Disaffection' is a term which has been interpreted and interpreted frequently by the Courts in India. What we want to do in this explanation is to call attention to the two most obvious states of feeling which we include under the term, but I do not know that we want to exclude all others. As the explanation originally ran it included the term 'ill-will.' The Committee cut out the term 'ill-will,' and I think my friend will agree with me that the reason we cut it out was this. We thought 'ill-will' was to wide a term. It includes certain classes of feelings of ill-will which may be quite compatible with loyalty. It includes also of course feelings which are identical with disloyalty. It was a bad term to use because it covered too wide a field. But I do not feel inclined to cut down the discretion of the Courts as regards the term 'disaffection.' Let me refer to what has been said already by Mr. Justice Strachey, whose judgment has been approved by the Privy Council. We did not want to go so far as to affirm every word that he used, but on the other hand we did not want to fetter the discretion of the Courts. Sir John Edge in his definition of 'disaffection' defines it as including all feelings of dislike or ill-will. I am not inclined to put those words into the section, but on the other hand that is the present law at the present moment. According to Sir John Edge, disaffection as used in the old section includes not only hatred and enmity but all feelings of dislike or ill-will. That is too much to put into the Act, but on the other hand we do not intend to fetter unnecessarily the discretion of the Courts in construing the old term."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU moved that in the same explanation to the same section the words "which is likely to alienate persons from their allegiance to Her Majesty or to the Government established by law in British India" be inserted after the word "enmity" in line 3 thereof. He said:—"My reasons for the amendment must be perfectly clear by this time. If they are not, I can never hope to make them any more clear. I propose the amendment with these words."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I would only say again that I do not feel inclined to fetter the discretion of the Courts. It is always hard to foresee what circumstances may arise, and I do not feel inclined beforehand to fetter the discretion of the Courts."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble GANGADHAR RAO MADHAV CHITNAVIS moved that in explanation 2 to section 124A of the Indian Penal Code as proposed to be substituted by clause 4 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the words "with a view to obtain their alteration by lawful means" be omitted. He said:—"No accused person will be able to plead this explanation in defence, unless he can show that he had a view to obtain by lawful means the alteration of the measure he disapproved. This, in my humble judgment, is not a proper limitation of the right to express comments of disapproval, for no reason is apparent why men should be restrained from making comments otherwise than with a view to obtain an alteration of a measure. It is easy to conceive measures whose alteration is not possible, or at any rate not practicable. There is no reason, so far as I can see, why one should not be at liberty to make comments of disapproval on such measures. Indeed, on general principles, it would seem that a critic who merely condemns a measure without any particular view is not so actively discontented, nor so likely to form a centre of disturbance, as one who seeks to obtain an alteration of a measure. I should be certainly ready to proscribe the adoption or even the contemplation of unlawful means for the alteration of a measure, but I would not make the contemplation of lawful means of alteration compulsory for the loyal critic.

"Then, again, explanation 3 allows comments on all actions of the Government, even if these comments be made without any particular desire of obtaining alteration of the actions by lawful means. Thus there is no reason apparent why the condition described in the words proposed to be omitted should be insisted on in the case of measures any more than in the case of actions of the Government.

"My Lord, my hon'ble friend Mr. Sayani has so ably discussed the question that I will not add anything to what he has said."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I must certainly oppose this amendment. We do not wish to allow criticisms suggesting the alteration of measures of Government by unlawful means. I do not think my hon'ble friend Mr. Chitnavis wants that done. I think what he really means is covered by the explanation."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU moved that in explanations 2 and 3 to the same section, the words "without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection" be omitted. He said:—

"In my opinion to retain these words would practically destroy the whole right.

"In that charming novel of Goldsmith's, which every one has read in his school-boy days, The Vicar of Wakefield, it is humourously stated that Mrs. Primrose sent out her children on market days, with a guinea in the pocket of each, but with strict injunctions not to change or spend it. I am involuntarily reminded of this in reading explanations 2 and 3. They practically hold out a gift with the left hand and snatch it away with the right hand. The set of words I ask to be scored out and the rest of the explanations seem to me to mutually destroy each other, and, like the famous Kilkenny cats, leave nothing behind. We have had to discuss a good deal as to what is and what is not the English law of sedition. But there can be no dispute about this, that the incubus, imposed by the words I complain of, is surely not English law. Here at any rate India does not get the English commodity. Carefully examined, these explanations might well be erased and none will be the worse for it. The section says 'create hatred, create contempt or create disaffection, and you go to jail.' The necessary implication of this, without more, is the negation 'don't create hatred, don't create contempt, don't create disaffection, and you can walk the earth without let or hindrance.' To this necessary implication what do the so-called explanations add? How do they improve the position one single whit? I must own that I am too blunt to notice any difference between their presence and their complete omission. The peculiar nervousness and, I may add, the singularly lingual puritanism, a penchant for which they betray, is at once somewhat ludicrous and somewhat saddening. It looks as if the official skin had suddenly become over-sensitised and that it can no longer bear to say to the public speaker or writer (as Mr. Stephen said nearly twenty years ago) 'nothing could be farther from the wish of the Government than to check in the least degree any criticism of their measures, however severe and hostile, nay however disingenuous, unfair or ill-informed it might be.' That attitude showed sturdy strength and an innate consciousness of being right and of being sure therefore to be rightly judged in the long run. Consistently with the policy conveyed in those words of Mr. Stephen the explanation to section 124A was not clogged with such unhappy terms as without hatred or contempt, which were quite as familiar to him as to us and quite as much before him as before us. Not even the word disaffection which appears in the section was repeated in the explanation out of any impatience of adverse criticism; whereas the present policy seems to be to bear with fair critics and nothing else. That word fair is beautifully vague and a slippery customer to rely on. What is fair according to the good intentions and the unavoidably meagre data before the public speaker or writer may often not be such in the eyes of one with larger materials. This is therefore a supremely uncertain standard to go by. No. doubt we are also told that 'candid and honest' criticism will be tolerated; but, when one is candid or honest, one cannot help speaking as one feels, as, for instance, His Honour Sir Alexander Mackenzie has shown us by his trenchant and unpalatable speech of to-day. As I said in connection with the first amendment, if a critic is candid and honest, he must drive his arguments to their utmost logical consequences. In the degree he does this, in that same degree must he produce either hatred or contempt or both, as His Honour's speech is bound to do. Is this to be shunned? And yet it must be shunned if criticism is to be 'without exciting hatred or contempt or disaffection.' It has been well said by Fitzgerald, J., that even the mere statement of a grievance must produce discontent, but that no jury ought to convict if there was a bonâ fide grievance. The Indian unfortunates are put down to be unfit to have this guarantee. How else is this liberty safeguarded in the explanations? Are the words 'without exciting hatred, contempt or disaffection' the grim safeguard? Again, eminent Judges have concurred in freely conceding that something must be allowed for feelings, chiefly when those criticise whose own interests and the interests of whose kith and kin or fellow-countrymen are concerned. These must unavoidably inspire strong language, inasmuch as the persons, that write or speak thus, mix with the aggrieved and share their sorrows as well as joys. As a necessary result of this, they become imbued with the precise feelings of those sufferers and reflect them in their own utterances, unlike arm-chair politicians. Most public writers resort to the vocation partly as a means of honourable livelihood, but mainly because they are actuated, in common with public men in other pursuits, by an honest desire to serve their countrymen not only by voicing their views, but also to guide and educate them and, if necessary, to awaken them to their rights and privileges of which they may be oblivious or ignorant or towards which they may be apathetie or too lazy to work. In doing all this they are engaged in neither a pastime nor in a luxury merely. They fulfil a duty no less to the Government than to the people—the duty, in the language of Best, J., of setting the Government in motion for the people and not setting the people in motion against the Government. It will be doing them grievous wrong to put them down for men who, with a set purpose, embark on any task of villifying and misrepresenting the Government or its measures, or its acts of commission and omission. In this view, to say that they answer to a safety-valve, as is the wont to speak of them, is to put their usefulness at the lowest minimum. I prefer to regard them to be nothing less than the mouth-piece of the people collectively. To demoralise and practically emasculate them by a show of uncertain and undefined dangers, as this Bill seems to do, is to muzzle people's mouths and to forego a useful auxiliary, which, with all its faults, the governing classes here can ill spare, in getting at the minds of the people—be it for correction, conciliation or compliance. Add to this, that by mental constitution or by early training or by long habit, some men are sarcastic in the way they express themselves. There are others who have the habit of using a sledge-hammer style in giving vent to their feelings and convictions. There are others again whose blunt honesty makes them prone to call a spade a spade. These classes are in our midst as among other peoples, but they are nevertheless loyal to the backbone, however intolerable they might be for men of irascible temper, weak nerves or thin skin. To rouse callous men is often the aim of strong writing. Having regard to all these considerations, one may fairly hold that what has been addressed to the jury by an eminent modern Judge may well be taken for an apostrophe to Legislatures in India, i e., 'you should recollect that to the public political articles great latitude is given. Dealing as they do with the affairs of the day, such articles, if written in a fair spirit and bonâ fides, often result in the production of great public good. Therefore I advise and recommend you to deal with these publications in a spirit of freedom and not to view them with an eye of narrow criticism. You should not look merely to a strong word or a strong phrase, but to the whole article. You should recollect that you are the guardians of the liberty of the Press, and that whilst you will check its abuse you will preserve its freedom.' Viewing ourselves as thus addressed, I cannot help declaring, as my clear and honest opinion, that the words 'without exciting hatred or contempt,' while verging on mere literary prudery, will amount to a virtual withdrawal of the gift, and that, without settling the law, either for the lawyer or for the layman, they will only unsettle men's minds—fraught with this further and real danger that what is forbidden to be openly said will surreptitiously and through subterranean means pass from mouth to mouth and from ear to ear until the imaginary danger of to-day becomes a real one under those unwholesome conditions which are bound to grow up if human nature will not be quelled, as it cannot be, by the statute and its pains and penalties. This dreadfully evil consummation it is the stern duty of us all to beware of."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I must oppose this amendment. I oppose it on this simple ground. These explanations to the section are explanations, not exceptions. An explanation can add nothing to and take nothing from the law. If we were going to derogate from the law in any way, we should put in an exception, not an explanation. To make that clear we have put in an explanation to show that we in no way derogate from the power given by the section; and, as regards the gist of my hon'ble friend's speech on this amendment, all I can say is what I have said many times before. A man who is really loyal at heart and in intention need have no difficulty in expressing himself in language which nobody could conceive to be likely to create disaffection. It seems to be assumed that nobody can speak or write or think anything except matter that is to bring the Government into hatred and contempt. It seems to me that there are plenty of subjects left both for writing and speaking upon which writers and speakers can enlarge on without exciting disaffection against the Government."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS said:—"I too oppose this amendment. I have already stated my views as to the meaning and scope of the explanation. I contend that in the case of a journalist you must cut out the word 'exciting' and then the language will read 'expressing disapprobation thereof but without attempting to excite hatred or contempt.' The only charge you can make against a journalist is attempting to excite. Mr. Justice Cave said to the jury, as every Judge would say, 'You have got to look at these words and surrounding circumstances fairly and say what the accused was attempting or trying to do by these words.' In the case of honest criticism the very nature of the article itself should rebut any likelihood that the writer was attempting to excite disaffection. The question is not whether some of the strong words might create a feeling of irritation, but what was the writer attempting or trying to do by the article taken as a whole and judged fairly."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI moved that in section 153A as proposed to be inserted in the Indian Penal Code by clause 5 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, after the word "subjects," in line 6, the words "tending to the disturbance of public tranquillity" be inserted. He said:—"They are the words suggested by Sir Griffith Evans in his dissent to the Report, and, as the pith of the section is that public tranquillity should not be disturbed, these words should be inserted here so as not to include in them conduct other than that which is tending to the disturbance of public tranquillity."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I must oppose this amendment, because we are going to accept another amendment which proceeds on somewhat different lines. I quite agree with the Hon'ble Mr. Sayani that the reason why it is an offence to stir up class hatred is that such conduct tends to disturb the public tranquillity, but I doubt if this is any proper part of the definition itself. It seems to me that it is rather the cause of the definition than any necessary part of the definition. Take the case of the crime of theft. Theft is an offence because it is an attack upon private property, and because it has a tendency to disturb the right of private property, but we do not insert this in a definition of theft. So it seems to me here that we do not require to insert in this section the motive for making it an offence, namely, the tendency to disturb the public tranquillity. I quite agree that if this section 153A were going to be enacted as a separate Act it would be quite proper to put in the preamble, 'whereas the attempt to stir up class hatred between the different classes of Her Majesty's subjects tends to disturb the public tranquillity, be it therefore enacted, etc., etc.,' and then put in the offence and punishment. But I think that in the section itself it would be out of place, and therefore I oppose the amendment at the present moment."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH said:—"I am grievously disappointed to notice that so many amendments have already proved ineffectual. As regards section 153A, it is obvious that it creates and defines a new offence. There are so many different classes of Her Majesty's subjects in this country that 'feelings of hatred and enmity' are likely to be excited occasionally amongst them in relation to polemical discussion or controversies of a religious or social nature. The least exhibition of temper by one party might now incite the other to avail himself of the scope of this section, so that people, instead of living otherwise in peace and harmony, would find themselves subjected to molestation and harassment, tending to mutual dissensions and disturbance of the public tranquillity.

"With respect to the words used in the section, they are evidently taken from article 93 of Stephen's Digest of the Criminal Law; and it appears from a note appended to that article that they were really intended to meet a different class of cases, such as those of Mest and Meritens tried in 1881 and 1884. Multiplication and creation of offences might be supposed to improve the symmetry of a Penal Code from an academical point of view; they cannot, I venture to say, tend to promote or preserve feelings of accord and peace in a society fettered with so cumbrous a Code as attempts to define every shade of an omission or a commission."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS moved that the following be added to section 153A as proposed to be inserted in the Indian Penal Code by clause 5 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, namely:—

"Explanation.—It does not amount to an offence within the meaning of this section to point out, without malicious intention and with an honest view to their removal, matters which are producing, or have a tendency to produce, feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of Her Majesty's subjects."

He said:—"The necessity for section 153A is very clear, and I regret that there is such misapprehension about it. It seems to have been attacked by many people on the ground that it gives everybody a roving commission to go and attack his neighbour.

"But the power to prosecute is given to Government, and to Government alone. From its constitution Government is, like Gallio, careless of these things save so far as they tend to endanger public tranquillity, and therefore there is little danger of unnecessary interference under this section.

"But I do not approve of making things offences under the law which ought not to be offences and then trusting to the discretion of the Government not to prosecute. I had myself suggested an amendment—the one just moved by Mr. Sayani—which I think a good one. But finding that the present amendment (being practically what was suggested in the letter of the Government of Bengal) would in some respects cover more ground and would have the support of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, I concluded to drop my suggestion and put forward this amendment instead. It will, I think, improve the section and relieve the minds of many."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"On behalf of the Government I accept this amendment. I think it is an improvement to the section."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble GANGADHAR RAO MADHAV CHITNAVIS moved that the new section 153A as proposed to be added to the Indian Penal Code by clause 5 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee be omitted. He said:—"My Lord, in proposing my amendment, I beg to remark that I am glad that the amendment of the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans has found favour with Your Excellency's Council, for it has to a large extent taken away the sting and the danger of the clause. But I am in favour of its elimination altogether.

"The question is whether the new provision is really much needed, or whether it would in any way benefit those for whom it is intended. The Hon'ble Mover of the Bill has been pleased to concede that under British rule our Hindu and Muhammadan fellow-subjects live together for the most part in peace and amity, but he says that recent agitations have necessitated the measure. But is this the case? Have not the recent agitations been the result of individual villanies rather than of any general racial feeling? If unhappily in the years which immediately preceded Your Excellency's rule there were some such disturbances as the Bill seeks to provide against, there has in Your Excellency's time been no recurrence of them. Moreover, they were due to sudden outbursts of religious passion and prejudices against which no penal laws are likely to be of much avail.

"Again, it may, I think, be reasonably doubted whether, in cases where the relations between different classes are really strained, there is not some danger that a provision like that proposed will tend to widen the gulf. Mischief-loving people will be only too ready to use the law as a weapon against their antagonists, and social hatred may thus be perpetuated and intensified instead of being quenched. Again, it is a provision which seems especially likely to lend itself to abuse in the hands of an over-zealous police-official, Hindu or Muhammadan, the more so because the wording of the law admits of a very wide interpretation. It is difficult to imagine what might and what might not be regarded as promoting feelings of enmity and hatred between different classes of Her Majesty's subjects.

"My Lord, every loyal subject of Her Majesty will fully appreciate the benevolent spirit which pervades the proposed addition to section 153, but I would humbly submit that the wording of the provision makes the scope of the section too wide for this work-day world, where so long as different races, each with its own ideas and prejudices, continue to dwell side by side, expressions liable to excite some measure of enmity or hatred are sure to be exchanged, and no Government can ever hope to prevent them by force of legislation. Let me not be misunderstood. I do not contend, my Lord, that it is desirable or right that such feelings should exist or that they should find vent in words or any visible representations; but I hold that most unavoidably they will exist and find expression, and the proposed law, instead of removing the evil, is only too likely to aggravate it.

"It seems to me that in attempting to regulate the expression of feeling between class and class, except so far as it may be likely to endanger the public tranquillity or lead to the commission of offences, the Government will be undertaking a task at once fraught with embarrassment to itself and likely to encourage litigation of a most mischievous description. So far, however, as the object in view is the preservation of the public peace, I beg leave to submit that the Police Act and sections 295 to 298 of the Penal Code already contain clauses sufficiently comprehensive to meet all kinds of class antagonism by which the public tranquillity may be threatened; while, as far as other offences are concerned, all practical requirements of section 153A have, in my humble opinion, been adequately met by the proposed new clause (c) of section 505.

"It is on these grounds I respectfully ask the Council to eliminate the new section 153A from the Penal Code."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I must oppose this amendment. I think the Government of India look upon the section as one of the most important in the Bill—the section they look upon especially to prevent bloodshed in race conflicts—bloodshed which has so often taken place in the past."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU said:—"The Hon'ble Mr. Chitnavis has stated his reasons quite fully. In supporting the amendment I am quite content to stand by what I put down in my minute of dissent."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU moved that the words "or which is likely to cause" in lines 1 and 2 of clauses (a) and (b) of the new section 505 of the Indian Penal Code as proposed to be substituted by clause 6 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee be omitted. He said:—"There is the word 'intent' in the section already. What is the likely result is the evidence of such intent. Then why these additional words? These may be regarded as meant to indicate something not amounting to 'intent' and yet we mean nothing of the sort. Why retain this cause for possible perplexity?"

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I am sorry to say that I must oppose this amendment. We have drawn a distinction between 'reports likely or intended to cause', and for this reason. We propose to allow a man to show contrary to the ordinary rule that he did not intend a likely consequence. Ordinarily a man is deemed to intend the likely consequences of his acts. That is the ordinary presumption of law. If a man voluntarily does an act, he is deemed to intend to produce a result which is the likely and probable consequence of his conduct. But here we intend to allow a man to show that his actual intention was innocent. I certainly cannot consent to let the words 'which is likely' go out, because that is the gist of the offence."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS said :—"I also oppose the amendment. The Council will observe that in the passage which was read by the Hon'ble Maharaja of Durbhanga from Mr. Justice Cave's judgment it is pointed out that it is a good working rule to take it that a man intends the consequences of his act, but there is another part read from Sir Fitzjames Stephen which said this: that it is more or less a legal fiction, because if you put in the word 'intent', and then arrive at the intent only by the likelihood, you will be arriving at the intent very often when no real intention exists. He contends it would be more logical to treat them as different offences, and as a matter of fact there is a difference in the culpability here, and it would make a great deal of difference in the sentence awarded, where the accused had done this with intent to cause, or had done it merely carelessly. If he had done it carelessly, he would get a less punishment no doubt, and also, as has been pointed out by my learned friend the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers, he would be at liberty to prove under the explanation if he had not a real intent to cause; he would be allowed to shew two things, first, that he had reason to believe it true, and, secondly, that he had not intended anything of the kind although the fact that it was likely to cause would raise a presumption against him that he intended it, but he is allowed to rebut that presumption; and that is the thing that is complained of, because we have thrown the onus on him. They say such a thing has never been done—we have thrown the onus on the man to rebut the intention, and that such a thing has never been done. My answer is that the passage from Mr. Justice Cave explains the matter: 'It is a good working rule that a man should be taken to intend the natural consequences of his act, and that from that the intention should be inferred, but the intention may be rebutted by the surrounding circumstances.' That means, as I understand, that the onus is thrown on the accused and a primâ facie case for his conviction established where intention must be proved by showing that the result was the natural and probable consequence of his act, or in other wor's that his act 'was likely to cause', but that this presumption might be rebutted and it might be shown he did not intend. The result is, if intent is established he is punished whether he had or had not reason to believe it to be true, because it was a criminal intent; but if he had good reason to believe it to be true and the presumption of criminal intent arising from the likelihood be rebutted, he is not punished."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU moved that in the same section, clause (b), the words "whereby any person may be induced" be omitted and the words "and thereby to induce any person" be substituted in lines 3 and 4 thereof. He said :—"As intent is stated as the basis of the offence, I wish it to extend to the inducement of an offence by some one else. A series of intermediate agencies or occurrences or any of them may be the cause of some one ultimately committing an offence. Either that person or the eventuality of that or any other person committing an offence may be utterly out of the contemplation of the original speaker or writer. Cases analogous to the well-known Squib case may be easily imagined to occur in plenty. Such results are undesirable, and, I believe, are not desired to fall under this clause. One may be mentioned. Suppose in a crowded place some one picks the pocket of another and is fleeing; the person robbed sets up the cry 'thief, thief;' others as well take up the cry and run as the thief himself, but really in pursuit of the thief in order to catch him. Some one, with whip in hand, hears the cry and finds a man running past; he takes him for the thief, and gives the latter a cut and restrains his further progress. This latter happens not to be the thief himself. On him the holder of the whip has committed the offences of assault and wrongful restraint. Is the originator of the cry or those that echoed it to be liable for the offences so committed? How is any of these latter in particular to spot the person whose cry he took up? How is he to discharge the onus cast on him to prove that he had made enquiries and found reasonable grounds for what he has done? The changes, which I complain of, merely amount to transferring

'the unworkable' to the shoulders of the accused from those of the prosecutor or the police. This is nothing short of being most outrageous."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I must oppose this amendment. As far as I can understand my Hon'ble friend's point, it is this. He wants to substitute the intention of the wrong-doer for the consequence of his acts. There again I must object. I think the point is that he intends to cause fear or alarm to the public, whereby as a matter of fact people may be induced to commit an offence, and it is not necessary that he should contemplate the commission of the offence. It is a question not of the likelihood of his intention, but of the probable consequence of his act."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH said:—"As regards the new section 505, it appears to be extremely harsh in its scope. It relieves the prosecution of having to establish the offence so far as proving that the statement, rumour or report was false, and throws the onus on the accused to prove that the statement, rumour or report was true. It is for the prosecution to establish the guilt of the accused and not for the accused to prove his own innocence. As has been rightly observed by some one, the time has not yet come in India for punishing a person for telling the truth."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said:—"Before this Bill passes, there is one point to which I desire very briefly to refer.

"When I spoke in this Council in December, I submitted the proposition that in this legislation the Government hoped to attain an object which the vast majority of their fellow-subjects would consider a desirable object. I have been immensely strengthened in that belief by what has happened since then. Our proposals have met with a considerable amount of criticism—some reasonable, some unreasonable; some hostile, and a few friendly criticisms; but throughout the whole—I think I may say outside as well as inside this Chamber—there has run the admission that the British Government must be maintained, and that any attempts to subvert it must be prevented. That has been throughout our sole object; and I am glad to find myself in accord with so many of our severest critics. That there is a difference between us I admit; but what is the nature of that difference? I have paid careful attention to what has been said and written on this subject, and it seems to me that it all turns on a difference of opinion as to the precise meaning of certain expressions, or even words. Let any one study the proceedings in this Council to-day, and he will find that this is of the essence of the discussions on which we have been engaged for a good eight hours. Now the Government cannot be accused of having taken up an impracticable and domineering attitude even in the matter of wording. They have willingly accepted any modifications which have been proposed, either in the Select Committee, or here in Council, wherever they could do so consistently with the attainment of their purpose, and have listened, I am sure every one will admit, with patience to all representations made to them. But, after all, with the Government must remain the responsibility for the proper framing of the law. They have the right and they have the power of inviting, and they have invited, the most capable men, both in India and in England, to advise them, and they cannot wantonly, or with a light heart, reject even in the matter of drafting the advice so received. Perhaps I ought not to say in the presence of my Hon'ble colleague 'even in the matter of drafting'; for I know that he maintains, and I fully agree with him, that drafting is a most important subject, and that is the reason why we have felt ourselves obliged beyond a certain point to resist alteration in the form of our proposals.

"We are all, as I have said, at one in the desire to put down sedition which is aimed against the Government of the Queen-Empress. We differ not so much about the precise form of the powers to be taken, or the means to be employed, as about the language in which the law is to be expressed.

"All that we, the Government, can say is that we desire the powers necessary to put down sedition. We ask for nothing more, but we can be satisfied with nothing less. We do not desire to have a law which bears oppressively on one particular section of the community. Only partial justice is done to us when it is said that we have abstained from proposing an enactment aimed at the Vernacular Press, because as a matter of fact our legislation is not a Press Act at all. It lays down certain rules of conduct, by observing which any member of the community can keep within the law, rules which are applicable to all and show favour to none.

"I cannot but hope that when these things are calmly and dispassionately considered—on the one hand, the supreme and admitted importance of the object; on the other, the necessity that the Government should accept the full responsibility for the form of the law in a matter of this kind—that the Bill which is now about to pass will be given a fair trial, and that some of the feelings which I think have been unduly excited may subside."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 4th March, 1898.

FIELD OPERATIONS.

TIRAH.

No. 244.—The Right Honourable the Governor General in Council has much pleasure in directing the publication of the subjoined letter from the Adjutant General in India submitting a despatch from General Sir W. S. A. Lockhart, K.C.B., K.C.S.I., describing the operations of the Tirah Expeditionary Force from the 1st November 1897 to the 26th January 1898.

2. These operations have been conducted in a country of great natural difficulty and against an enemy of extraordinary boldness and activity, armed moreover with weapons of precision of which they thoroughly understood the use. The withdrawal from Tirah, necessitated by the season, formed part of the plan of operations from the outset, but it was nevertheless an operation of great difficulty, under the circumstances, requiring not only the most careful dispositions, but also a very high degree of discipline, courage, and endurance on the part of the troops.

3. The Governor General in Council concurs with the Commander-in-Chief in his opinion that the manner in which the campaign has been conducted reflects very great credit on Sir William Lockhart's skill and judgment, and shares His Excellency's admiration of the devotion to duty and soldierly spirit displayed by the troops on all occasions. His Excellency in Council tenders to General Sir William Lockhart and to all the officers and men of the Tirah Expeditionary Force the cordial congratulations and thanks of the Government of India

4. His Excellency in Council also fully shares in Sir George White's appreciation of the assistance rendered by the Imperial Service Troops; and takes this opportunity of acknowledging the ready loyalty of the Chiefs who have placed their regiments and transport trains at the disposal of Government, and the personal services rendered by Lieutenant-Colonel Maharaj Dhiraj Sir Partab Singh, G.C.S.I., of Jodhpur, Lieutenant-Colonel His Highness the Maharaja of Cooch Behar, G.C.I.E., and Major His Highness the Maharaj Rana of Dholpur.

5. His Excellency in Council further desires to acknowledge the services rendered during the operations by the officers of the staff at Army Head Quarters, and of the Departments under the Government of India mentioned by the Commander-in-Chief, and cannot allow this opportunity to pass without conveying to Sir George White his sense of the distinguished ability with which on this occasion, and throughout his term of office, the responsible duties of Commander-in-Chief have been performed.

Letter from the Adjutant General in India, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department,—No. 769-F "Field Operations—N.-W. F." / Tirah, dated Fort William, 24th February 1898

I have the honour, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief, to submit, for the information of the Government of India, the accompanying despatch from General Sir W. S. A Lockhart, K.C.B., K.C.S.I., describing the operations of the Tirah Expeditionary Force from the 1st November 1897 to the 26th January 1898.

2. No campaign on the frontiers of India has been conducted under more trying and arduous circumstances than those encountered by the Tirah Expeditionary Force. Its operations have been carried out in a country destitute of roads, the physical configuration of which is such as to present the maximum of difficulty to the movement of regular troops. The enemy were for the most part skilled marksmen, exceptionally active and well armed and expert in guerilla tactics. While avoiding serious resistance to the advance of our troops they have lost no opportunity of harassing both on the march and in bivouac, a system of fighting admirably suited to the nature of the country, and which has necessarily occasioned us considerable loss, not only in action, but also from toil and exposure. In spite of these difficulties, severe punishment has been meted out to the tribes concerned with the result that the entire Orakzai tribe has submitted and complied with the terms of Government, as have also a portion of the Afridis, and it seems probable even now that the remainder of this tribe will not force a repetition of offensive operations, but will tender their submission at an early date.

3. During the operations, the fighting qualities and endurance of the troops have been highly tested, and it is with no small sense of gratification and pride that the Commander-in-Chief brings to the notice of the Government of India the soldierly conduct and discipline of the troops amidst all the hardships and exposure which fell to them; both officers and men having, whether in action or in bivouac, conducted themselves in a manner thoroughly befitting the traditions of Her Majesty's Army.

4. His Excellency deplores the loss to the Army of the many brave officers and men who have died in the performance of their duty, and amongst them such distinguished soldiers as the late Major-General A. G. Yeatman-Biggs, C.B., Lieutenant-Colonel J. Haughton, 36th Sikhs, and others whose careers were so full of promise.

5. The Commander-in-Chief would specially commend to the favourable notice of Government the distinguished officer selected for the command of the expedition, who has exercised an exceptionally difficult and responsible command with much skill, vigor and judgment, and His Excellency takes this opportunity of expressing his own acknowledgments to General Sir William Lockhart for the able manner in which he has directed the operations of the force under his command.

6. The Commander-in-Chief also endorses the commendatory remarks made by Sir William Lockhart on the services of Lieutenant-General Sir A. P. Palmer, K.C.B., Major-General W. P. Symons, C.B., Brigadier-General W. G. Nicholson, C.B., and the officers and others mentioned in paragraphs 22 to 31 of the despatch.

7. His Excellency fully shares Sir William Lockhart's appreciation of the assistance rendered by the Imperial Service Troops, whose association with our own troops has given them the opportunity of gaining valuable military experience which cannot fail to result in increased efficiency.

• Sir George White has much pleasure in commending to the notice of Government the services of Lieutenant-Colonel His Highness the Maharaj Dhiraj Sir Partap Singh, G.C.S.I., who accompanied the force throughout the expedition as an extra Aide-de-Camp to Sir William Lockhart, of Lieutenant-Colonel His Highness the Maharaja of Cooch Behar, G.C.I.E., and of Major His Highness the Maharaj Rana of Dholpur, who were employed as extra orderly officers to the divisional commanders.

8. As this despatch will probably be the last that Sir George White will submit during his tenure of command, he desires to take this opportunity of bringing to the notice of Government the valuable services rendered by the following officers and departments in connection with the recent operations.

9. On Lieutenant-General Sir G. Wolseley, K.C.B., and the staff of the Punjab Command devolved the duty of carrying out the preliminary concentration of the various forces which have been placed in the field. This has been no light task, but it has been successfully performed.

10. Of the staff at Army Head-Quarters, I am to mention Major-General G. de C. Morton, C.B., Adjutant General in India, who has throughout proved himself zealous and untiring in the performance of the duties which, especially during war, pertain to his responsible position, and has at all times afforded to the Commander-in-Chief all the assistance in his power. I am especially to bring to notice Major-General Badcock, C.B., C.S.I., Quarter-Master-General in India, under whose supervision all the arrangements for the mobilisation of the large forces now and recently in the field have been worked out. The difficulty of the task has been greatly enhanced by the fact that we were not only engaged in active operations in several directions at one and the same time, but were also compelled to be in readiness to meet any further complication which might suddenly arise along any portion of the North-West Frontier. That we have been able to mass the necessary troops without delay on the point threatened by each successive rising as it occurred, and that our mobilisation arrangements have worked smoothly and without friction, has been very largely due to the Quarter-Master-General's constant and assiduous work.

11. Sir George White also wishes to bring to the special notice of the Government of India the services of Lieutenant-Colonel B. Duff, C.I.E., Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief, in whom His Excellency has always found a staff officer of the very highest ability, most earnest sense of duty and soundest judgment, who has done all that a direct personal assistant could do to lighten the work and anxiety of the Commander-in-Chief in a time of exceptional difficulty.

12. The Commander-in-Chief would further bring to the notice of the Government of India the very valuable services of Major H. Mullaly, R.E., Deputy Assistant Quarter-Master-General for Mobilisation, whose services His Excellency was obliged to retain in the public interest at Army Head-Quarters during the late extensive mobilisation.

13. The administration of the military medical service has been successfully and satisfactorily carried on during the same period by Surgeon-Major-General A. A. Gore, Principal Medical Officer, Her Majesty's Forces in India, through whose efforts, and the ready co-operation of officers and subordinates, the department has, at a time of pressing emergency, been able to comply with the heavy demands made upon it.

The extent of these demands may be best realised from the statement that it was considered necessary to provide hospital accommodation for 12 per cent. of troops and followers. On this basis 6526 beds were made available including 36½ field hospitals. The accuracy of this forecast may be gauged from the fact that on the 20th December 1897 the number of sick in hospital, then at its highest, was 11·16 per cent. of the force. The results obtained in the treatment of the sick, and especially in surgical cases of wounds, have been most satisfactory.

14. The Army Veterinary Department, under Veterinary Colonel H. Thomson, has also rendered much valuable assistance during the operations.

15. Of the departments directly under the Government of India, the Commissariat-Transport department has undoubtedly had an exceptionally difficult and arduous task to perform in arranging the supply and transport of not only the Tirah Expeditionary Force, but of the many other forces which have from time to time been mobilised since the outbreak of hostilities on the frontier. These excessive demands have necessarily taxed the resources of the department to the utmost; and His Excellency considers that great credit is due to Major-General T. F. Hobday, C.B., and the officers and subordinates of the department for the successful manner in which all difficulties have been overcome.

The demands upon the Ordnance Department have also been very heavy; and His Excellency is much indebted to Major-General R. Wace, C.B., Director-General of Ordnance, and the officers and subordinates of the department for the promptness with which the wants of the army in the field have been complied with.

16. It again becomes His Excellency's pleasing duty to bring to notice the valuable services rendered by the Telegraph Department, and His Excellency tenders to Mr. C. H. Reynolds, C.I.E., Director-General of Telegraphs, and the officers and subordinates employed with the force, his grateful acknowledgments.

17. His Excellency is also much indebted to the officers and subordinates of the Survey Department for the excellent map which has been prepared of the large area of new country through which the troops have been operating, and to the officers and subordinates of the Postal Department for the punctuality with which postal communication has been maintained.

18. To Colonel M. Brackenbury, Royal Engineers, Manager, Mr. E. F. Jacob, Traffic Superintendent, and the subordinate staff of the North-Western Railway, His Excellency's thanks are due for the valuable assistance afforded in the rapid mobilisation of the troops on the frontier.

It has been ascertained that between the 1st July and the 31st October 1897, the additional trains on the North-Western Railway required for military traffic, amounted to R4,544, or an average of 37 trains per diem in excess of normal traffic. Any break-down of the railway arrangements during the period when troops and supplies were being pushed to the front, would have had a very serious effect on the military operations, and that no such failure occurred is due, in His Excellency's opinion, to the able administration of his railway system by the Manager, and to the untiring efforts of his subordinates.

From General Sir W. S. A. LOCKHART, K.C.B., K.C.S.I., Commanding Tirah Expeditionary Force, to the Adjutant General in India,—No. 812-T.C. Head Quarters, Tirah Expeditionary Force, Camp Rawalpindi, dated the 26th January 1898.

In continuation of my letter No. 524-T.C., dated 9th December 1897, I have the honour to submit, for the information of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India, the following account of the operations of the force under my command from the 1st November 1897 up to the present date.

2. As previously reported, on October 31st, I entered Afridi Tirah and encamped in Maidan with the 2nd Division and the 2nd Brigade of the 1st Division, the 1st Brigade being left in Mastura to dominate that valley and to hold the Sampagha Pass. At this time the troops at my disposal in Maidan numbered 9,700, and in Mastura 2,330.

3. On November 1st, I directed a reconnaissance to be made to Bagh with the object of visiting the mosque which was notorious as the spot where the Afridi rising originated, and as the focus of political intrigue and fanaticism. The force employed consisted of No. 8 Mountain Battery, Royal Artillery, the 2nd Battalion, King's Own Scottish Borderers, and the 1st Battalion, 3rd Gurkhas, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel H. G. Dixon, C. B. Some opposition was met with, Captain T. G. Maclaren, King's Own Scottish Borderers, and three men of the 3rd Gurkhas being wounded, and one man of the 3rd Gurkhas being killed. The mosque was found to be an open wooden shed situated at the confluence of the streams which drain the Maidan valley. No documents were discovered either in the mosque, or in the houses in its vicinity.

On November 1st and 2nd, the Zakka Khels on either flank of the northern slope of the Arhanga Pass attacked convoys proceeding to camp in Maidan, and succeeded in capturing 60 transport animals, with 13 boxes of Lee-Metford ammunition, and a number of kits belonging to the 1st Battalion, Royal West Surrey Regiment, and the 15th Sikhs.

On November 3rd, the 3rd Brigade under Brigadier-General Kempster reconnoitred up to Tseri Kandao, whence the upper part of the Waran valley was seen and sketched. The troops were followed up by the enemy with a loss of five native soldiers wounded.

The following day, I issued a proclamation to the several clans of the Afridis and Orakzais, directing them to select and send in representatives to hear the conditions under which their submission would be accepted by the Government of India. These conditions were not specified in writing, as I was advised that any written document would have to be explained to the tribesmen by their Mullahs, who are almost the only educated men in the country, and that the latter would be certain to misrepresent the terms which it had been decided to enforce.

On November 8th, a picquet of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Gurkhas, guarding the southern slopes of the Arhanga Pass, surprised an ambush of the enemy lying in wait to attack convoys near the village of Unai, and inflicted heavy loss on them.

On November 9th, I made a reconnaissance in force to the crest of the Saran Sar, 5 miles east of camp. The force, under the command of Brigadier-General Westmacott, consisted of—

No. 5 Bombay Mountain Battery.
1st Battalion, Dorsetshire Regiment.

During the advance but few of the enemy showed themselves, but in the retirement, which began at 2 P.M., the Northamptonshire Regiment forming the rear-guard was closely pressed. Its movement from the crest into the valley, which was much delayed by the steepness of the descent and by the number of wounded men who had to be carried by their comrades, was covered by the guns, the flanks being held by the two Sikh regiments. Eventually a portion of the Northamptonshire Regiment became entangled in a deep ravine, where they were fired into at close quarters by the tribesmen. The 36th Sikhs were sent back to extricate them, but evening was coming on, and before assistance could be rendered a party consisting of an officer and 12 men was cut off and shot down. Had the battalion kept to the high ground where its flanks were protected by the two Sikh regiments, its loss would probably have been small; but unfortunately a route was chosen which offered every tactical advantage to the enemy, the result being that some of our troops became isolated and were then attacked by overwhelming numbers. Our casualties were 2 British officers and 17 British soldiers killed; and 3 British officers, 35 British soldiers, 1 Native officer, and 6 Native soldiers wounded.

During the day the defences of many Zakka Khel villages were destroyed, and a large quantity of forage and grain was collected.

On November 11th, I again visited the Saran Sar with the force noted in the margin, under the command of Brigadier-General Gaselee. The object of the second reconnaissance was to complete the survey of the eastern section of the Maidan valley, to destroy the defences of the remaining Zakka Khel villages which there had been no time to deal with on the 9th, and to collect forage. This having been successfully accomplished, the force returned to camp. Heavy loss was inflicted on the enemy, who as usual pressed closely on the rear guard. Owing, however, to Brigadier-General Gaselee's skilful dispositions and the effective fire of the mountain guns, our losses were slight, comprising one British soldier killed, and one British officer and one Native soldier wounded.

On November 12th, I received the representative Jirgahs of the Orakzai clans, acquainting them verbally and in writing with the terms of Government, and giving them a fortnight for compliance. No representative Jirgahs had come in from the several Afridi sections, although a few delegates from the Malikdin, Kambar, Aka, and Adam Khels had arrived in Maidan, where they were housed in a village a short distance from camp.

On November 13th, the 3rd Brigade under Brigadier-General Kempster, strengthened by No. 8 Mountain Battery, Royal Artillery, No. 5 Bombay Mountain Battery, No. 4 Company, Madras Sappers and Miners, No. 4 Company, Bombay Sappers and Miners, and the 36th Sikhs, proceeded at daybreak over the Tseri Kandao into the Waran Valley, the object being to reconnoitre and survey the valley, destroy the defences of the Zya-ud-din sub-section of the Zakka Khels, and provide the brigade with forage which was becoming scarce in the vicinity of Camp Maidan. The march was unopposed, and the troops camped three miles east of the crest of the Tseri Kandao.

On November 14th and 15th, the defences of a number of Zakka Khel villages in Waran were demolished, and the house of the notorious Mullah Saiad Akbar was levelled to the ground.

On November 16th, Brigadier-General Kempster's force returned to camp Maidan. Before the rear-guard reached the Tseri Kandao several casualties occurred, and after crossing the crest of the pass and suffering more loss, it was greatly delayed by the number of wounded to be carried. The tribesmen, Zakka Khels and Aka Khels, followed close on our troops and had to be driven back at the point of the bayonet. Encumbered by their wounded and their ammunition running short, the 15th Sikhs were unable to retire from a height which they were holding on the northern flank of the main body, and the 36th Sikhs, with two companies of the 1st Battalion, Dorsetshire Regiment, had to be sent back to their assistance. Being thus reinforced our troops attacked and drove off the tribesmen, inflicting heavy loss, which is reported on reliable authority to have amounted to at least 300 killed and wounded. Lieutenant-Colonel Haughton, 36th Sikhs, withdrew the force at his disposal, under cover of darkness, to some villages where he remained until the next morning, being attacked at intervals throughout the night. Unfortunately a party of the Dorsetshire Regiment lost their way in the dark, and were overwhelmed and killed by the enemy. Our casualties were 4 officers killed and 3 wounded. Of other ranks 26 were killed and 42 wounded. At daybreak on November 17th, Lieutenant-Colonel Haughton withdrew his force to camp Maidan without opposition, meeting on his way three battalions and one mountain battery which I had sent out under Brigadier-General Gaselee to cover his retirement.

The three days from November 18th to November 20th, were occupied in shifting the camp of the Force to Bagh. The 2nd Brigade moved on the 18th, the 4th Brigade with my head-quarters on the 19th, and the 3rd Brigade on the 20th. The enemy attacked both the old and the new camp while the movement was going on, but were repulsed without difficulty, although I regret to say that as many as 24 casualties were reported.

On November 20th, the 15th Sikhs, whose strength had been gravely diminished by hard work, fighting and exposure, first in the Kurram valley and afterwards in Tirah, were ordered back to Shinaori, their place in the 3rd Brigade being subsequently filled by the 2nd Punjab Infantry from Karapda.

On November 21st, finding that no representatives of the Afridi sections more influential than those already in camp were likely to come in, I announced the terms of Government to the latter verbally and in writing, and gave them a week for compliance, at the end of which period I warned them that the systematic punishment of the tribe would begin.

On November 22nd, I marched to Dwatoi with the force noted in the margin, which was under the command of Brigadier-General Westmacott. The high hills commanding the defile through which the troops moved were held by the 2nd Battalion, Yorkshire Regiment, and the 1st Battalion, 2nd Gurkhas, the positions thus taken up being occupied until the return of the force to Bagh on the 24th. The road through the defile was an exceedingly difficult one, the path in places being along the face of precipitous cliffs of slippery limestone, and the icy water of the stream, which averaged two feet in depth, having to be repeatedly forded. The march was opposed throughout the day, and as the ground was generally unsuitable for the employment of artillery, the successive positions taken up by the enemy's sharpshooters had to be carried by the advance guard. In consequence of this and the badness of the road, the movement through the defile was slow, and the rear-guard did not reach camp at Dwatoi until 11-30 A.M. on the 23rd. The night of the 22nd, which was passed by the troops at Dwatoi without blankets or great coats, was an exceptionally cold one. On the 23rd, the defences of the Kuki Khel villages in the lower part of the Rajgal valley were destroyed, a portion of the valley was surveyed, and the road through the defile improved. On the 24th, the force returned to Bagh, leaving Dwatoi before daybreak. The enemy closely followed the rear-guard, and endeavoured at a difficult point in the defile to break in on the baggage. The tribesmen were, however, driven back at the point of the bayonet by the 36th Sikhs, who killed and wounded a large number of them. The rear-guard reached camp at Bagh at 5 P.M. Our loss during the three days amounted to 3 men killed, and 1 British officer and 31 men wounded.

On November 24th, the head-quarters and four companies of the 1st Battalion, Royal Scots Fusiliers, joined the Main Column at Bagh, having been ordered up as a reinforcement from Kohat.

On November 25th, a reconnaissance was made by the 1st Brigade under Brigadier-General Hart from his camp in Mastura to the crest of the Torsmats Pass, 8,000 feet above sea level.

On November 26th, the period granted to the Mamuzai and Massozai sections of the Orakzais, and to the Khani Khel Chamkannis, for compliance with the terms prescribed by the Government of India had expired, and I accordingly arranged to move a force against them from Bagh, to act in co-operation with the Kurram Moveable Column which I directed to march from Sadr through the Khurmana defile and meet me on November 29th at Hissar in the Massozai country. The force from Bagh under Brigadier-General Gaselee's command moved on November 26th and 27th, I myself leaving on the latter date. It consisted of the following troops:—

No. 1 Kohat Mountain Battery.
No. 2 Derajat „ „
1st Battalion, Royal West Surrey Regiment.
2nd „ Yorkshire Regiment.
Wing of 1st Battalion, Royal Scots Fusiliers.
2nd Battalion, 4th Gurkhas.
3rd Sikhs.
Gurkha Scouts.
Nos. 3 and 4 Companies, Bombay Sappers and Miners.

On the 27th, the Kahu or Durbi Khel Pass into the Massozai country was seized, and on the 28th all the troops and baggage had crossed, the force concentrating the following day at Dargai. The Durbi Khel Pass, the crest of which is 8,700 feet above sea level, presented great difficulties, the path over it, especially on the western side, being extremely steep and rocky. The eastern side is covered with forest and thus afforded cover to the enemy, who from the time the troops left Bagh continuously opposed our advance.

On November 29th, the Massozai jirgahs came into camp and expressed their readiness to submit, and on the same date heliographic communication was established with Colonel Hill, whose column had marched from Sadr to Hissar unmolested.

On the 30th, I moved to Hissar, taking with me the troops noted in the margin under Brigadier-General Gaselee. The remainder of the force from Bagh remained in camp at Dargai under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel J. H. Spurgin, 1st Battalion, Royal Scots Fusiliers, who was directed to improve the road leading to Khanki Bazar, which I had arranged to visit on my return march for the purpose of coercing the Mamuzais and replenishing my supplies from the advanced depôt at Karappa.

On December 1st, a force under Colonel Hill consisting of—

No. 1 Kohat Mountain Battery,
12th Bengal Infantry,
2nd Battalion, 4th Gurkhas,
200 men of the 1st Battalion, 5th Gurkhas,
The Gurkha Scouts,
200 dismounted men, 6th Bengal Cavalry,
200 dismounted men, Central India Horse—left Camp Hissar at an early hour to take punitive action against the Khani Khel Chamkannis. As the Chamkanni villages at Thabi are situated on the eastern slope of a deep valley surrounded by precipitous hills, it was no easy matter to dislodge the tribesmen who were holding the heights in force. This was eventually accomplished with some loss to our troops,* and heavy loss to the enemy from rifle and artillery fire; and a portion of the Chamkanni villages were destroyed. But before the work could be completed, it was time for the force to withdraw to camp, which it did without much opposition, the Massozais who had collected along the Makhmanghar crest to the north of the road observing the proceedings, but holding aloof.

* Killed—
1 British officer.
6 Native soldiers.
Wounded—
2 British officers.
1 Native officer.
14 Native soldiers.

On December 2nd, the operations were resumed, and the remainder of the Thabi villages were destroyed in the face of obstinate resistance, the heights to the west of the villages having to be stormed at the point of the bayonet by the Gurkha Scouts under Captain F. G. Lucas. The enemy again suffered heavy loss, leaving 30 dead on the ground in addition to the large number of killed and wounded carried away. It has since been reported that several of their principal Maliks were among the killed. Our casualties were few.†

On December 1st and 2nd, Brigadier-General Gaselee with a small force visited the Gar Massozai villages in the Lozaka Toi, and, as the terms imposed by the Government of India had not been complied with by this section of the Orakzais, the village defences were destroyed. No opposition was met with.

On December 3rd, Colonel Hill returned with his column to Sadr, taking with him the sick and wounded of the force which had accompanied me from Bagh, and transferring to the wing of the Royal Scots Fusiliers the Maxim gun detachment of that regiment which had hitherto been attached to the Kurram Moveable Column.

The same day Brigadier-General Gaselee's force moved in two columns towards Khanki Bazar, which it reached on December 4th, and where it met a convoy of supplies from Karappa, escorted by a half squadron 18th Bengal Lancers, the 30th Punjab Infantry, the 2nd Punjab Infantry, No. 1 Company, Bengal Sappers and Miners, and the Kashmir Mountain Battery, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel F. C. Maisey.

The 2nd Punjab Infantry joined Brigadier-General Gaselee's force at Khanki Bazar and proceeded to Bagh, where it replaced the 15th Sikhs in the 3rd Brigade. The convoy, with the remainder of the escort, returned on December 5th to Karappa, whence the 30th Punjab Infantry, No. 1 Company, Bengal Sappers and Miners, the 21st Madras Pioneers, and the Nabha Imperial Service Infantry moved to Mastura and joined the 1st Division, the post at Karappa being then evacuated.

The Mamuzai section of the Orakzais gave in their submission on the 5th, and since that date the terms of the Government of India have been fully complied with by every section of the tribe.

On December 5th, I proceeded with Brigadier-General Gaselee's force to the Chingakh Pass (7,700 feet in elevation), which I crossed the same day, reaching the camp at Bagh on the 6th. No opposition was met with while passing through the Mamuzai country, but on re-entering Afridi Tirah shots were exchanged with the Kambar Khels to the north of the pass.

4. Here I may mention that on November 7th, Colonel Hill made a reconnaissance in force from Sadr through the Khurmana defile to Hissar, in order to explore the ground through which his column would move in the event of operations being subsequently undertaken against the Chamkannis. The following troops accompanied him:

Central India Horse, 100 lances, mounted.

Central India Horse, 100 lances, dismounted.

12th Bengal Infantry, 100 rifles.

1st Battalion, 5th Gurkhas, 250 rifles.

Kapurthala Imperial Service Infantry, 100 rifles.

Kurram Militia, 400 rifles.

Maxim gun detachment, 1st Battalion, Royal Scots Fusiliers.

The defile was found to be seven miles in length and passable for cavalry; and the enemy, being taken by surprise, did not oppose the advance.

On the return of the column to Sadr on the afternoon of the same day, the enemy, who meanwhile had collected in considerable numbers, followed up the rear guard, but, being driven back with heavy loss by the 5th Gurkhas, discontinued their attack, and the last five miles were traversed without a shot being fired. Our casualties, so far as known at the time, consisted of 2 native soldiers killed and 4 wounded, but the next day the officer commanding the Kapurthala Imperial Service Infantry reported that one native officer and 35 men of his regiment were missing. It appears that a picquet of the above strength had been directed to occupy a hill on the flank of the column, and when recalled by signal, which was duly acknowledged, it moved off to join the rear guard. Taking what the native officer must have believed to be a short cut, the men became entangled in difficult ground, and found their further progress blocked by a jungle fire which had been lighted early in the day. They turned back to regain the road by which they had ascended the hill, but the enemy had discovered their predicament, and assembling in strength succeeded in shooting down the whole party. Owing to the nature of the ground and the smoke of the burning grass, this unfortunate occurrence took place unseen and unheard by the rear guard; and as all were reported present to Colonel Hill, he knew nothing of what had happened until the following day.

5. During my absence in the Orakzai country, nothing of importance had taken place at Bagh or in Mastura. Foraging parties continued to go out from these camps, but met with hardly any opposition. In consequence, however, of the non-compliance of the Afridis with the prescribed conditions, the defences of a large number of the Malikdin and Kambar Khel villages to the west of Bagh were destroyed on December 5th and the following day. Meanwhile, the heavy baggage of the troops in Tirah had been sent back to Shinaori with a view to its transfer to Peshawar, where I was about to establish a fresh base. The telegraph line had also been dismantled between Bagh and Shinaori, and all troops and stores on the line of communication were withdrawn to the latter place. The weather, which throughout the period under report had been fine, though cold, now began to show unmistakeable signs of breaking up, and I determined to lose no time in evacuating Tirah and in moving the Main Column to the vicinity of Peshawar, whence I proposed to operate against the Afridi settlements in the lower Bara and Bazar valleys, and to re-occupy the Khyber.

My dispositions were as follows :—

The 1st Division to march down the Mastura valley, destroying on the way the defences of the Aka Khel villages in the Waran valley. Thence to cross the Sapri pass, and join the 2nd Division near Barkai or Bara Fort.

The 2nd Division to march to Dwatoi, where the Kuki Khel settlements in the Rajgal valley could be dealt with, and thence down the Bara valley to Barkai.

The Peshawar Column had hitherto remained in the vicinity of Peshawar. I now directed Brigadier-General Hammond, commanding this column, whose troops were quartered at Ilm Gudr, to advance to Barkai on or about December 8th, and there to select camping grounds and store supplies for the Main Column, besides improving the roads between Barkai and Bara Fort. On my arrival at Barkai on December 14th, I found that my instructions on these heads had been carried out most thoroughly.

The troops moved as follows :—

On December 7th, I marched to Dwatoi with the 4th Brigade, the Gurkha Scouts, the divisional troops of the 2nd Division, except No. 9 Mountain Battery, Royal Artillery, which was attached to the 3rd Brigade, the divisional staff of the 2nd Division, and a portion of the army staff of the force.
